RUSSIAN EFFORT TO DEPRESS PRICE OF STERLING CHECKED

Great Britain and United States Use Stabilization Funds to Prevent Collapse of Foreign Exchanges—Plan to Devalue French Franc Seen as Aid to World Trade

(By The Canadian Press)

EYES of the financial world watched anxiously Saturday as France, supported by Great Britain and the United States, moved to lift its currency from the precarious pedestal of gold. While France was ready to abandon the gold standard, two other gold bloc countries, Switzerland and the Netherlands, announced their currencies would be realigned in keeping with France's monetary standard adjustment.

Great Britain and the United States stood by their accord with France to maintain international currency stability during the franc's transition from the precious metal base.

USE STABILIZATION FUNDS

Great Britain was generally credited with protecting the franc through its stabilization fund before the foreign exchange markets closed today. The United States was credited by Secretary of the States Treasury Morgenthau with giving support to the pound sterling when Russia dumped one million pounds on the unstable market Saturday.

Some of the United States Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund was used in the foreign exchange markets yesterday as Premier Blum's Government in Paris whipped into shape its plan to slice perhaps as much as a third from the value of the franc.

Secretary Morgenthau said that no sooner had the gentlemen's

REVISION OF PACT SOUGHT

Minister of Trade to Visit Antipodes—Progress Slow With German Treaty

(Special to The Colonist)

OTTAWA, Sept. 26.—The Canadian delegation to the Antipodes to negotiate revision of the Canada-Australia and Canada-New Zealand trade agreements will be composed of Trade Minister William Euler, assisted by L. D. Wilgress, director of Canadian Intelligence Commercial Service, and J. S. Macdonald, of the External Affairs Department, it was officially announced tonight.

Mr. Euler said the delegation would leave Ottawa about the end of next month. It would depend on the exact date of their departure as to whether the sailing would be from Vancouver or San Francisco, but the Minister expected the sailing would be from the Canadian port as he desired to familiarize himself with operations of the line to Australasia.

OBJECT OF JOURNEY

"The main object is the question of revision with Australia, although there also will be the subject of changes in trade treatment as between Canada and New Zealand under discussion," Mr. Euler stated.

Both Antipodean countries have expressed a desire for a greater share of the world's exports into Canada. A number of Canadian exporters also have been pressing upon the Government their request the doors should be opened wider

PREMIER WILL FINISH TOURS

Government Leader to Inspect Fraser Valley and East Coast of Island

Premier Pattullo will set out on Tuesday on an official tour of the Fraser Valley, going into the Interior on one side of the Fraser River, and returning on the other. This will be followed in the week after by a tour of several communities on the east coast of Vancouver Island. Both trips will be made by motor.

Completing business from his recent flying trip over the West Coast of Vancouver Island yesterday, the Premier sent a gift to Chief Joseph and Queen Mary of the Clayoquot Indians, at Tofino. Chief Joseph and his wife received the Premier and his party with great hospitality on their recent visit, and will now have a set of framed photographs, in colors, as a memento of the occasion.

PREMIER'S GIFT

One photograph is an excellent camera study of Chief Joseph and Queen Mary, the former wearing his tribal headdress and the latter adorned with the necklace of glass vials which caught the eye of the camera man in the Premier's party. The other picture is a group photograph of the Premier, surrounded by the reception committee at Tofino, including Chief Joseph and Queen Mary, with their son and other tribal dignitaries.

When he has completed the impending tours, the Premier will have covered every riding in the province personally since last Spring. For much of the route he flew, setting an example in confidence in air travel as a fast, commodious and convenient method of reaching British Columbia points in a few hours' time from the provincial capital.

Conservative Leader Will Visit North

VANCOUVER, Sept. 26 (CP).—Dr. Frank P. Paterson, provincial leader of the Conservative party, will leave shortly on a tour of Northern British Columbia, it was announced today at a meeting of the executive committee of the British Columbia Conservative Association.

Points to be visited by Dr. Paterson on the speaking tour were not mentioned in the brief announcement. No definite date has been set for the departure of the provincial Conservative leader.

Ladysmith Observes Important Event

Yesterday afternoon civic officials and citizens of Ladysmith gathered in the public square to formally proclaim the city free of bonded indebtedness. The last of the city's redeemed bonds were placed in an urn and burned. The city was also presented with a new flag pole and a Union Jack. In the above group are members of the present city council, reading from left to right, standing, Alderman Walter Joyce, Alderman William Cullum, City Clerk N. A. Morrison, Aldermen J. D. Giavando, Walter Steele and J. W. Atkinson. Mayor W. W. Walkem is seated in front of the group.

Redeemed Bonds Burned In Public Square When Ladysmith Free of Debt

FUTURE FOR CITY IS EXCEEDINGLY BRIGHT

(Special to The Colonist)

LADYSMITH, Sept. 26.—This city, which never lost heart, turned out en masse to bid farewell to its bonded indebtedness and face a new course, and a future attractive with larger possibilities. In a ceremony unique in the history of British Columbia cities, Ladysmith publicly burned its redeemed debentures, dedicated a new flag pole symbolic of hope for the future, and accepted and reverently unfurled a new Union Jack as an emblem of its reborn spirit.

With hundreds of citizens and visitors, some of whom came from long distances, standing around a sacrificial urn of heaped stones, former Mayor R. B. Dier, John Bickle and J. Mason assisted Mayor W. W. Walkem in his task of giving the redeemed pledges of former years to the flames. Appropriately N. A. Morrison, city clerk, attended the fire.

Vancouver Man Is Held in Seattle

SEATTLE, Sept. 26 (AP).—Police arrested T. R. McKenzie, twenty-three, Vancouver, B.C., tonight and booked him for reckless driving after an automobile collision in which three persons were injured severely.

McKenzie's automobile struck another car occupied by Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Stiles and their son, Jerry, three, police said.

Receive Injuries When Ambulance Plunges Into Basement

VANCOUVER, Sept. 26 (CP).—A two-man ambulance crew narrowly escaped tonight when, speeding to a call, their heavy machine skidded, mounted the sidewalk and crashed into the basement of a house in the Fairview residential district. Driver George Connolly and Attendant Ernest Cotter escaped with cuts about the neck and face. Connolly is being detained at a hospital but Cotter was allowed to proceed home after being treated for his wounds. The ambulance was speeding to take a sick person to hospital and skidded on loose gravel at a street intersection. The machine tore a hole in the basement wall of the house and itself was considerably wrecked.

Shanghai Anxious But Calm as More Troops Near City

New International Incidents Feared as Eight Japanese Destroyers Approach Port With Additional Marines—Navy Reduces Patrols in Foreign Sections—Old Issue Revived

(Copyright, 1936, by The Associated Press)

SHANGHAI, Sept. 27.—Eight Japanese destroyers, loaded with marines, neared anxious Shanghai today. Outwardly, the residents of the international metropolis were calm, but in official circles apprehension was heightened over possible recurrence of Japanese-Chinese "incidents" in the international settlement.

In reply, the Japanese naval leaders pressed for more Japanese on the International Settlement police force—a long-debated issue in Shanghai.

RENEW THEIR PROTESTS

Japanese consular officials in Shanghai earlier renewed their protests that the killing of a Japanese and the wounding of his two comrades has demonstrated that the Chinese authorities were incapable of protecting foreigners' lives.

TWO PERSONS BITTEN BY DOG

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Veals Painfully Injured by Own Entry in Show

Terrified by his first appearance among a crowd, Skipper, a junior male Boston bull terrier, severely bit his owner, Arthur Veals, 3245 Harriet Road, during the Vancouver Island Dog Fanciers' Association Show at the Crystal Garden yesterday morning. The dog suddenly turned on Mr. Veals and inflicted deep and painful bites on his left wrist and arm. They were cauterized to prevent infection.

Mrs. Maude E. Veals, Arthur Veals' wife, was also severely bitten by the same dog in the afternoon. When Skipper was placed in the judging ring, he attempted to fight with another dog of the same breed. In trying to force the two dogs apart, Mrs. Veals received a deep bite in the left wrist. Mrs. A. T. Hayward, 20 Gorge Road, pried the dog's teeth apart with great difficulty.

Although officials of the Dog Fanciers' Association asserted the dog was definitely not "mad," it was deemed wise to have it destroyed.

COL. WEBB TO RUN AGAIN

WINNIPEG, Sept. 27 (CP). — Col. Ralph H. Webb, eight times mayor of Winnipeg, will seek a ninth term in the November 27 civic elections.

VICTORIA GIRL DIES OF INJURY

LADYSMITH, Sept. 26 — Miss Cicely Nelson, of Victoria, seriously hurt a week ago in an automobile accident on the Island Highway near here, succumbed to her injuries this morning in the general hospital here on September 19. She suffered a severe concussion, and despite an emergency operation, died without regaining consciousness.

Sunday would have marked her twenty-fifth birthday.

An inquest will be held into the causes and nature of the car accident that ended in the fatality. W. R. Daykin, of Victoria, was the driver of the car, which turned over and was completely demolished. John McIver, who sustained a fractured shoulder is making good progress.

THREE INJURED IN BOAT EXPLOSION

Three Others Hurled Into Lake Union, When Blast Damages Auxiliary Sloop

SEATTLE, Sept. 26 (AP).—An explosion aboard the twenty-six-foot auxiliary sloop Marmetta in Lake Union tonight burned two men and a woman on their faces and slightly damaged the boat.

Mr. and Mrs. Coart and Miss Dorothy Sloan, sitting atop the cabin, were blown into the lake and swam ashore.

Firemen extinguished the flames after Bryant checked them with a fire extinguisher. The explosion apparently was caused by the carburetor flooding and a spark igniting gasoline fumes, firemen said.

New Members Will Open Debate When Legislature Meets

Government Gives Spotlight to Mark Connelly, M.P.P., and Howard Forrester, M.P.P., as Winners of By-Elections—Four-Week Session

COMPLETING the last formal act precedent to a session, the Provincial Government conveyed to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, yesterday the recommendation that the Legislature be summoned on October 27 for the dispatch of public business. Proclamation summoning all Members of the House from Atlin to Fernie will follow in due course.

Making plans for the session, Premier Pattullo announced that the Government would throw its two latest supporters into the debate on the first working day, October 28. Mark Connelly, Liberal member-elect for Omineca, will move, and Howard Forrester Liberal member-elect for one of two seats in Burrard will second the address in reply to the speech from His Honor.

A four-week session, with the budget for 1937-38 and some degree of municipal aid as its chief considerations, is expected to follow.

MAIDEN SPEECHES

Both Mr. Connelly and Mr. Forrester will be heard in their maiden speeches, undertaking the delicate task of reflecting the mind of the Government in particulars that may not be expressly touched upon in His Honor's speech.

REMAINING DEFENDERS OF ALCAZAR FORTRESS SAVED

Insurgent Planes Rain Bombs All Day on City of Bilbao

LISBON, Portugal, Sept. 27 (AP). — The Portuguese Radio Club announced early today it had received information a Spanish Fascist column had entered Toledo and rescued the insurgents and their families in the old Alcazar fortress.

"The Alcazar defenders had held out against Government bombardment and assaults for nearly ten weeks. Even dynamite blasts had not forced them out, but their number, originally estimated at 1,700, was reported reduced to about 600." The radio club said it learned Toledo, which is about forty-five miles south of Madrid, had been attacked by four columns marching along the roads from Madrid, Torrijos and Moregon and that south of the Tagus River.

The Radio Club declared it was officially informed President Manual Azana of Spain had asked the Argentine Charge D'Affaires in Madrid whether he and other members of the Government could find refuge at the Embassy and be transported to the Argentine Cruise De Mayo at Alicante if the situation became desperate.

(This report was similar to one for Buenos Aires.)

Azana had asked whether he and the other officials could be taken aboard the cruiser to Marseille, France, if they decided on seeking refuge aboard it, the Radio Club declared.

NAVAL BATTLE EXPECTED

(By the Associated Press)

The first naval battle of the Spanish civil war appeared imminent today as naval authorities in bombshattered Bilbao reported five Government warships were steaming at full speed toward ports blockaded by Fascist vessels along Spain's northern Bay of Biscay shore.

The Madrid Government asserted that strenuous land and air counter-attacks were launched against the Toledo attackers yesterday, and that one Moorish column was "annihilated".

Menacing Forest Fires Raging in North California

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 26 (AP).—Forest and brush fires cast a black pall of destruction over Northern California tonight as the State recruited emergency forces to battle the spreading flames in a dozen counties. The pioneer settlement of Oregon House, former stage station on the Marysville-Comptonville Road, was wiped out. A hotel, postoffice, store and eight homes went up in flames.

Duncan Man Is Injured by Angry Bull

DUNCAN, Sept. 26 (CP). — B. C. Walker, president of the Cowichan Agricultural Society, was recovering today from injuries received when he was attacked by an infuriated bull on the farm of F. J. Bishop.

Walker suffered ten broken ribs and severe bruises when the bull he was leading from the farm suddenly turned and bore him to the ground. Two farm hands used a piece of iron to save Walker from serious injury.

MORE COAL IS MINED IN B.C.

Production Gains 15 Per Cent in Eight Months of Current Year

British Columbia coal mining gained in excess of 15 per cent in production for the first eight months this year, compared with corresponding tonnage for the period January to August in 1935, provincial reports showed yesterday. The output was 891,675 long tons, compared with 757,176 long tons in the previous period.

Vancouver Island mines were responsible for a good deal of the gain, sharing in a definite pick-up in the offshore trade in bunker coal, which in itself was an indication of increased shipping.

While the coal industry was establishing an encouraging degree of recovery, provincial efforts to inquire into the comparative positions of coal and fuel oil proceeded.

B.C. COMMISSION

On November 29, 1934, the province named Mr. Justice M. A. Macdonald at the head of a royal commission to investigate costs and profits in the fuel industry. C. H. O'Halloran acted as chief counsel to the inquiry, which took evidence at several points in the province and also further afield.

The report of the royal commission may be presented to the Legislature at the coming session, Premier Pattullo intimated yesterday.

FIRE RAGES IN BANDON

Oregon Town of 1,500 Inhabitants Is Turned Into Fierce Inferno

MARSHFIELD, Ore., Sept. 26 (AP).—Bandon, thirty-eight miles south of here, was reported on fire tonight as savage forest blazes turned two counties into a raging inferno. Telephone connections between here and the besieged town were broken when Bandon telephone operators received orders to leave their posts. The town has a population of about 1,500.

Fire equipment was being rushed to Bandon from Marshfield and Coquille.

PREPARING TO FLEE

District Coast Guard headquarters at Seattle said it had received a telegram from the Coast Guard at Bandon, Ore., stating fire out of control was destroying the town and preparations were being made to move the residents across the Coquille River.

The telegram did not say how the fire started or how much of the town had burned. Coast Guard headquarters said:

Throughout the two counties fires were destroying hundreds of acres of timberland as more than a thousand C.C.C. men and other workers battled the flames. Eight stage loads of men from Portland passed through here en route to the various fronts.

Gold Beach, thirty miles south of Bandon and the largest town in Curry County, was inaccessible from both north and south on the coast highway and Siskiyou national forest headquarters reported it could not be reached by telephone.

Minor Violence In Strike Centre

SALINAS, Calif., Sept. 26 (AP)—Minor violence marked the twenty-fourth day of the Salinas lettuce workers' strike today as union officials awaited the next step in mediation efforts.

Several non-union workers were beaten in Watsonville, where some of the seventy lettuce sheds involved in the strike are located.

Death Valley Scotty Building Big Bath With Desert's Gold

"We got half a million gold in the pot, and I guess I'll go ahead and finish things," he said.

SPENT $2,381,000

There has been no construction work at this castle, in the most desolate region of the United States, for six years. Scotty and his partner Albert Ussey Johnson, of Chicago, halted work after $2,381,000 had been spent. That was in 1930.

This Summer he bought a new

TEXAS FLOODS ARE RECEDING

Sudden Rise of Swollen River Causes Fears of Further Damage

SAN ANGELO, Tex., Sept. 26 (AP).—The menacing threats of floods along the Rio Grande and in West Texas dissipated somewhat Saturday night as high waters began sinking toward normal levels.

San Angelo, in the midst of rehabilitating itself from the effects of a $5,000,000 flood a week ago, breathed easier as the North Concho River descended rapidly from the thirty-seven-foot level it reached in mid-afternoon.

Fears of further inundation in the Presidio section in the Big Bend country lessened as mountain streams lost their high water marks as they coursed eight miles eastward and into the Rio Grande.

COTTON CROP DAMAGED

The cotton crop in the Presidio Valley was about 10 per cent lost.

On the Mexican border another flood threatened a large area. Fed by streams in Northern Mexico, where heavy rains were recorded, the Rio Grande was on a rampage at Presidio.

The crest on the Mexican Rio Concho was expected to reach the Rio Grande late tonight.

ROCKING CHAIR STUNT IS ENDED

Armand Vezina Completes Long Teetering Grind in Montreal Store Window

MONTREAL, Sept. 26 (CP).—Armand Vezina achieved his goal of fifty-eight hours' rocking in an arm chair in a store window tonight and then went home to get some sleep—"and plenty of it."

After teetering back and fourth since Thursday afternoon in the hope of attracting attention to the work of the Tenants' League in Montreal for the benefit of the working class, Vezina got up dizzily and said:

"I've had enough. If people want to see me any more let them come around tomorrow."

The thirty-five-year-old native of Quebec did a stint of 146 hours in a rocking chair at Drummondville, Que., in 1931.

Spring Flower Show To Usher In Season Will Be Held Here

Novel Festival to Commence April 24—Private Gardens Will Be Opened to Public—Committee Promised Support of C.P.R.

PRELIMINARY plans for "Meeting the Spring in Victoria" were discussed at a meeting of the executive of the Vancouver Island Horticultural Association held on Friday evening. A joint committee is to be formed from the association, the Women's Business and Professional Club and the Victoria Riding Club, and this committee has been assured of the cordial support and co-operation of the C.P.R. by H. F. Mathews, general manager of the hotel system.

The plan includes the first Spring Flower Festival to be held from April 24 to May 1. An outstanding attraction will be the opening of private gardens to the public, different gardens being opened each day throughout the week of the festival. There will be a decorated table display at the Empress Hotel of the character which was so successfully inaugurated two years ago by the Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club, and this will be held on Wednesday, April 28.

FEATURES AT WILLOWS

A gymkhana and horse show will be staged at the Willows on Friday, April 30, by the Victoria Riding Club, while also at the Willows the two-day Vancouver Island Spring Flower Show will be held by the Vancouver Island Horticultural Association on Friday and Saturday, April 30 and May 1.

Other features calculated to interest Victorians and also attract visitors from parts of the continent less favored in a climatic way are being discussed and a public meeting will be called at an early date when the programme already outlined will be submitted for approval and suggestions invited for additional features, while at the same time committees will be struck to carry out the various parts of the programme.

GARDEN CONTEST AWARDS

The awards in the Vancouver Island Horticultural Association's garden competition, which was judged by E. W. White, district horticulturist, were made as follows:

The Canadian Horticultural Club's Challenge Cup for the Island's best all-round garden: V. W. Ahlers, Seaton Road, Saanich; 348 points.

The Vancouver Island Horticultural Association's gold medal for the Island's best all-round garden worked entirely by owner without paid help: A. R. Harness, Hampshire Road, 335 points.

The bronze medal for the garden not a winner in "A" or "B" and scoring the most points for flowers: Tom Stewart, Comox, 179 points.

The bronze medal for the garden not a winner in "A" and "B" scoring the most points for vegetables: George Little, Inverness Road, Saanich, 181 points.

MICROMETER IS INSTALLED HERE

Latest Scientific Innovation Brought to Store of J. Rose From Chicago

The latest innovation of science has been installed by Joseph Rose, Limited, well-known jewelers, at 1013 Government Street, in an effort to give the public an even higher standard of service. This takes the form of the new Paulson Time Micrometer from Chicago, an amazing instrument which gives the precise variations of a watch over a period of twenty-four hours in one-minute's time.

The Micrometer embodies an entirely new principle which revolutionizes the work of watch adjustment and testing. The watch is placed on a panel and the tick, magnified many times until it is comparable to the tap of a mallet, is synchronized with that of a master timepiece. The minutest variation is registered on an illuminated dial and from the reading the operator can tell to the fraction of a second what that watch will gain or lose in twenty-four hours. With this knowledge the adjustment is easily made.

This service, unique in Victoria, and offered to the public absolutely free, must prove an inestimable boon. Previously it has been necessary to leave a watch for several days at the jewelers, putting the patron to the inconvenience of being without a timepiece or carrying a borrowed watch. This is obviated by the Micrometer, the whole operation of testing and adjusting taking but a few minutes. The element of human error is removed, for the reading of the dial states beyond doubt the exact adjustment to be made.

Finds Gold Nugget as Big as Goose Egg

CARL LYKEGARD

ONCE in a lifetime—and usually not then—a placer miner comes across a nugget like this, proudly held by Carl Lykegard, of Spruce Creek, near Atlin, B.C. He brought this precious find, believed to be the biggest in Canada, to Vancouver from his diggings in the North. The nugget weighs 43 ounces 3 pennyweight and is worth $1,200 in cash. As a specimen, however, it is considered worth even more, for it is as large as a goose egg and smooth as silk from the action of some forgotten glacier. Lykegard, who has been placer mining in the Yukon, for six years, came to Canada ten years ago from Denmark.

LIP-READING TO BE SHOWN ON THURSDAY

B. S. H. Tye Will Demonstrate Aid to Hearing at Victoria High School

TEACHERS FOR NIGHT CLASSES ARE NAMED

A public demonstration of lip-reading will be given at Victoria High School on Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock in connection with a class in the subject to be held within the Evening Technical System of Victoria School Board.

B. S. H. Tye, of this city, who is a graduate teacher of lip-reading, will act as instructor. This will make the third year that Mr. Tye has taught lip-reading at the night school, the first class being organized in October, 1934. The demand for this instruction has been shown by the good registration and attendance.

Teaching of lip-reading is rapidly spreading all over the United States and Canada, and lip-reading has become recognized as a very helpful medium of conversation for those who can still hear the voice and as the only one for people with a total loss of hearing. "Anyone who has difficulty in following normal conversation will find that lip-reading trains the eye to act in co-operation with the ear and mind and gives certainty and distinction to that which is only partly heard," says Mr. Tye.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS

This year latest developments in teaching methods will be introduced to the class in conjunction with the method used in previous years. One of these developments, as taught at the University of Toronto, eliminates the tenseness which sometimes troubles the beginner; another is the latest way of establishing spontaneous conversation practice in class, which is the ultimate aim of all lesson work and teaches the student at the same time to read many different types of lip-movements. Mr. Tye also plans to give exercises to train the eye and ear to work together for those in the class who can hear the sound of the voice.

The class at Victoria High School will be divided into groups, students being advanced to the next group as soon as their progress warrants. Lessons for all groups will be held twice a week, on Monday and Thursday evenings.

CLASS INSTRUCTORS

Miss Mae Murray and Miss Betty Sledge, continuation classes; J. E. Hamilton, preliminary commercial course; Ernest Simpson, elementary bookkeeping; A. B. McNeill, advanced bookkeeping; John Moulson and J. J. McKim, elementary shorthand; W. H. Gropp, advanced shorthand; Miss Olive Lynn, typewriting; John Ketter, modern merchandising; R. P. Goldfinch and A. H. Marrion, woodwork; G. Anstey, sheet metal drafting; Norman Sinister, and Mr. Anstey, sheet metal work; L. Omundsen, machine shop practice; A. D. Robertson, machine construction and drawing; Fred Butterfield, practical mathematics; W. J. Frampton, automobile course; Robert Hutchison, electrical course; E. J. Cox and G. R. Barbour, applied electricity and armature winding; O. Kendall, radio; T. Moffett and Clyde Hawthorne, Diesel engines; Mr. Moffett, steam engines; Ralph Berrill, building construction and architectural drawing; Ernest Eve, aviation ground course.

ART COURSES

Art course instructors include Mrs. Ina Uhthoff, design; J. S. McMillan and H. W. Standi, lettering and commercial art; W. Menelaws, figure drawing and anatomy; A. Checkley, painting; Mr. Bridgman and Mrs. M. Grute, pottery and design; Mr. Checkley, course in fine arts.

Household economics instructors are Miss Iris Garnett, elementary and advanced cooking; home nursing and hygiene, Miss K. Ringshaw, and dressmaking, Mrs. L. Gibson. An afternoon class is also held in the subject.

Languages will be taught by Madame A. B. Vivenot, French; T. A. H. Clarke, Spanish; and Mrs. Uyeda, Japanese.

Instructors in special subjects are Dr. Clem Davies, public speaking; Mrs. N. de B. L. Shaw, short story writing; G. Browne-Cave, matriculation subjects; Mr. Tye, lip-reading; G. H. E. Green, band instruction; S. F. Bulley, music appreciation; John A. Grant, ornamental horticulture; Miss Phone Riddle, elementary descriptive astronomy; S. P. Birley, architectural engineering; and Mrs. Wilfrid Ord, F.T.C.L., elocution.

front, however, messaged that the insurgent columns were digging in less than five miles from Toledo preparatory to a final effort to reach their besieged comrades in the Alcazar Fortress before it was too late.

Fascist commanders, confident that their disciplined forces would defeat speedily the estimated motley Government force of 10,000 men, declared that Madrid itself would be their next objective.

The insurgent strategy was declared by Fascist leaders to centre on junction of the Toledo and Madrid attackers for a final assault on Madrid in an effort to win the Spanish civil war before Winter sets in.

In the northeastern coastal sector next to France, insurgent war planes for the second day rained death and destruction on the enraged inhabitants of Government-held Bilbao.

The bombardment lasted all day, while the maddened populace ran through the streets shrieking for the city's leaders to let them at the 4,000 hostages held there.

SAYS SITUATION IMPROVED

The statesman said he had talked by telephone with his Premier, Francisco Largo Caballero, who told him that reports President Azana was ready to flee Madrid were "absurd."

into Australia and New Zealand for Canadian merchandise. The pact with New Zealand has been renewed until September 30, 1937, while the agreement with Australia is in operation for an indefinite period, subject to six months' notice of cancellation by either party.

In the interim, considerable progress is expected to be made in negotiations for a new trade agreement with Germany. Dr. H. R. Hemmen, of the German Foreign Office in Berlin, will be back from a week-end visit in Montreal for further discussions with Canadian trade officials. While the process may be somewhat slow, there is every confidence the basis of a new pact will be eventually reached.

"Dollar for dollar" is the Hitler formula for trade, with Germany sending out principally manufactured products and accepting mainly raw materials in return. Canadian regulations which put in the Customs Statute consideration of wages paid and of depreciation of European currency are not palatable to German consumption, but it is indicated Canada has no indication of ameliorating them.

Efforts will be made next week to establish a line of products of each country that may be brought within the intermediate tariff schedules for import into Canada and within a specific agreement where export into Germany is compatible. In any agreement, the terms of the British Conference pacts will be respected, except where the British Government agrees to changes in the margin of preference thereby granted. The uncertainty of the currency situation in France is said to have complicated negotiations to a minimum extent, but there is no rupture and both the Berlin delegation and Canadian trade officials are eager to renew their negotiations. Canadian officials are very hopeful of obtaining an increased market for manufactured Canadian products.

DENVER, Sept. 26 (AP).—Winter rode into the Rocky Mountain area today on snow, rain, dust and wind storms which caused two deaths in Denver last night. Snow blanketed a large part of Wyoming today, ranging from one inch at Rock Springs to seven inches at Casper. The northeast section of the state escaped the first Winter fall. Snow fell throughout most of Northeastern Colorado but melted rapidly.

New Course to Be Introduced

Retailing, Advertising and Selling To Be Subject of Classes

An elementary course in retailing, advertising and selling will be introduced for the first time this Fall at the Victoria City Night School. This is especially recommended for young men and women starting out in this field, who are at the present time employed in some branch of the selling business. The following is a brief outline of the combination course:

Retailing: Personnel, duties, the buyer's job, service, credit, store arithmetic, merchandise, stock control, the customer, etc.

From time to time prominent business men in these fields will be invited to address the class. Classes begin on Thursday, October 1. Mr. John Ketter has been appointed to conduct this class.

Registration may be made at the following offices:

School Board Office, City Hall, at any time during office hours up to and including Thursday, October 1, 1936; School Board Office, City Hall, in the evenings, 7 to 9:30, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, September 28, 29, 30; High School, Fernwood Road, Thursday, October 1, opening night, 7:30 o'clock; Boys' Central School, Yates Street.

Mr. George Breadner, city supervisor of technical education, will be at the School Board office, City Hall, every afternoon except Saturday, from 4 to 5 o'clock, to answer inquiries concerning these classes.

EFFORT TO DEPRESS STERLING CHECKED

agreement been reached between France, England and the United States to preserve equilibrium during the readjustment of the franc than the Bank of Russia stepped into the foreign exchange markets and offered 1,000,000 pounds sterling "at any price."

Since declines in the pound in terms of the dollar have frequently had a depressing effect upon the American price level, Morgenthau quickly bought the sterling offered and the British currency, which had been declining in unofficial dealings, recovered.

EXTREMISTS CONDEMN

While Premier Blum hopes for speedy acceptance of the devaluation plan, to be submitted to an extraordinary session of Parliament tomorrow, extreme Right and Left wings of French politics were quick to condemn it, and the man in the street, perplexed, wondered if the cost of living would rise.

French officials hoped disorder would be avoided.

Exchange dealings were temporarily suspended in the world's leading markets, although in unofficial dealings in Wall Street French francs were sharply lower, British pounds and Holland guilders were down moderately.

NEW ERA STABILITY

Although it was a week-end holiday in the London Stock Exchange, and foreign exchange dealings were suspended, London financial authorities were cheerful. They look for a gradual realignment of minor world currencies with the dollar, pound and franc, opening the way to a new era of stability and increased trade.

Switzerland quickly decided to follow the lead of France, and called a meeting of the Swiss Parliament for tomorrow to consider reduction of the value of the Swiss currency.

NEW MEN TO OPEN DEBATE IN HOUSE

During the session, Attorney-General Sloan will leave for London, England, to argue British Columbia British Columbia's protest against cases before the judicial committee of the Privy Council. One is farm loan revision.

After the session, the Government will wait for some declaration from the Motherland to see if it will be necessary or not to arrange for British Columbia representation at the Coronation in May, 1937. So far nothing has been heard here on the subject, although if an invitation were expressed to the several provinces, British Columbia would undoubtedly respond.

Oil Drillers Find Nuggets in Hole

OXNARD, Calif., Sept. 26 (AP).—Drilling a well near here an oil company headed by John Hays Hammond, Jr., struck not only oil but gold.

At 180 feet the core barrel brought up a gold nugget and subsequently two others, the three having a total value of $11. Geologists explain this area has been built up by silt and gravel carried by the Santa Clara River and the gold-bearing rock came from mountains miles distant.

Tribesmen Indulge in Rough Game

MANILA, P.I., Sept. 26 (AP).—The Igorots of the Philippines play rough. In fact they get so rough at times that their play takes a toll of life and many cracked skulls.

Recently, two Bontoc tribes decided to adjourn to a dry river bed and indulge in a friendly game—the throwing of good sized rocks at each other. While the game was at its height members of both tribes became unruly. Before the constabulary men in the mountains got control of the situation two of the tribesmen were dead and a number injured.

Campaign Going Well Red Cross Canvassers' Reports Show to Date

Public Sympathetic to Present Appeal, and 12 Per Cent of Total Has Already Been Subscribed, Headquarters Officers State

"THE Red Cross campaign is going well, and already twelve per cent of the amount we hope for has been subscribed, with a great many reports still to come in," reported Hugh M. Birch-Jones, British Columbia commissioner, in his concise summary last evening of the opening day's results of the present canvass for $15,000.

The idea of the campaign is being sympathetically received, and numbers of those who have been approached and have not yet been able to give have asked the canvassers to call back again.

E. W. McMullen, vice-chairman of the campaign advisory committee, had had very reassuring experiences. In talking to people about the campaign and its object, he had found everyone ready to say a good word for the Red Cross. Personally he had met with immediate response in connection with all the people he had canvassed, receiving prompt subscriptions.

JUNIOR RED CROSS

Scattered about the walls and tables of the campaign headquarters, 637 Fort Street, are many little evidences of what is being done by the Junior Red Cross, particularly among crippled children.

The Junior Red Cross has 538 branches in British Columbia, with a total membership of more than 14,000 in this province.

This is part of an international organization with a membership of 16,000,000, whose banner slogan is "Health, service, good citizenship, and international friendliness." Funds are needed to carry on this work, as well as to finance the outpost hospitals, the nurses who are working in the pioneer settlements of the province, and the many first-aid stations that have been established along the highways, in lumber camps, and elsewhere.

SERVICE FOR OTHERS

This same organization also appeals very strongly to the natural benevolence of children. It provides a practical channel through which they can do this, and in British Columbia, as elsewhere in Canada, the efforts of the Juniors, as already mentioned, are usually concentrated on work for crippled children.

By means of small sums of money contributed to this fund, money which the children earn themselves either by saving or by collecting through entertainments and other sources, the Junior Red Cross organization of Canada has been able to supply necessary treatment for 10,734 handicapped children whose parents could not afford to pay for it.

The Junior Red Cross contributions in British Columbia look after six crippled children and supply a large number of other children with glasses, surgical braces to support a crippled back or limb, and many other medical necessaries.

"STRUCK HOME"

One of the canvassers found a very sympathetic listener to this aspect of the work, and discovered that it "struck home" because of an actual case of a crippled child in the subscriber's family.

Besides the work of contributing to the crippled children's fund, the Juniors do many other kinds of service in their own schools and communities. The cleaning of schools and school yards, the supplying of individual towels and drinking cups, the organizing of hot school lunches, the ventilation of classrooms are a few of these activities. Making garments for babies and children, toys and scrapbooks for children in hospital, bringing fruit or valentines to invalids in the community, these are but a part of the fine work that the children of British Columbia are learning to undertake through their organization.

"As One Newspaperman to Another"

Bound for Vancouver and the Orient, Lord Rothermere, the British newspaper magnate, took a walk in down-town Regina while his train stopped for twenty minutes. Meeting three newsboys, he purchased a newspaper and two five-cent magazines—one from each boy—paid each with a five-dollar bill and strolled off. The picture shows the excited boys, Norman Ursel, Paul Kosh and Fred Ursel.

"The tile alone for the swimming hole cost $30,000. It's all here, has been here six years. See it piled over there? Most of it came from Spain.

"There are 15,000 turquoise blue tiles in ten-inch blocks for the sides and bottom. We got all the fancy tile too for the Spanish benches and the walk around the pool.

"The centre bridge will have four fountains and we got all the gadgets, statues, pipes, drainage and filterage system and everything for the whole job here.

"The full cost of this swimming hole is about $200,000. But all we need to finish it is the labor."

"We hope these administrations comply with our desires, which any reasonable person would consider reasonable. In the event they do not, we will be forced to reply with our own efforts."

MURDER CASE UP ON APPEAL

V. Macchione Condemned to Death Will Have His Trial Reviewed

In the Court of Appeal on Monday, two criminal appeals, Rex vs. Macchione and Rex vs. Grace Wilson, will be heard.

In the first-named appeal, Vincent Macchione is appealing from conviction for the murder of Michael Hudock, near Fernie. Execution was deferred to allow the case to come before the Appeal Court. The appeal book was prepared at the expense of the Crown and also counsel for the prisoner, J. R. Nicholson, A. D. Macfarlane, K.C., will appear for the Crown.

BASIS OF CASE

Macchione and Hudock had quarrelled, and Rudock's body was later found over an embankment about four miles from Fernie. Identification of an automobile seen in the vicinity was brought into the case, evidence at the trial showed.

The appeal is taken on the ground the defence was not placed as fully before the jury at the trial as was the prosecution. It is further argued that the jury was not instructed it might bring in a verdict of manslaughter.

AGAINST JURY PANEL

Another ground is that the jury was not properly empanelled and that all residents of the electoral district, in which the offence was charged, had been improperly excluded from the jury panel.

The appeal of Grace Wilson is from a decision of Police Magistrate H. S. Wood, of Vancouver, who found the appellant guilty of stealing a pair of pyjamas. She was sentenced to six months with hard labor. The appeal is from sentence and conviction. C. L. McAlpine appears for the appellant and Carew Martin for the Crown.

ECONOMIES, NOT MORE TAXES

Mr. Charles Dunning, the Federal Finance Minister, forecasts that taxation will have to be increased. It would be more to the purpose, and infinitely more promising for a full return of normal conditions, if economies in government were to be effected, and in this country tens of millions of dollars could be saved in this way annually. All our latter-day politicians seem to think in terms of increased taxation. They are the apostles of spendthrift zeal, and because of this the return of prosperity is being postponed.

In the great majority of cases wherever there are evidences of better times these are ensuing despite governments and not because of anything that is done in an administrative way. Most assuredly increased taxation in the Dominion is not the way to happier times. In a country which has a suffocating burden of government, with too many provinces and provincial administrations and municipalities that have expended beyond their credit, the main task should be to reduce the paraphernalia of administration and organize it on a business basis. Mr. Dunning is an astute Minister of Finance, but he has taken a sad view of the ability that should be possessed by one in his position when he suggests that this tax-ridden country should add to its incubus.

MORE THAN CONQUERORS

There is a gospel of victory that is the left motif of the New Testament, for running throughout its story of the life of Christ, the Acts of the Apostles, the Epistles, and finally up to the Revelation, emphasis is laid repeatedly on that master term "to overcome," showing that conquest and victory express the high ideal of the Christian life. The New Testament is rich with the most gracious promises for the soul that overcomes. It is not a matter of physical strength but of spiritual ascendancy. The message of victory, of present and future triumph, is not offered alone to those who know themselves to be strong, but to all who realize they are weak.

A notable sermon was once preached by Dr. James Black on the theme of "The True Superman." He admits that in the struggle for the Christian victory there are pitfalls on all sides; with some men and women there are desperate tussles to be faced, fearful odds to be encountered, a terrible array of besetting temptations. There is heredity, there is environment, there is the ridicule of friends; sometimes what are regarded as obstacles, such as social and educational disadvantages, seem to stand in the way, and to all of those so beset the task of the maintenance of loyalty to Christ by a watchfulness that is unceasing is in the nature of an unrelenting struggle. Those who manage to keep their feet and stand amid "leaping devils" deserve all honor.

The Christian faith, however, offers to those who can discern it, infinite resources of strength and power, resources which are more than adequate and which can enable anyone who avails himself of them to win a victory that is not merely scraping through. St. Paul's view of the Christian victory was that it makes us "more than conquerors," which means to conquer excessively, abundantly, and with a great deal to spare. This victory gives ease, it gives surety, it leaves the impression of a large unexhausted power unexpended, what may be called something "in hand." That, says Dr. Black, whatever the Christian practice may be is the Christian ideal, for those who are one with Christ do not fight alone with their own might but with the power of the Omnipotent. It is by Him and in Him and through Him that it is possible to conquer excessively.

In order to envisage the type of victory that is characterized as excessive, and translated from the original Greek as "more than conquerors," it is necessary to bring it into contact, not with any particular sphere or department of living, but with the whole sweep of human life. That is how the Christian ideal must be expressed to connote one who lives as fully as possible "on the plane of mind and soul which was Christ's." It is an ideal capable of attainment, for otherwise it would not be worth the preaching, and least of all to broken men and women in this world of ours. The perfect way to conquer evil is to have the heart set only on good, for thus the insistent appeal of temptation is banished. Dr. Black asks, how is this ideal to be achieved? He answers—"one might mention this or that, one might add counsel to counsel, but it all amounts to this. I prophesy this overwhelming victory, be the temptation what it may, for that man who is so close to Jesus that he can say with the Apostle, 'I live yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life that I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me.' And the perfect thing is to be able to add, like him, 'I do not frustrate the grace of God.'"

Religion in any man's heart does not originate with himself, though it becomes for him what he makes it. Its origins, its activities and its consummation are in God. If it is to afford the ideal of more than conquering it must be accepted with all the powers that it offers and involves; it demands the whole of manhood, for it never can be a matter of occasional concern if it is to lead to perennial conviction. Most of the failures in promoting life's happiness are due to a lack of a keen spiritual hunger. There are half-wishes, there are cautiously restricted aspirations which lack the driving force of faith and are not dictated by a passionate desire for God and His Kingdom. It is those who hunger and thirst after righteousness and make their every motive the replenishment of their souls who shall be filled. Ever before their eyes they must keep both the fact and the problem of life against the background of the redemption and the Redeemer.

Those who would be more than conquerors must have sincerity in their love of the ideal. That ideal, too, must be the direct motive and purpose of their lives, and it must be followed independent of whatever loss or gain may result. It is something that dominates every conscious act, that spurs on every unsleeping instinct, that even uses powers that once hurt for victory. The fight of faith is the conquest of the lower nature, the killing of the animal in man. Its lexicon is the New Testament, that literature of courage, that record of a religion that gives assurance of victory. The heart that has the inspiration of faith cannot be content with any working theory of life which belittles human nature and which takes away the inspiration of an eternal goal. Such a heart concentrates its energies on all those things in which it is possible to be more than conquerors "through Him that loves us."

INCREASING THE PENALTIES

New York authorities have come to a realization that a $2.00 fine does not educate the motorist who is imprudent in a traffic sense. It is common knowledge that the punishment for the infraction of traffic laws is, in many instances, insufficient. It is only to the minority of drivers that this applies, but it is the minority who are responsible for traffic accidents, and the great majority should be protected from these. A penalty code has been drawn up for New York by a committee of jurists, headed by Chief Magistrate Schurman, and it is now in effect. Henceforth the new penalties will be imposed by all magistrates without discrimination.

Those convicted of speeding are to be fined $25 or two days in jail for the first offence; $50 or five days' imprisonment for a second offence, and the revocation of the offender's licence because of a third appearance in court. Reckless driving is to be treated even more seriously. A first offence involves a fine of $25 or five days in jail; a second, $100 or twenty days, and for a third offence the revocation of the licence and fifty days' imprisonment. It is, moreover, provided that intoxicated and "hit-and-run" drivers are to be prosecuted as violators of the State law. For driving a motor car while under the influence of liquor the punishment is a minimum fine of $100, or ten days in jail and the compulsory forfeiture of the driver's licence. The punishment for leaving the scene of an accident is $50, or fifteen days and loss of licence, for the first offence. It is provided as well that the passing of red lights will be punishable by a fine of $2, or one day in jail, for the first offence; $10, or three days, for the second, and five days in jail for the third breach of that traffic law. For "dazzling" lights," for "improper lights," and for failure to give right-of-way to a pedestrian, the offender is liable to fines varying from $2 to $10, or to imprisonment for a period of from two to ten days.

The foregoing penalties are not within the discretion of the magistrate; they are compulsory, and must be imposed on conviction. The remodeled regulations appear drastic, but it is certain that they will have their effect in reducing accidents. There is an ever-deepening impression being produced on the public conscience because of the growing toll of fatal and serious casualties on the road caused by motor traffic. All right-minded drivers believe that there should be heavier penalties imposed for their own protection and for the protection of life and property as a whole. New York's example will be watched closely in many quarters, and it may set a precedent which will be widely followed on this continent.

It is a true saying that revolution eats its own children, and in Russia there is an insatiable appetite in this particular. Political issues are settled there by the firing squad and the purge.

EARTHQUAKE

I never understood how man could dare
To watch a city shaken to the ground,
To feel the tremors, hear the tragic sound
Of houses twisting, crashing everywhere,
Although his buildings crumble to a mound
Of worthless ruins, man has always found
The urge to build a stronger city there.

Within my soul I made my towers high,
They lie in ruins, yet I have begun
To build again, now planning to restore
What life has shaken to the earth; and I,
In faith, shall build my towers toward the sun

Note and Comment

By Anon.

Between the warning red covers of the new Programme of Studies for Junior High Schools, recently issued by the British Columbia Department of Education in 655 pages, at page 65 to be exact, appears the assertion that tobacco is a habit-forming drug; with the correlative suggestions that it is a habit easy to acquire and that one may not always believe what tobacco advertisements say.

Despite the fact that this information is put in the form of what a barrister would call leading questions, presumably for debate under the subject of health education, one gets the impression that the Department of Education and the Government frowns upon the use of tobacco, at least in the schools.

Now, this is so true, and so very much to the point, that I cannot forbear to recall the pitiable facts of the case of John Fullpipe Maguire, who, you might say, was practically hounded into his grave through disregarding this very warning, though it was expressed in a slightly different form.

Fullpipe's father, old Claystub Maguire, caught his boy one day coming out from a hayloft with a wisp of straw rolled up in brown paper in his mouth, and a somewhat sickly expression on his face. "Do that agin, and I'll bate the living tinkers out of yel" Claystub had roared. So, you see, Fullpipe had full and fair warning.

But who ever heard of a fourteen-year-old boy taking "no" the first time? It was no time at all until Fullpipe was seen walking home from Sunday school with a cigarette in his mouth; though he hid it quick enough when he got within sight of his home. Well, the boy grew up and went to college, and there he learned the bad habit of smoking a pipe. His downfall, you might say, was practically complete, for the habit had him firmly in its clutches.

The war came, and young Maguire—he was sprouting a bit of a moustache by then—went off to be a soldier. He took his pipe along with him, and just out of meanness and depravity the army rations contained a tolerable pipe tobacco. Mind you, it was not all that the advertisements said; but then, Fullpipe was not picky or choosy, and his pipe was seldom cold. He won the D.C.M., and later the D.S.O. and the V.C., besides being mentioned in dispatches.

You might know when a man falls so easily into the pitfalls of uncertain life that his downward course will be fast and complete. It was so with Maguire, the younger. On return from the front he became a director of several companies, and took up the smoking of cigars. Gradual at first, but with appalling degeneracy later, Fullpipe smoked all the cigars he could lay his hands on, and he had help at Christmas time.

The moustache had disappeared, and it was as a man in the prime of his life, but obviously doomed, that Maguire went to consult his doctor when he was nearing fifty. I suppose calamities cast their shadows in advance, but at any rate that is what he did. The doctor laid aside a cigarette long enough to tell Fullpipe that tobacco was killing him, and doing it fast.

Maguire, a hardened old reprobate by this time, changed his doctor, but not his bad habits. He moved out of the area in which his friends had known him, and though rumors drifted back through the years that he smoked worse than ever, they were shocked when next they saw him. He had fallen away to skin and bone, and there jutting out truculently from the angle of his jaw was a stogie! They knew that it wouldn't be long until the end of it all, and they were right.

John Fullpipe Maguire was hounded straight into his grave by tobacco, if ever a man was. Yes, poor fellow, he died at the age of 110 years!

Officers Installed. The following officers of the Caledonian and St. Andrew's Societies were installed by Thomas Kidd at Vancouver last Friday evening: Moses Mackeen, president; W. Brand, vice-president; M. Fraser, secretary; Andrew C. Muir, treasurer; Rev. T. G. Thomson, chaplain; Dr. Henderson, physician; William Urquhart, piper and Angus McIntyre, warder.

New Brick Building. D. Hewes, of San Francisco, has leased a lot on Yates Street from Amelia Douglas, from John Hall, and will erect thereon a substantial brick building.

Marine Notes. The bark Oahu from Honolulu will commence discharging cargo at a wharf tomorrow. Tai Time are the consignees. The British bark Ada Mercer, from Victoria for Shanghai, arrived at the latter port September 7. The steamship Mexico, Captain Huntington, 728 tons of freight and two passengers, arrived from San Francisco at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The English bark Fleur de Lis arrived yesterday from Liverpool. The steamer Lottie, Captain Sweeney, arrived last night from Ben Juan.

HEALTH AND WEALTH IN VICTORIA, B.C.

For Valetudinarians, Victoria squeezes home
So those who reach the Century need never seek to roam,
To distant tracks or beaches, in search of sport or health
There in "galloping consumption" "sere-and-yellow's" linked with wealth.

There a "Kite" that is quite hoary he's flying far in front,
And "Little Boy Blue" in spectacles sees a successful "Punt."

Though knees are a bit groggy, and bellows have a leak,
Your aristocratic pedigree will help, you once a week.
Get out and run like blazes, puff up your skirts and laugh,

Hobbies and Horses

After hearing the moans and squawks of those who weren't doing so well at the races, we have come to the conclusion it is much safer and profitable to play the horses—the ones on the merry-go-round. Over at one of the local bond houses we were told of one young fellow who had a spare $100 (lucky fellow) about three months ago. He was advised to play the wheat market on margin. He did. He let his money ride for three months, and just lately sold out for $6,500. He then got married and so far is living happy ever after.—W.J.H.

Prosperity, Round Two

When Alberta reissued prosperity certificates the other day, starting them off on their second round of distribution as payment for relief labor, its treasury brought the certificates up to date by affixing stamps necessary at the date of reissue. If Alberta paid for the stamps, was it taxing itself, or did it collect overdue stamps from the initial holders of the certificates? If paying for the stamps, the treasury would be no more anxious to hold on to the certificates than were the merchants. In fact, it is hot money.—S.G.

It Is to Laugh

We maintain there should be a course in laughter in every school. Today they fail miserably when it comes to developing a sense of humor. Not nearly so much of this column's modest efforts as humor would go to waste if folks had a well-trained sense of humor and could see the points of our jokes without the aid of a diagram.—N.A.C.M.

A Long Milky Way

Opposite the Government "drug store" on Johnson Street a solemn visaged motorist sat in a smart automobile with a plain china cup in his hand. Tears welled up in his eyes as he watched customers pass in and out of the store. He lifted the cup to his mouth a few times and slowly sipped its contents with a grimace. Intrigued by his morbid expression and the cup, a kindly customer crossed the street and asked what seemed to be the trouble. "Lots of trouble," mournfully replied the man. "I'm on a milk diet for another four months and cannot touch a drop of anything else. But I drove down here to see others happily making their purchases while I sit and sip this infernal milk" . . . This story comes from the dock. It appears a Victorian flouted the law and returned from Seattle with three quarts of moonlain draw in his suitcase. "Anything to declare?" asked a customs officer. "Oh, no. Just clothes," replied the traveler. But the uniformed man decided to investigate, and the crocks were speedily brought to light. "I thought you said your grip was only full of clothes," thundered the customs officer. "I'm still right," replied the Victorian. "Those are my night caps". . . When Bill, the Broad Street airbed gazed upon our waistline and subtly remarked that walking was a good tonic. We speedily responded that a passing automobile was also a good pick-me-up . . . "There's one thing I can say for my wife," remarked our pacifist friend. "What is that?" we asked. "Yes," he said . . . Last time Broad Street Bertie lay the table at home his wife accused him of putting his thumb in the soup. "It's okay, my dear," said Bertie. "The soup isn't hot."—G.B.

Mother—What do you say to a fine cake for your birthday, with ten candles on top, one for each year of your age?

DEFENCE OF CANADA

Sir,—The formation of the Defence of Canada League, announced recently by this paper, results undoubtedly from a growing realization by Canadians that Canada lies virtually undefended, which at a period when jingoistic militarism resounds the world over is a singularly unfortunate predicament for any nation, and one certainly not to be lightly disregarded.

It was made quite clear that this organization is neither Fascist nor militaristic, but merely one desiring adequate and reasonable defence of our great Dominion, thus disposing of any opportunity for such pacifist organizations as the "B.C. League Against War and Fascism" to term it a band of "Fascist-gangsters," "warmongers," etc. . .

Neither Fascism nor militarism are desired, I am sure, by the democratic people of Canada, yet it is becoming increasingly obvious that they desire greater protection from not improbable foreign invasion in the future . . .

"But what is there to defend?" is a question often voiced by skeptics. "Everything." I reply—"a great country, a land of hope and opportunities (even if some are undeveloped and dormant), a heritage of democratic institutions and great resources. Is this not worth defending?"

C. S. THOMAS.

IN SOVIET RUSSIA

Sir,—Some of your correspondents have recently brought to light interesting facts about labor conditions in the U.S.S.R.

In view of this it might be interesting to note the statements and admissions of hirelings of the Moscow democracy (?), relative to the standard of living, etc., of the Russian toiling masses.

Recently, officials of the Soviet Planning Commission (Gosplan), told Dr. Jules I. Bogen, of The New York Journal of Commerce, that: "By the close of the third Five-Year Plan (1943), the standard of living in Russia will closely approach that of employed workers in advanced countries of Western Europe, and by the end of the fourth Five-Year Plan (1948), it will begin to approach that of the U.S.A."

The above official Soviet statements refer to plans; that is, if all goes well, such and such a living standard will be attained. At the present time, when that benign and liberal (even if a little bloodstained from seventeen recent political murders) satrap, Czar Stalin I is urging his slaves on with such naive slogans as "Life is getting merrier," "Life is getting better," conditions relative to the second Five-Year Plan do not seem to be getting along as merrily as had been planned.

A fortnight ago, Commissar for Light Industry M. Lubimov complained that: "Conditions at numerous plants are so bad I cannot wait for improvement. Workers are playing truant." As a result, production of Soviet textiles is 40,000,000 metres behind plan; flat textiles are 27,000,000 behind; stockings are 800,000 pairs behind, etc.

Besides this, the quality of goods produced under Socialism is so rotten that Commissar for Internal Trade L. Y. Veltzer complained of "goods of inferior quality." So weak and wobbly were the products of a Moscow chair factory that last week it had to close down for complete reorganization.

So much for the progress of the latest Five-Year Plan. Why?—After waiting during seventeen years of Socialism and being asked to wait twelve years more to even reach the standard of living of a capitalist nation (during a depression), I should think that the Christian idea of Heaven would be more attractive even to an atheistic Socialist than the hypothetical and far-distant Soviet paradise.

P. HARTNELL.

SOVIET RUSSIA

Sir,—In view of the fact that Mr. Gallacher, the Communist M.P. from Scotland, said that Russia was the only true democracy in the world today, the following quotations from "Soviet Russia" by W. H. Chamberlain might interest your readers. It shows how much we can trust what Communists say about Russia.

HERBERT BOOTHMAN.

1017 Burdett Avenue, Victoria, B.C., September 15, 1936.

"The things which the average Western European or American associates with The phrase 'civil liberties,' freedom of speech and press for all citizens, freedom of political organization, guarantees against arbitrary search and arrest, are completely non-existent in Russia today.

"Not only is there no opposition press in Russia, but every newspaper or periodical dealing with political questions is under Communist control and voices in news and editorials alike only the orthodox Communist viewpoint. There are no privately-owned newspapers in Russia; every organ of the press is issued either by a Soviet by a local or national committee of the Communist Party, by a trade union or by some other public institution or organization, and in every case the direction of the newspaper's policies by a responsible Communist is ensured.

"The writ of habeas corpus does not run in Russia. Anyone suspected of a political or economic offense may be arrested held in prison for an indefinite period and finally exiled sentenced to a term of imprisonment or even, in rare and extreme cases, executed, simply by the fiat of the all-powerful Gay-Pay-Oo or political police. No one has ever been able to secure any official statistics regarding the number of persons who are in prison or in exile for political offences in the Soviet Union, but the free use which the Gay-Pay-Oo makes of its sweeping powers of arrest makes it certain that this figure is one of the highest in the world.

"No meeting may be held in Russia without a permit; and such permits are practically never given for gatherings where even the most indirect forms of political criticism might be voiced.

"Academic freedom also does not exist in Russia. Any professor who lets drop any unguarded word critical of the existing regime or who holds in history or economics, philosophy or science, non-Marxian or idealistic views at variance with the prevalent dogma of materialism is likely to be dismissed.

"The severe regimentation of political thought and activity is by no means confined to individuals and groups committed to capitalist outlook or to the non-Communist interpretations of Socialism held by the Mensheviks and Social Revolutionists. Beginning with the Autumn of 1927, when arrests of Trotskyist adherents began, the Gay-Pay-Oo has directed more and more of its activity against the Trotskyists and other dissident Communists. It is an amusing and suggestive fact, illustrative of the varying conception of political liberty which prevail in Russia and in Western Europe, that French and British Communists, avowedly aiming at the revolutionary overthrow of the governments of those countries, have been free to publish daily newspapers and books advocating their views, whereas no Russian Communist group which disagrees with the Party leadership is permitted to make its views known to the Party masses through similar means.

"The Gay-Pay-Oo, the chief agency for maintaining this system of rigorous controls, is probably the most powerful and extensive secret police system existing anywhere in the world . . ."

A SEPARATE PROVINCE

Sir,—A great many people appear to think that there is no constitutional or legal method in existence whereby Vancouver Island can be created a separate province of the Dominion. The following amendment to the B.N.A. Act in 1871 was passed to meet such an eventuality. The may be of interest to give it to your readers.

"The British North America Act, 1871, (34 and 35, Victoria, c. 28).

"1. This act may be cited for all purposes as the British North America Act, 1871.

"2. The Parliament of Canada may from time to time establish new provinces in any territories forming for the time being part of the Dominion of Canada, but not included in any province thereof, and may, at the time of such establishment, make provision for the constitution and administration of any such province, and for the passing of laws for the peace, order and good government of such province, and for its representation in the said Parliament.

"3. The Parliament of Canada may from time to time, with the consent of the Legislature of any province of the said Dominion, increase, diminish, or otherwise alter the limits of such province, upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed to by the said Legislature, and may, with the like consent, make provision respecting the effect and operation of any such increase or diminution or alteration of territory in relation to any province affected thereby."

SEPTEMBER 16

Sir,—Several letters have been sent to the paper lately criticising addresses given over the air and also given in the Empire Theatre.

All these letters have been written under a wrong impression or supposition. They have been under the impression that statements have been made that something out of the ordinary was going to happen on September 16. I have been listening to these said addresses for years and I have yet to hear it said or even insinuated that this date was going to be a dark date for the world.

The date September 16 has simply been stated to be a certain period in the earth's history, just as June 23 is a historical day in the life of King Edward or that the year 500 A.D. marks a period five centuries after the birth of Christ.

We are soon to celebrate the birth of Victoria. The sun did not shine any longer because of this birth, nor did it rain any less, no nothing happened. Why, there were very few people who even knew about it but the City was born just the same and since September 16 we have been living in a new era and we may be sometime before we are able to see what the difference really is between the old era and the new era.

I have read all the letters to the paper from the pen of the Rev. Mr. Tapscott and am surprised at his seething intolerance of another minister who is able by his knowledge of the Bible and his understanding of human nature to have the largest crowds in the city to listen to him every Sunday night and also thousands listen to him over the air every morning.

Mr. Tapscott says he has written 400 sheets of manuscript on the same line of thought. He says they are still in cold storage. That is the best place for them.

When one writes a letter to the paper it at least should be written in the English language. We are not all as clever as Mr. Tapscott. Some of his statements would take more than even the Philadelphia lawyer to understand.

Mr. Tapscott says in his letter that he has not studied the Great Pyramid and he sets out forthwith to belittle those who have studied it. Such people as Mr. Tapscott could study the Bible with the references to the Great Pyramid and then he would be better able to pick the mote out of the eye of the B.-I., and set him right if he was wrong instead of criticizing something of which he knows nothing.

For the benefit of those who do not know and who would like to know something of the Pyramid and the Bible references to the same, I will, with the Editor's kind permission, give some information on this subject in a letter following this. And also show prophesies stated in the Bible which have come true.

JNO. W. GREEN.

YOUTHS' CLOTHING

Sir,—An attractive feature of the Fair activities is shown in your paper today in the photos of the boys of the Fairbridge Farm School with their cows on parade. The sturdy alertness and neat clothing of these youngsters is as much an exhibit as the fine animals they accompany and might well be widely copied.

Can anyone say why so many children in this district have lapsed into such slovenly dress? Boys and girls alike, from toddling babes to gawky youths they drag long, sloppy trousers generally of cotton material—through the mud and dust, according to season, their narrow shoulders and hollow chests being covered with a shapeless travesty of a blouse or sweater.

A year ago I combed the town in vain for a schoolboy's flannel suit with shorts. After long search one tailor was found who made one, as the boy was tall for his age.

It does not appear to be worth while for local tailors to make boys suits as you can buy the small sizes made by mass production by the factories in Eastern Canada and shipped here for the retail trade. The price of imported British woolens is prohibitive for the average purse, yet there is no encouragement to the farmer to raise sheep in any numbers, and the closed buildings of the woolen mills are a mute and melancholy monument to what should be a thriving industry.

Besides providing clothing, there should be a local market worked up for house-fed mutton, which would be superior to the dry Alberta beef so lavishly imported. It is worth considering also the impression that inhabitants make on visitors, on those who have eyes for something besides scenery. Boys fed on nourishing and simple food, given decent clothes (which will outwear many shoddy garments) and taught manners to correspond, will do more to make this capital city attractive to tourists and future residents than painted exteriors and passing shows which will be drab and uninteresting the following season.

Pull up your socks, young Victorians! This fine Dominion has been founded and fostered by sturdy settlers from overseas, and the older generation looks for worthy successors among those now coming along to assume the privileges of citizenship, thereby stabilizing the foundations of this young branch of that widespread building, the British Empire. Let us keep it true to the best British traditions and uphold the King-Emperor's flag on these shores.

M. EATON.

QUIET SARCASM

The plumber, with his apprentice, had certainly been an incredibly long time over the job, and showed no signs of getting it finished. The owner of the property thought it was about time he gently reminded him of the fact. He approached them as they were going leisurely about their work one day, and placed his hand on the shoulder of the apprentice. Then, turning to the plumber he said dryly—"My word, how this lad of yours is growing."

Lives of Thirty on Prince Alfred Were Imperiled in Crash

Victoria–San Francisco Service Steamship Struck Duxbury Reef Near Her Destination in Fog And Became Total Loss on June 14, 1874

By GEORGE BONAVIA

LIVES of thirty passengers and a full crew were imperiled when Ss. Prince Alfred struck Duxbury Reef and was beached in a sinking condition in Potato Cove, six miles north of San Francisco, on June 14, 1874. She subsequently proved a total loss, and a California diver who bought the wreck for $350 did not get his money back before the vessel's iron sides caved in and put a stop to further salvage efforts.

Originally built for Australian inter-colonial trade in 1852, the Prince Alfred was placed on the route between Panama and San Francisco in 1869. Purchased by John Rosenfeld and John Birmingham, of San Francisco, for $15,000 in 1872, the sum of $45,000 was spent in 1873 on remodelling her machinery and passenger accommodation. A mail contract between Victoria and California was secured, and the vessel insured for $60,000.

In command of Captain Sholl, the Prince Alfred left Victoria at 11 o'clock in the evening of June 10, 1874, on what was destined to be her last voyage.

PASSENGERS ABOARD

Vancouver Island passengers aboard were: C. Leopold, W. Campbell, J. Kriemler, Mrs. C. Spinner, Mr. and Mrs. J. Bremner, Mrs. W. Michaels and son, Mrs. Bendixen, A. Mackenzie, Mrs. Doyle and child, William Michaels, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Weldon, James Weldon, T. Morris, Dr. E. Stanley, Mrs. Bloomingdale, Miss Fanny Bloomingdale, Miss Laura Bloomingdale, Miss Hattie Bloomingdale, Mr. and Mrs. A. Fellows, James Russell, E. Leigh, George Deitz, Mr. and Mrs. P. Kill and H. Nelson.

The Prince Alfred's cargo consisted of ninety-four tons of hides, wool, deer skins, charcoal and package goods. Of the hides aboard, the Hudson's Bay Company shipped $90,000 worth; Boscowitz Brothers, $3,500; W. Dalby & Company, $2,000; George Keayes, $200, and Pacific Mail Steamship Company, $250. Wells, Fargo & Company's agent, placed aboard $25,623 worth of gold, $13,581 belonging to the Bank of British North America; $5,602, Bank of British Columbia, and $6,439, F. Garesche.

First news of the disaster was received in Victoria at 7:30 o'clock on the evening of June 14, when the Prince Alfred should have been at San Francisco. Steaming along at full speed in a dense fog, she struck Duxbury Reef and bounded off with a gaping hole in her bottom.

A sail was hastily dragged under the keel by the crew, but water poured in faster than the straining pumps could cope with. Feverishly the men attempted to stem the flow with buckets. Their efforts made no difference.

HEADED FOR SHORE

With no time to lose, Captain Sholl ordered some canvas hoisted and the sinking vessel steered for shore. Water reached the engine-room fires and they were put out by firemen, who feared a boiler explosion. There was no panic among passengers, for they had been informed it would be possible to beach the ship before she sank.

While anxious passengers clustered about the rails, the Prince Alfred was safely beached some 300 yards from shore. Passengers, mail and the gold consignment were conveyed ashore in lifeboats.

The following account was given to The Daily British Colonist by an anonymous passenger:

"I don't know why steamers should run eight to ten miles per hour close to a rocky shore in a dense fog. Notwithstanding the steam whistle was blowing all the time at intervals. Was that, I wonder, to tell the rocks we were coming?

"7:30 a.m.—Dense fog, going full speed. Struck reef and began to leak.

"8:30 a.m.—Engine-room fires put out. No wind. Close to shore. Fog gone and splendid weather. All hands at pumps. Ship going gradually down by stern. Luggage piled on forecastle. Water rose and gradually filled cabins. Deck under water as far as amidships.

"1 p.m.—Captain gave orders for women to get into lifeboats. All aboard landed safely.

"4 p.m.—Ship almost submerged. Broke in two at daylight and disappeared beneath surface," the account ended.

Eleven casks of furs belonging to the Hudson's Bay Company and 700 deer skins were recovered from the Prince Alfred. Her stern was in deep water and her bow up at a high angle underneath the sea. Finding the vessel not worth salvaging, her owners sold the wreck to J. P. Loughee, San Francisco diver, for $350. Loughee employed five men with diving bells, and had visions of saving enough of her cargo to make a nice profit. Before operations were completed the vessel turned over on her beam ends and her sides collapsed. Loughee made nothing to balance his expenditure of $350.

"Donkey Ball" Is Coming

Next Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Horse Show Building at Willows Park, the Victoria Gyro Club will introduce something new in sport. It is "donkey ball," which is now sweeping the United States and Western Canada. "Donkey ball" is played the same as baseball, although the players are mounted on donkeys. The donkeys have been "educated" and if the mood strikes them they may start out for third base when they should go to first, or they might carry a fielder to left field when the ball was hit into right field. Teams from the Gyro Club and the Victoria police department will be seen and "Rebel" Mowat is bringing his well-known charity baseball team, "Cox's Army" out of retirement to play in the three-day series.

LADYSMITH BURNS REDEEMED BONDS

Ceremonies were held on the site which is intended, at some future date, for a new city hall. A great, evergreen carpeted platform, amid a circle of ornamental trees, made a suitable auditorium for the day.

In his opening remarks Mayor Walkem welcomed the Comox Logging Company to the city and vicinity, and introduced H. J. Macken, president, and J. H. Filberg, vice-president, to the citizens. His Worship spoke appreciatively of the pleasant relations that had developed between the community and the company, and took occasion to welcome as well, the new employees of the lumber enterprise.

In responding, Mr. Filberg formally presented the hundred-foot flag pole, the company's gift to the community. He echoed the mayor's hopes for continued mutual prosperity.

After accepting the flag pole on behalf of the city, and expressing thanks not only to the logging company, but to the Duncan-Nanaimo Utilities, which had generously erected the big timber, the mayor called on Hugh Savage, M.P.P.

Mr. Savage presented a large Union Jack to fly at the mast head. He drew a parallel between the tree that "grew straight and true" and was now honored as the standard staff of the community with the need for human adherence to principles of truth. The flag, itself, was but a piece of bunting, but as a symbol it stood for Empire unity, its folds recalled the history of the Empire, and it served as a challenge to the individual to improve himself. He stressed the spiritual character of the flag, with its three Christian crosses, which were constant reminders of the virtues which they represented.

Accepting the flag, Mayor Walkem called upon the Boy Scouts who raised it to the mast head where it broke out amid the applause of the hundreds of spectators.

R. B. Dier, one of the first mayors of Ladysmith, was called upon for the address of the day. In happy vein he recalled the earlier history of the city, and paid glowing tribute to those who were associated with him in municipal work thirty years ago. He particularly remarked upon the debt that the community owed to the late Donald Nicholson, mayor when the city commenced its utilities. He also paid high tribute to City Clerk Morrison.

Dr. Dier commented upon the trials and troubles through which the city passed and to its courage and determination that had made possible the happy ceremony that had drawn them together.

He spoke also of the need for preserving the natural beauties of Cathedral Grove, and aroused enthusiasm when he declared that every citizen of the Island should rise to protest against any attempt to despoil that forest asset.

He developed the theme and declared wholeheartedly in support of a better deal for Vancouver Island, paying tribute to the work done, and leadership given, by The Daily Colonist in this respect.

HONOR LATE MAYOR

Following Dr. Dier's address, which was enthusiastically received, a period of silence was reverently observed in respect for the memory of the late former Mayor George Reid, who passed away on Thursday.

B. A. McKelvie, managing editor of The Colonist, a former resident of the city, concluded the platform events with a few remarks.

The ceremony of burning the bonds was then held amid enthusiastic applause.

A banquet was held in honor of the logging company, followed by a dance for the citizens.

Ladysmith in celebrating its financial achievement and in welcoming its new friends was not forgetful of its former friends and founder. Mayor Walkem sent, on behalf of the citizens, a telegram to Mrs. James Dunsmuir, testifying to the respect in which the memory of Hon. James Dunsmuir, founder of the community, is held.

WINTER FAIR HERE IS TO BE MODERN SHOW

Tourist Trade Development Association Organizes Second Exhibition

ARMORIES TO HOUSE HUGE INDOOR EVENT

Last year's Winter Fair at the Armories was so entirely successful from the exhibitors' standpoint, the entertainment angle, and attendance records, according to the Tourist Trade Development Association, that the committee decided at its close to make the fair an annual event. This year's fair will be held at Bay Street Armories from October 26 to 31.

This decision was reached after receipt of letters from eighteen of last year's exhibitors immediately following the close of the fair, asking that they might contract for the same space in the 1936 event. The association's secretary states that four of these requests were accompanied by cheques as deposits for the 1936 show. Although these cheques were immediately returned, space has been set aside in advance for the senders.

Eulogized by the Victoria press last year as "the most modern exhibition ever offered to the Victoria public"—"a drama of kaleidoscopic beauty, and ultra-modernistic design," encouraged by Premier Pattullo's declaration, "I wish every success to this outstanding industrial exhibition," and opened officially by Hon. A. Wells Gray, the four-day colorful event rolled up a record attendance of 22,500 patrons.

SIX-DAY EVENT

This year, with last year's experiences to build on, the association expects to present an even more attractive, more modern, and faster moving six days of serious merchandising and advertising effort, combined with a non-stop programme of widely varied entertainment.

Special ventilating equipment is being designed to carry off any odors arising from cafe cooking stoves at the exhibition, as last year this was the only complaint registered by the public.

Last year's cooking classes, managed by the B.C. Electric Railway Company, with Mrs. Foulds' very able and interesting cooking demonstrations, attracted so many housewives and met with such general approval, that the company has undertaken to repeat this year these regular afternoon sessions, and publicity will be given shortly to the wide range and valuable nature of prizes to be offered.

SPECIAL ACTS

In the way of entertainment, this year's programme is said to be particularly ambitious and complete, with an hourly change of programme throughout the six days.

The offerings will include special stage and aerial acts, the Show Boat's best numbers by the Royal English Show Boat Pierrots, Curley's Harmonious Harvesters, prize winners in the Show Boat amateur contests, and free novelty acts not hitherto seen on the Island.

With 465 boys and girls now busily selling admission tickets, in order to compete for the ticket selling prizes, which include bicycles, baseball bats and mitts, tennis racquets, roller skates, wrist watches, table tennis sets and other valuable items, Frank Bickford, who is handling ticket sales, reports the ticket sales to be 25 per cent over last year's record at the same time.

T. H. Estick, general secretary of the association, who was responsible for the modernistic design and lighting effects of last year's fair, says that with the help of George MacDonald, of the Jameson Electric Company, the whole exhibition plan is being redesigned on still more pleasing and attractive lines.

"B" TEAM WINS RACE SERIES

Onaway, Pancho, Bandicoot and Falcon Score Forty-Three Points

Team "B" racing in the last of the special series of team races yesterday afternoon at Cadboro Bay scored twenty-one points, as against "A" team's fifteen points, becoming the winner of the series as well, with a total of forty-three points, ten in excess of "A" team.

The boats started in a light northeasterly breeze, which continued throughout the race. The boats finished in the following order: Bandicoot, G. A. Heale, 4:55:45; Pancho, H. Barnes, Jr., 4:56:13; Penguin, E. P. Ashe, 4:57:23; Onaway, Peter Hincks, 4:57:48; Kismet, H. Gann, 4:58:36; Tern, Gordon Campbell, 5:04:20; Iceebee, I. C. Baltrop, 5:09:23; Falcon, R. Porter, 5:11:19.

The teams were made up as follows: "A" team, Kismet, Tern, Penguin and Iceebee; "B" team, Onaway, Pancho, Bandicoot and Falcon.

Next Saturday will conclude the outdoor activities of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club for the 1936 season. During the afternoon there will be races for ladies, and in the evening presentation of prizes and a dance.

For yesterday's events, B. B. Temple was starter, and J. B. Ackland the timekeeper.

BRAZILIAN IMMIGRATION

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 26 (AP).—From 1920 through 1935, Labor Ministry figures show 70 per cent of immigranta came to Brazil from three so-called Latin countries. Italy sent 1,478,943; Portugal, 1,383,878 and Spain, 591,397.

Vancouver Band Wins in England

LONDON, Sept. 26 (CP).—The Kitsilano Boys' Band from Vancouver, conducted by A. Delamont, today won the Junior "A" Shield in the band contest at Crystal Palace.

The British Empire championship, in which twenty-three bands took part, was won by the Foden Motor-works Band.

Tag Day to Give Aid to Solarium

This year it is planned to use the money so collected to purchase tools and supplies for manual training and handicraft work of the patients at the Solarium. There are several machines that would be of great benefit to the development of muscles and special treatment—for instance, fret-saws pedalled by the feet. Leather-work tools, too, are quite expensive but would be a great help, also small looms for weaving, etc. Instruction in such work has been hindered by a lack of proper equipment.

For this reason it is the aim of this tag day collection to raise enough money to properly equip the little patients with such tools and supplies, and the whole of the amount collected will be forwarded to the Solarium for this purpose.

In order to make this undertaking successful, various organizations are being asked to convene a corner or give a donation.

The tag day headquarters will be at the Victoria Women's Institute room, 633 Fort Street, and refreshments will be served to all taggers.

The time used is Pacific standard for the 120th Meridian west. It is counted from 0 to 24 hours, from midnight to midnight. The figures for height serve to distinguish high water from low water. Where blanks occur in the table, the tide rises or falls continuously during two successive tidal periods without turning.

To find the depth of water on the sill of the Esquimalt drydock, add 18.0 feet to the height of high water as above given.

Plane Damaged in Chilliwack Field

CHILLIWACK, B.C., Sept. 26 (?). —A low-wing monoplane owned by Frank Edwards, of Chilliwack, was being repaired in its hangar here today following a "crack-up" during a forced landing in a farmer's field.

George Lothian, testing the plane, was forced to land when the motor seized up and ploughed into a barbed-wire fence. The plane was considerably damaged, but Lothian escaped uninjured.

VANCOUVER, Sept. 26 (?). — Arthur Eaton, sixteen, and an unidentified child of four had a narrow escape from death late today when the bicycle on which they were riding collided with an automobile.

Young Eaton was taken to hospital with an injured arm, but his condition was not serious. The younger child, riding on the handlebars of the bicycle, escaped injury.

CAMPAIGN WILL OPEN TUESDAY

E. G. Rowebottom Heads Y.M.C.A. Membership Drive

An army of sixty-four canvassers headed by E. G. Rowebottom, chairman of the membership campaign committee, will endeavor to secure 500 new members for the local Y.M.C.A. when the membership drive is officially opened at the supper meeting Tuesday evening in the local Y.M.C.A.

Rev. Dr. A. S. Imrie will give a brief address to the workers and members of the committee at the supper, at which time the technical details of the campaign will be explained by Frank Paulding, general secretary of the association. E. G. Rowebottom will conduct the meeting.

THREE TEAMS

Three teams, headed by J. V. Johnson, Norval Peterson and Warren W. Martin, respectively, will work in the drive. Each team will be divided into smaller divisions under twelve captains. The captains are S. J. D. Clack, S. Winterbottom, J. Allison, J. A. Heritage, E. Harrison, W. S. Fraser, G. Sharp, H. Bailey, S. Hill, M. F. Hunter, Rev. G. A. Reynolds and W. M. Scott.

E. G. ROWEBOTTOM

Junior memberships will be solicited by a member from the boys' division attached to each senior group.

REPORT SUPPER

Friday evening the second report supper will be held, while the following Monday, "Founder's Day" will be observed by a banquet at the Y.M.C.A. The organization was founded ninety-two years ago by George Williams.

Veterans of the Y.M.C.A. are asked to attend this dinner, as three five-minute addresses will be given by early members of the association. Thursday, October 8, the closing supper will be held.

MAY APPEAL COURT ORDER

City Council Scheduled to Discuss Injunction on Monday Night

An appeal from the Supreme Court decision of Mr. Justice D. A. McDonald restraining the city from negotiating the Charles S. Henley debenture scheme along the original lines may be discussed at a meeting of the City Council Monday evening. A favorable judgment for the city would indicate the council acted within its jurisdiction in passing the original resolution, and would remove grounds for disqualification proceedings which are still pending, it is believed.

An injunction to restrain the City Council from paying the sum of $15,000 to Mr. Henley for expenses of a delegation to financial centres was sought in Supreme Court by Frank Higgins, K.C., acting on behalf of John Day, and granted by Mr. Justice McDonald on September 9. The next day another writ was issued claiming Mayor David Leeming and Alderman Percy R. Brown were disqualified from holding office as from August 31. Argument has yet to be heard in the matter.

In a letter addressed to the City Council, H. S. Pringle, city solicitor, recommended that instructions be given for an appeal from Mr. Justice McDonald's decision. He stated Elliott, Maclean & Shandley, city counsel, were of the opinion an appeal should be made. It is understood the matter will be debated tomorrow evening by aldermen.

Because Alderman Brown tendered his resignation as acting mayor when the disqualification writ was filed, it is expected the City Council will fill his post forthwith. Alderman James Adam acted as chairman of several meetings.

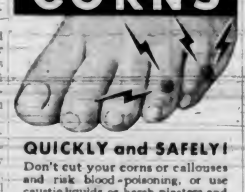

A public hearing of a zoning by-law amendment which seeks to create a garage district out of property bounded by Cormorant, Pandora, Broad and Government Streets will be given at the council meeting.

A request from Chief of Police Thomas Headley in regard to the parking of buses on Yates Street is due for consideration. Chief Headley points out a by-law prohibits the parking of vehicles over seventeen feet long on Douglas Street, between Fort and Fisgard Streets, and recommends the by-law be amended to include Yates Street from Blanshard to Douglas Streets. In a letter to the council, he stated a number of complaints have been received in regard to buses on Yates Street.

Missing Since Tuesday

Victor Gravlin and his wife, Doris Gravlin, missing from their respective homes since last Tuesday, are being sought throughout Greater Victoria. Mr. Gravlin is described as being in his middle-thirties, about five feet eleven inches tall, weight about 135 pounds, medium build and of a nervous temperament. Mrs. Gravlin is thirty years of age, five feet six inches tall, weighing 130 pounds, with auburn hair, and large brown eyes. Last Tuesday she was wearing a knitted dress, blue coat with silver buttons, and a grey hat.

City and District

Museum Open Today—The Provincial Museum will be open today. This is the last Sunday that the museum will be open until the first Sunday in May.

Annual Meeting—The annual meeting of Ward Seven Saanich Conservative Association will be held on Tuesday evening in the Alex Hall, Burnside Road, at 8 o'clock.

Appointments Made—Dr. H. D. Barner, of Bella Bella, was made a justice of the peace in Provincial orders yesterday. Miss Lorna D. Boyd, of Barkerville, was named deputy registrar of the County Court for Cariboo County.

Ward One Liberals—Instead of the regular meeting of Ward One Liberal Association on Monday, a card social will be held at Liberal headquarters at 8 p.m. All Liberals and their friends are cordially invited.

Plan Banquet—Members of the 103rd Battalion Association are requested to attend a meeting in The Daily Colonist board room at 8 o'clock, Wednesday evening. Plans for the annual reunion banquet will be discussed.

School Concert—A concert will be held in Victoria West School auditorium at 8 o'clock Friday evening in order to raise funds to purchase equipment for the school's football team. The team is in need of footballs, sweaters and boots.

Will Meet Monday—The Gordon Head Athletic Association will hold its general meeting in the Gordon Head Hall, Tyndall Avenue, tomorrow at 8 p.m. Members are requested to attend and an invitation is extended to all past members and intending members.

Better Business—Increases in general business here range between 20 and 40 per cent. merchants and wholesalers say, while department store executives report better buying has been the order of the year and expect further expansion of local trade in the future.

Will Sing Tonight—Madame Winifred Lugrin Fahey distinguished Canadian soprano, will sing at tonight's service at Metropolitan United Church two numbers by request. They are the "Ninety and Nine," by Campion, and "The Stranger of Galilee," by Sturgess.

Tag Day Results—The Dr. O. M. Jones Chapter, I.O.D.E., tag day netted $241.30 yesterday. The chapter extends appreciation to Normal students for their help in tagging, and also to the public for its generosity. The tag day was convened by Mrs. J. W. Hudson, the regent.

Kipling Society—The Victoria Kipling Society will start its 1936-37 session with a meeting on Tuesday next at 8 p.m. in the Women's Institute rooms, 635 Fort Street. After a short business session, the programme for the evening will be the reading and discussion of "Kipling's war story, "Mary Postgate." This story has recently aroused much controversy among the members of the central society and Kipling's admirers in England. All local members and friends and those interested in the author's writings are heartily invited to attend.

Life Underwriters—Victoria and Island Life Underwriters' Association will hold a luncheon meeting in Spencer's dining-room Tuesday at 12 noon. The guest speaker will be G. Hamilton Harman, manager of the Bank of Montreal, who will take as his subject, "Changes in Finance and Life Insurance."

To Analyze Course—The staff of the North Ward School entertained some thirty-five members of the senior section of the Victoria and District Teachers' Association on Wednesday afternoon. A discussion took place of the new course of study, and committees were appointed to analyze the various courses of the new curriculum.

Britannia Branch—The Britannia Branch, Canadian Legion, will hold a membership meeting Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the clubroom, View Street. Teams representing the branch in the Inter-Service Billiard League are requested to have delegates present, as arrangements will be made for the club's handicaps. The next general meeting of the branch will be held October 6.

Conservatives Meet—Wards Six and Seven, Oak Bay branches of the Victoria Conservative Association, will hold combined annual meetings at the Conservative Rooms, Campbell Building, at 8 o'clock on Tuesday evening, Brig. J. Sutherland Brown said yesterday. B. A. McKelvie, managing editor of The Colonist, will be the guest speaker.

Building Work—At a cost of $6,000 the second floor of the Weiler Block on Government and Broughton Streets will be remodeled to accommodate members of the British Columbia Health Insurance Commission. A city building permit was taken out for the work yesterday in the name of David Spencer, Ltd. A special entrance from Gordon Street to the second floor will be constructed.

Will Discuss Relief—Humphrey Mitchell, who left Ottawa last week to discuss relief with the British Columbia Government on behalf of the Federal authorities, is expected in the city tomorrow. Movement of transients to the Pacific Coast, a seasonal trend, is causing some concern to the Province. Last year such entrants were accommodated in Federal camps, but now the camps have been abolished.

Short Wave Club—Members of Victoria Short Wave Club have practically completed rebuilding their transmitter, located at 2024 Carnarvon Street. During a meeting held at the home of H. Cooper last evening, the treasurer reported finances sound. Lumber is being collected to build a new clubhouse on Foul Bay Road, near the corner of Haultain Street. Work is expected to commence in November.

Meeting Local Committee—Major F. J. Ney is to reach Victoria next Friday from Winnipeg, and will remain until Monday, October 5. During his stay he hopes to meet the local committee of the National Council of Education with a view to discussing the reorganization of the council. Major Ney is leaving Winnipeg today, and en route westward will visit Saskatoon, Edmonton, Calgary, Vancouver and Victoria.

Both Arms Injured—Tommy Alex, Middlesboro Indian found dead on Friday near Merritt, died from exposure, a coroner's inquest reported to headquarters of the Provincial Police yesterday. One arm was fractured and the other one dislocated, examination disclosed. Two Indians, meanwhile, were detained by the police pending investigation into a gathering all three men were believed to have attended on the night previous to the death of Tommy Alex.

ERECTING MANY NEW DWELLINGS

Homes Planned by Residents Of Oak Bay and Saanich, Building Figures Show

In the municipalities of Oak Bay and Saanich, there appears to be a new Fall building boom in progress. The result is that about an average of a new home each day is being provided for by the permits in each of the districts represented.

In Oak Bay, during the past week, F. W. Morris took out a permit for a $3,500 six-roomed house which is to be erected at 1909 Beach Drive. At 2550 Cavendish Avenue a new home is to be constructed for Edith J. Burrows at a cost of $2,800. It will contain six rooms. H. Tolby will build a four-roomed house at 1075 Victoria Avenue at a cost of $1,680. At 2195 Guernsey Street a five-roomed dwelling valued at $1,600 will be erected by W. Ward. A permit for another $3,000 house in Oak Bay was taken out last week, but the details are not available.

In Saanich municipal hall, permits for the past week showed that Dan Logan will erect a five-roomed home on Grange Road, estimated to cost $2,200. William Henson has taken out a permit for a four-roomed dwelling on Carey Road to cost $1,200. Mrs. J. Henson will erect a four-roomed house on Earl Grey Street at a cost of $1,200. On Cadboro Bay Road, W. B. Owen will build a $1,000 dwelling containing three rooms.

Lost Phial of Radium Found By Detector

CALGARY, Sept. 26 (?).—A search for $3,000 worth of radium contained in a two-inch phial which disappeared from a downtown clinic four days ago, ended today. It was found in a sewer, in front of the clinic, undamaged.

Brought from Vancouver a radium detector, placed atop a sewer manhole, located the radium. Workmen recovered the valuable phial from the bottom of the sewer, half an hour after the first "beat" of the detector had warned of the presence of radium.

When Melvin R. Morris was ordained recently into the Presbyterian ministry in the United States, he added a fourth to a trio of brothers who are also in the ministry of the Presbyterian Church.

Little Stories for Bedtime

Somebody Else Goes Berrying

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

Isn't it funny that two people will often think of the same thing at the same time and neither one know that the other is thinking of it? That is just what happened the day that Buster Bear first thought of going berrying. While he was walking around in the Green Forest talking to himself about how hungry he was for some berries and how sure he was there must be some up in the Old Pasture, someone else was thinking about berries, and about the Old Pasture, too.

"Will you make me a berry pie if I get the berries tomorrow?" asked Farmer Brown's Boy of his mother.

Of course, Mrs. Brown promised that she would, and so that night Farmer Brown's Boy went to bed very early so that he might get up early in the morning, and all night long he dreamed of berries and berry pies. He was awake even before Jolly, round, red Mr. Sun thought it was time to get up, and he was all ready to start for the Old Pasture when the first Cheerful Little Sunbeams came dancing across the Green Meadows. He carried a big tin pail, and in the bottom of it wrapped up in a piece of paper, was a lunch, for he meant to stay until he filled that pail, if it took all day.

Now, the Old Pasture is very large. It lies at the foot of the Big Mountain, and even extends a little way up on the Big Mountain. There is room in it for many people to pick berries all day without even seeing each other unless they roam about a great deal. You see, the bushes grow very thick there, and you cannot see very far in any direction. Jolly, round, red Mr. Sun had climbed a little way up in the sky by the time Farmer Brown's Boy reached the Old Pasture and was smiling down on all the Great World, and all the Great World seemed to be smiling back. Farmer Brown's Boy started to whistle, and then he stopped.

"If I whistle," thought he, "everybody will know just where I am and will keep out of sight, and I never can get acquainted with folks if they keep out of sight."

You see, Farmer Brown's Boy was just beginning to understand something that Peter Rabbit and the other little people of the Green Forest learned almost as soon as they learned to walk. That if you don't want to be seen you mustn't be heard. So he didn't whistle as he felt like doing, and he tried not to make a bit of noise as he followed an old cowpath toward a place where he knew the berries grew thick and oh, so big! And all the time he kept his eyes wide open, and he kept his ears open, too.

This is how he happened to hear a little cry, a very faint little cry. If he had been whistling he wouldn't have heard it at all. He stopped to listen. He never had heard a cry just like it before. At first he couldn't make out just what it was or where it came from. But one thing he was sure of, and that was that it was a cry of fright. He stood perfectly still and listened with all his might. There it was again. "Help! Help! Help!" and it was very faint and sounded terribly frightened. He waited a minute or two, but heard nothing more. Then he put down his pail and began a hurried look here, there, everywhere. He was sure that it had come from somewhere on the ground, so he peered behind bushes and peeped behind logs and stones, and then just as he had about given up hope of finding where it came from he came around a little turn in the old cowpath and there right in front of him, was little Mr. Gartersnake, and what do you think he was doing? Well, I don't like to tell you but he was trying to swallow one of the children of Blickytoes the Tree Toad.

Annual School Sports Held at St. Margaret's

Many Parents and Friends Attend Field Day at Girls' School—Christian House Wins Silver Cup for Inter-House Events

There was a large attendance of parents, friends and former pupils at the annual sports day held yesterday at St. Margaret's School. Under the direction of the gymnastic mistress, Miss Booth, an interesting programme of sports events was run off, and after tea, which was served in the school dining-room, the prizes were presented in the gymnasium by Mr. Kyrle Symons, headmaster of St. Michael's School.

Mr. Symons was introduced by Miss Barton, the headmistress, and he congratulated the winners upon their success, commenting upon the splendid spirit of sportsmanship which had always been typical of St. Margaret's. He took the opportunity of extending a warm welcome to Miss Barton upon her return from England and wished the school every possible success.

The inter-house sports cup was won by Christian House with 59 points, followed by Canmore House with 34 points, and Turgot House with 24. The senior championship cup was won by Rosemary Williams with 10 points, Yvonne Lowden winning the runner-up prize with 7 points. The intermediate championship was won by Sheila Williams with 11 points, and Naneen Stephens was runner-up with 7½ points. The winner of the junior championship was Rosalind Wilkinson, 13 points; runner-up, Sheila Frances with 7½ points, the cup having been presented by Rosemary and Sheila Williams.

Mrs. Carmichael Addresses Club

DUNCAN, Sept. 26.—Mrs. Alfred Carmichael, Victoria, first vice-chairman of the British Columbia Regional Council of Canadian Clubs, addressed a meeting here yesterday afternoon at the Agricultural Hall. The object was the formation of a Canadian Club in the Cowichan district.

Twenty-one women attended and a committee chosen who will make a canvass for members and meet again in a week's time, when it is practically certain that definite action for the formation of a local Women's Canadian Club will be taken.

The committee selected yesterday included Mrs. D. A. Girvin, convener; Mrs. C. W. O'Neill, secretary; Miss G. Beaver, Mrs. Grant Colborne, Mrs. J. B. Turnbull and Mrs. A. M. Manser.

Mrs. C. Wallich, Cowichan, moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Carmichael for coming to address the meeting, and Mrs. C. M. French voiced the thanks of the meeting to local Rotary ladies, who hired the hall and made the meeting possible.

Jubilee Hospital Auxiliaries Are Busy With Plans

Tickets are in great demand for the hospital ball to be held at the Empress Hotel on October 16 by the Senior and Junior Women's Auxiliaries of the Royal Jubilee Hospital, and it is expected that there will be an even larger crowd than last year.

Mrs. John Phethean, of the Senior Auxiliary, and Miss Ines Carey, of the Junior group, are the general conveners. Bridge will be arranged for non-dancers, and reservations are being made with Mrs. J. D. Hunter; Mrs. Norman Cook, Miss Ines Carey and Mrs. Tallamy are in charge of tickets, and Mrs. G. A. Watson, president of the Junior Auxiliary, is assisting with plans for the ball.

A sit-down supper will be served in the main dining room and a special programme of dance music is being arranged by the orchestra.

Y.P.S. News

VICTORIA WEST

The opening meeting of the Victoria West United Church Y.P.S. took place recently, with Cecil Milley, past president, in charge. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Glyn Jones; vice-president, Jack Price; honorary president, Rev. W. R. Brown; secretary-treasurer, Evelyn Wright; press reporter, Doris Burrows. Cecil Milley thanked the retiring officers for their work during the past year, and the newly-elected president then took the chair. Rev. W. R. Brown gave a short talk of encouragement to the young people and wished them success in the coming year. It was arranged that an executive meeting be held to discuss programmes for future meetings. At the close of the evening, games were enjoyed. On Tuesday a social will be held and each member is asked to bring as many friends as possible.

Drama Association Has Distinguished Patronage

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Premier Pattullo Become Patrons of Society—Presentation Made to Major L. Bullock-Webster

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia, and Hon. T. D. Pattullo, Premier of the province, have consented to become patrons of the British Columbia Drama Association.

Announcement was made at the executive meeting of the association held a few evenings ago at the office of the treasurer, H. G. Hinton, on which occasion a handsome silver coffee pot was presented to the president, Major L. Bullock Webster, in recognition and appreciation of the work he has done in developing community drama and an interest in the drama throughout the province.

PLAN 1937 FESTIVAL

The main object of the meeting was to formulate plans for the 1937 festival. It was decided that if at all possible arrangements should be made to hold the Pacific Drama Conference in Victoria at the same time as the 1937 festival. It was reported that negotiations were in progress with C. Aubrey Smith, of Hollywood, with a view to obtaining the services of a highly-qualified adjudicator, also that there was a strong possibility of a Chinese and a Japanese group entering plays in the festival next Spring.

It was decided to recommend to the annual general meeting that the name of the association be changed to the British Columbia Drama Association (formerly Provincial Drama Association).

A sub-committe, with H. S. Hurn as chairman, was appointed to make preliminary arrangements regarding the location of the 1937 festival.

A number of applications for membership from various parts of the province were received and approved.

JUDGES REPORT

Reports of the three judges of the 1936 Essay Contest were read, the Daily Times Challenge Shield for the best twelve essays sent in by any school in the province, being won by the Oak Bay.

Highest marks for the best individual essay were awarded to Miss Daphne Preston, and it was decided that this essay should be read from the stage during the 1937 festival.

The resignation of Miss Gladys Sheppard, who is now resident in Hollywood, from the publicity committee, was accepted with regret and a letter expressing appreciation of her past services to the association was ordered to be sent her. Mrs. P. Edmund Corby, a foundation member of the association, was elected chairman of the publicity committee for the ensuing year.

Proofs of a series of papers on Community Drama, which it is proposed by the association to issue subsequently, were submitted to the meeting and approved.

H. Roy Goldfinch, the honorary secretary, presented details regarding the arrangements now in progress for the holding of affiliated up-country drama festivals.

It was decided to add a new subcommittee to the organization, viz., the hospitality committee, for the purpose of arranging local transportation and social entertainment for out-of-town and American guests.

Birthday Party

A most enjoyable birthday party was held on Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Ferguson, Empire Street, when twenty little guests were invited to celebrate Maureen Ferguson's seventh birthday. Pink and green streamers and a three-tier birthday cake with seven candles adorned the tea table. Music, dancing and games were enjoyed and the prize winners for the games were Barry Lucas and Catherine Rounding. Among the children were a number of pupils of the Florence Clough dancing school, who gave attractive dance numbers. Mrs. Ferguson was assisted during tea by Mrs. F. Goode, Miss Joan Brice and Miss Jean Ray. The invited guests were Shirley Cave, Arline Cave, Beverley Francis, Arline Ferguson, Burton McCann, Catherine and Brian Rounding, Elaine and Alan Beckerley, Verne Stables, Mardell and Gail Benson, Dianne Wilson, Keith and Stanley Wilson, Jean and Flossie Ray, Miriam Brice, Audrey Berryman, George Brice, Barry Lucas and Bryant Jeeves.

Shower and Supper Party

Mrs. D. Lidstone and Miss E. Parker were hostesses at a charmingly arranged miscellaneous shower and supper, held at the latter's home, 384 Gorge Road West, on Friday, in honor of Miss Elsie Kilby, an October bride-to-be. The gifts were concealed in a cedar chest, the guest of honor being presented with the key. Games were enjoyed, the winners being Miss E. Kilby, Mrs. Grey, Mrs. Porter and Mrs. Rhodes. The guests present included Mrs. W. Rice, Mrs. E. Rice, Mrs. C. Logan, Mrs. R. Farrow, Mrs. F. Parker, Mrs. W. Kilby, Mrs. D. Porter, Mrs. H. Rhodes, Mrs. T. Murray, Mrs. Grey, Mrs. V. Hirst, Misses G. Loughney, A. Ordano, E. Kay, O. Kilby, N. Ferguson, J. Drysdale, R. Appleby, M. Murray and T. Parker.

Hostesses at Shower

Mrs. A. Pimlott and Mrs. A. Stafford were hostesses at a miscellaneous shower held recently in honor of Miss Gladys Bichard, whose marriage will take place shortly. The table decorations were carried out in colors of Nile green and pink, with a mock three-tier wedding cake, mounted with a miniature bride and groom and attendants. Cards were played during the evening, prizes being won by Mrs. E. Langlois and Mrs. Thomas. Those present were Mesdames G. Thomas, Barker, Worswick, E. Langlois, Burton, Silburn, W. Nicholson, R. Beecher, L. McKay, G. Pimlott, C. Pimlott, Game, Holdridge, S. Bichard, J. Bichard, Misses V. Pimlott, V. Game, V. Holdridge and V. Thomas.

Weddings

LORENZEN—BRINKMAN

The harvest decorations in St. Mary's Church made a delightful setting for the wedding of Dorothy Grace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Brinkman, Chamberlain Street, and Mr. James C. Lorenzen, son of Mrs. I. Lorenzen, Sidney, and of the late Mr. Lorenzen, which took place last evening at 8 o'clock, Rev. Canon Nunns officiating. Mr. Dudley Wickett presided at the organ.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a smart turquoise blue suit of heavy crepe, and a shallow-crowned hat of soft fawn felt, with a wide brim, and a shoulder spray of Talisman roses and gardenias, and attending her was her sister, Miss Winnifred Brinkman, in a tunic frock of fawn crepe and a matching hat, adorned with a spray of pink rosebuds and bouvardia. Mr. Howard Bull was best man.

A reception for relatives and a few intimate friends was held after the service at the home of the bride's parents, where asters, golden-rod and Michaelmas daisies were arranged throughout the rooms, supper being served from a table centred with the wedding cake and decorated with pink and white flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzen will leave shortly for Alice Arm, where they will spend the Winter.

Oriental Influence Is Noticed in Make-Up

Evening wraps are being fashioned of Manchurian ermine, and evening gowns of Chinese lamask in Oriental colors are very beautiful. Hair rolled high and away from the face in the Chinese manner gives emphasis to Chinese make up. The eyebrows must be sleek and shining from brushing with colorless eye-cream. A drop of oil on the eyelids, powder of a dusky shade and Chinese red lipstick, with little rouge, give a lovely effect. With this a perfume suggestive of incense is the finishing note.

BALINESE INFLUENCE

Even newer than Chinese or any of the "native" make-ups is the one to be fashioned after the beautiful women of Bali. Deep, smooth skin tones can be produced by dusky powder foundations, and powder of a rich glowing color to give the mat finish. Eyebrows arched and brushed until shining, when turned up just a tiny bit at the ends with the aid of an eyebrow pencil. Dark lipstick, a little rouge over cheeks worn high and close to the nose, but no eye-shadow. The hair should be arranged loosely over the ears, and flower earrings enhance the Balinese effect. Only flower perfumes are recommended with this fashion.

In entire contrast to these modes is the new Empire trend, sponsored by some of the Paris houses, and which is particularly suited to the fair-skinned woman.

High jewel tones and white seem to be the favorable colors for the Empire silhouette with its low-cut decolletage. The hair is brushed high on the head and arranged in Stevens, Edmonds, B.C. The wedsmooth ringlets. The jewel tones

Dyeing Is as Important as Dry Cleaning With Pantorium

PANTORIUM Dry Cleaning brings out all the original lustre and beauty of the fabric, but Pantorium Dyeing does a great deal more. It completely changes the outward appearance of a suit or dress so that it can be worn with the feeling of pride and interest one would have in a new garment.

When a suit, dress, coat or article of household draperies comes to Pantorium to be Dyed it goes direct to an expert chemist-dyer. He not only knows all about dyes and dyeing methods but he knows fabrics as well. There is no chance of your being disappointed with the result because Pantorium can tell you in advance the exact shade you can expect when the garment is returned. And if the article cannot be dyed satisfactorily, because of the variety of materials in its composition, Pantorium will tell you frankly. After all, isn't that the kind of service which everybody appreciates?

"The short hot-weather Sunday church service hasn't even been heard of at the Free Presbyterian Church of Scotland at Localsh, Huron County, Ontario, quotes The Canadian Baptist from the daily press. 'Last Sabbath morning Communion Sunday, the worshippers sat through a two-and-a-half-hour service—no organ or musical instrument of any sort—a precentor leading—the Psalm singing—no hymns. The evening service lasted only two hours.'"

Marriage Is Solemnized At St. John's

The marriage of Vivian, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Dodds, 3919 North Quadra Street, and Mr. Leonard Game, only son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Game, 708 Admirals Road, took place last evening in St. John's Church at 8 o'clock in a setting of Michaelmas daisies and hellenium. Rev. Canon Chadwick conducted the service and Mr. G. Jennings Burnett played the wedding music.

Mr. Dodds gave his daughter in marriage, and she wore a princess gown of ivory satin, with long sleeves puffed at the top and tapering below the elbows to tight cuffs, her veil of lace being arranged beneath a halo of orange blossoms. She carried an arm bouquet of pink and cream roses.

The two bridesmaids, Miss Theresa Dodds and Miss Vera Game, sisters of the bride and groom, were dressed alike in frocks of turquoise blue silk crepe, made with full bishop sleeves and gathered at the throat with a brilliant ornament. They wore large hats of silver grey felt, and carried bouquets of pink carnations. Mr. Stanley Bishard, Vancouver, was best man, and Mr. Fred Hall and Mr. Edward Fisher were ushers.

SMALL RECEPTION

A small reception of relatives and a few close friends was held after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, where Michaelmas daisies and golden rod were used as decorations, supper being served in the dining-room from a flower-decked table centred with the wedding cake.

Mrs. Dodds had chosen for the occasion a gown of midnight blue georgette and a grey hat, and Mrs. Game wore a frock of crepe-back satin in the same shade, and a black hat, their corsage bouquets being white carnations.

Anglican Young People

CATHEDRAL

Dean Quainton addressed members of the Cathedral Association at its meeting recently on the subject of applying religion to politics, which proved entertaining as well as educational. Later in the evening, members were divided into four groups, with Doreen Maynard, Elynth Anderson, Chris Howland and Roy Gibbs as group leaders. The next meeting will be an educational visit.

ST. MARK'S

A meeting of St. Mark's A.Y.P.A. was held recently. The nomination and election of officers took place and the following were elected: Patron, Rev. O. L. Jull; president, William Anderton; vice-president, William Butts; corresponding secretary, Norah Cullen; recording secretary, Winifred Fisher; publicity secretary, Mrs. Ethel Anderton; treasurer, Mabel I. G. L. Holyoake; executive members, Hazel M. Fletcher and Gladys Rogers; badminton conveper, Mr. Arthur Matcham; billiard convener, Mr. K. Elliott. The following members were appointed delegates to the Victoria and District Local Council: Miss M. Holyoake and Messrs. William Anderton and Butts. Mr. Butts was appointed delegate to the British Columbia A.Y.P.A. provincial conference at Nanaimo from October 10 to 12. Arrangements have been made to hold the installation service of the officers in St. Mark's Church this evening. Announcement was made of the Local Council rally at St. Saviour's Church and the essay competition. The next meeting will be held on Wednesday, October 7, and an executive committee meeting next Thursday at 8 p.m. in St. Mark's Hall.

LANGFORD, COLWOOD

Members of the Langford and Colwood A.Y.P.A. met at the home of the president, K. Hincks. Plans were made for the A.Y.P.A. provincial conference, which will be held October 11 and 12. The president gave a report of the recent Local Council meeting. Members hope to play badminton this season. Rev. Canon Terry was the guest speaker. Refreshments were served by Mrs. H. A. Hincks and Miss S. Brown. The annual meeting will be held October 6. All young people over sixteen years will be invited.

ST. SAVIOUR'S

About forty young people representing several branches of the A.Y.P.A. under the jurisdiction of the Victoria and District Local Council met in St. Saviour's Parish Hall on Thursday evening for the purpose of assisting the council in the formation of a St. Saviour's branch of the A.Y.P.A. The opening of the rally was in the nature of a social, and numerous enjoyable games were conducted by Mr. Jack Aylwin. Following a delightful violin solo by Mr. G. Venables, the business of the evening was commenced. Mr. Len Dixon, chairman, gave a brief outline of the history of A.Y.P.A. for the benefit of the young people of St. Saviour's Parish and he introduced the speakers of the evening, Rev. E. O. Robathan, Mr. Jack Aylwin and Mr. E. Grey, who informed the young people as to the aims and objects of the association. Following a brief discussion, the fourteen young people representing St. Saviour's Parish passed the motion that they should form a St. Saviour's branch of the A.Y.P.A. and chose a nominating committee to prepare for the election of officers. The next meeting of the be held in the Parish Hall, Thursday evening. All young people in the parish are cordially invited to attend.

President of Dominion W.A. Arriving Soon

With regard to the expected visit of Mrs. R. E. Wodehouse, president of the Dominion Board of the Woman's Auxiliary, to the Up-Island parishes, next week, it has been found necessary to alter the date of the meeting in Duncan to October 7, and the meeting in Nanaimo will be held on October 5, Monday, these meetings being held in the afternoon, and the Courtenay meeting on Tuesday as previously arranged.

Mrs. Wodehouse will be accompanied by the Diocesan president of Columbia W.A., Lady Lake, and Miss Foster, third vice-president, who has convened the meetings.

Mrs. Wodehouse is thus affording the Up-Island members an opportunity of meeting and hearing her in their own districts, but it is hoped that as many branches as possible will send representatives to the annual meeting in Victoria to hear all the special speakers, and take part in the opening service of Holy Communion in Christ Church Cathedral at 10.30 on Tuesday, October 13.

At the 2 p.m. session on Tuesday, the Dominion president will give her address.

TODAY'S Rogers' PURE SUGAR CANE GOLDEN SYRUP

GOLDEN CHEWS

2 cups flaked and chopped dates
½ cup chopped nuts
2 eggs
½ cup flour
½ cup Rogers' Golden Syrup
1 teaspoon BAKING powder
½ cup bran

Beat the eggs until light and add the syrup and bran. Sift the flour and baking powder and add to the egg mixture. Add the fruit and nuts and combine well. Pour into a well-greased and floured cake pan. Bake in a moderate oven. Cool thoroughly before marking into squares and rolling in powdered sugar. Nut... or make a tasty add... any tea table.

Wins Her Way to Success

LOTTE LEHMANN

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

LOTTE Lehmann, Metropolian Opera Company star, refused to admit defeat, and fought her way to artistic greatness in the face of hardships and discouragements such as few artists are called upon to face.

She was born at Perleberg, Germany, and first visited the United States in 1930-31. She was a member of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, scoring notable successes as Eva in "Die Meistersinger," and other standard operas.

Mme. Lehmann is a soprano, and recently was heard over the radio in a national broadcast. She was married to Otto Krause in 1926. She has been awarded an honorable membership in the State Opera, Vienna, and Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, France.

Women's Institutes

SOOKE

Eight tables of military five hundred were in play at the card party given by the Sooke and North Sooke Institute in the Community Hall on Friday evening. Winners at the highest table were Mrs. A. Granny heard the dentist say ...
"MOST BAD BREATH BEGINS WITH THE TEETH!"

Try Colgate's Toothpick Test!

Take a toothpick or some UNSCENTED dental floss. Clean between your teeth. Does it reveal small food deposits? Smell it. If it has an unpleasant odour, it means your teeth are improperly cleaned. These food deposits are a common cause of bad breath and tooth decay, dentists say.

Clean Your Teeth The Colgate Way

With Colgate's Dental Cream brush thoroughly the upper teeth from gums down, lower teeth from gums up. Then rinse your mouth. After that put a bit of Colgate's on your tongue and take another sip of water. Gargle well back in the throat, then flush the water through your teeth. Rinse again with clear water. That's all.

You Get These Colgate Results

Colgate's penetrating foam gets into all crevices and between the teeth even where the toothbrush cannot reach. It dissolves odour breeding food deposits and washes them away.

Colgate's safe polishing ingredient keeps your teeth white and sparkling. Colgate's delicious peppermint flavor leaves your mouth refreshed and your breath fragrant.

● For those who prefer it, Colgate's Dental Powder will give the same Colgate results. Large tin 20c.

PLEASED WITH IMPROVEMENT

Chief Heatley Thanks Those Helping in Victoria Safety Campaign

Police Chief Thomas Heatley yesterday expressed his appreciation for all assistance and co-operation given him and the police department during the safety campaign, which will conclude on Wednesday.

"I am pleased to note pedestrians, motorists and cyclists now seem to fully realize their individual responsibilities for making the city one of complete safety," Chief Heatley said.

"Everyone should remember that every day is a safety day and utmost caution should be exercised in conforming to traffic regulations. Proper hand signals must be given at all time. Pedestrians, for their own safety as well as that of motorists, must obey the traffic signals."

Chief Heatley gave special thanks to R. S. Bain, who has assisted him in the campaign; newspapers; Victoria Automobile Club, and other organizations.

Lake Cowichan

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. McIlvride, Victoria, are spending a holiday hunting and fishing, at the Lakeside Cabins.

Miss Betty Morrison, Vancouver, who has been spending two weeks visiting her father, Mr. Frank Morrison, Ganges Harbor, has returned home.

A pretty ceremony took place at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon, when the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Graham Shove was christened at St. Mark's Church, Saltspring Island, Rev. C. H. Popham, vicar of the parish, officiated. The child was given the names of Nona Diana and the godparents were: Mrs. Desmond Crofton and Miss Denise Crofton, Ganges; Mr. Peter Turner, Surrey, England, and Mr. Dick de Mule, Vancouver. Following the ceremony, a reception at which about thirty guests were present, was given by Mr and Mrs Shove at their home, "Gallee," Ganges. The rooms were prettily decorated for the occasion with asters, cosmos, dahlias and Michaelmas daisies. The party, which was given by the host and hostess with a joint purpose, in honor of the baby and in celebration of the thirty-third anniversary of the wedding of Mrs Shove's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Crofton, was greatly enjoyed by all present. Prior to the toasts, an amusing speech of congratulation and good wishes was made by Major F. C. Turner, who had stood as proxy for his son at the christening service. Among those present were Mr and Mrs E. Crofton, Mr. and Mrs D. K. Crofton, Mrs. Desmond Crofton, Misses Doreen, Denise and Dulcie Crofton, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Halley, Mrs. D. S. Harris, Mrs. D. Turner, Messrs. H. W. Bullock, Critchley, Donald Corbett and Fred Morris.

New West Coast Roads Employing Large Crews

Long Beach-Tofino Section Is Being Constructed By Dominion Government as a Federal Measure to Join With the Existing Highway

LONG BEACH, Sept. 26.—With a large crew of men, work is rapidly going forward on the Long Beach-Tofino Road. This work is under the direction of Percy Trill, of Parksville, who was building the road in past seasons and other roads on the Island, including the Coal Harbor-Hardy Bay Road at the north end of the Island.

The work on this link of the highway is being done by the Dominion Government, and a steam shovel, tractor, grader and other necessary machinery are already on the ground and some gravelling and ditching is expected to be completed while the weather permits. A small gravel pit has been opened at the western end of Long Beach, thus affording gravel for the Long Beach end of the road with only a short haulage. While the right-of-way for this eleven-mile stretch of road was cut several years ago, it still remains to be properly ditched, drained and graveled before it can be opened to all-year traffic.

At the present the men are housed in what was the Government Relief Camp at Long Beach, thus utilizing equipment already on the spot, but it is expected that, as the work proceeds, the camp will be moved nearer to Tofino.

All available local men have been employed and additional men have been brought in from Nanaimo and other Island points.

VALUE TO WEST COAST

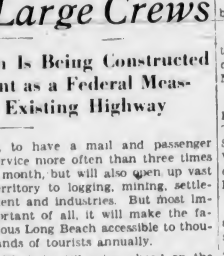

When this link of the highway is completed and open to traffic, it will mean much to the West Coast and the entire whole of Vancouver Island. It will not only make it possible for Tofino, and all points above it, to have a mail and passenger service more often than three times a month, but will also open up vast territory to logging, mining, settlement and industries. But most important of all, it will make the famous Long Beach accessible to thousands of tourists annually.

Work is still going ahead on the Sprout Lake-Wreck Bay mining trail and it is reported that the main crew on the advance work will be through to the shore of Kennedy Lake shortly. This is a distance of about five miles from where the new trail joins the Long Beach Road. While this new project is designated as a mining trail and is being built primarily to help open this vast mining territory, it is regarded locally as the first step towards the building of the road connecting the famous Long Beach with the Island Highway. This trail follows the original survey of the Sprout Lake-Long Beach Road.

ASSIST MINING

In the past, prospecting and mining has been carried on in the Kennedy Lake area especially in the arm of the lake, which will now be made accessible by this new trail. This district is reported to be rich in minerals, but, owing to transportation being difficult and extremely expensive, the development of this area has been retarded. Kennedy Lake is the largest lake on the Island, with beautiful scenic attractions, large stands of timber and splendid water-power possibilities, but, up to the present time, the only way to gain access to it was via Clayoquot Sound and Kennedy River, and this route was to difficult and too remote to tempt commercial interests, despite the huge natural resources the district has to offer.

TRUE BEAUTY means beauty "All over"

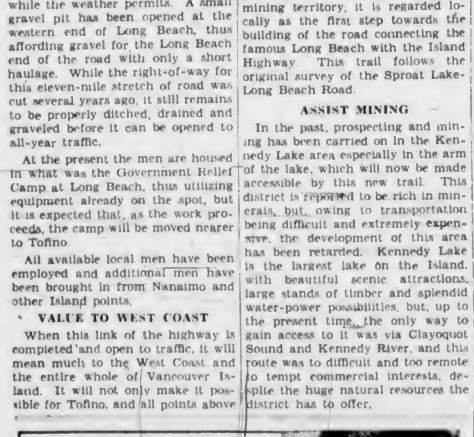

AND you can have this all-over loveliness that perhaps you've envied in other women. Your face and throat, your whole body, can be just as youthfully soft and smooth. Follow Palmolive's simple beauty treatment. You'll marvel when you see how quickly it brings new life and beauty to your skin.

Cleanses, Soothes, Beautifies

Costly olive and palm oils give to Palmolive its mild, penetrating lather. Going deep into your pores, it gently floats out powder, rouge and other impurities—lets them breathe and function normally. And, while Palmolive cleanses, it refreshes and soothes your skin ... leaves it healthy and radiant.

So make Palmolive your soap. Use it always, from today on, for all your skin. You'll have a complexion that's really youthful ... lovely all over.

TRY THIS PALMOLIVE BEAUTY TREATMENT

Use it not only for face, throat and shoulders, but for the bath as well. Gently massage into your skin a warm, rich Palmolive lather. Cleanse the pores thoroughly. Rinse with warm water, then with cold. That's all there is to this simple beauty treatment. Yet there is no surer way to real, all-over skin beauty. And here's another beauty hint. Palmolive, used as a shampoo, keeps your scalp healthy, hair soft and lustrous.

A Shoe With a Well-Earned Reputation

As an obscure but talented country doctor newly returned from post-graduate work in two of Britain's great hospitals with the prized degree of Licentiate of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, Dr. Locke first startled the world with his theory that foot trouble is a cause (rather than a result) of many ailments. It was Dr. M. W. Locke who designed and approved the M. W. LOCKE SHOE.

CHAPTER IX

Rose's hand on his arm now—Shane didn't remember just when she had freed her hand from his clasp—she led him to a little bower in a corner of the big rose garden, where a climbing Paul's Scarlet made a tent of crimson. They sat down upon a cool stone bench. Shane produced cigarettes. Lighted one for her, one for himself. The girl puffed slowly, then turned her face to his, holding his gaze.

"And now, Mr. Shane O'Hara," she said, "let's have what Don Timoteo thoughs he was covering up."

"I don't think he was really trying to cover up anything," Shane told her watching the intent face turned to him. "Perhaps—perhaps he sort of slurred over an important fact or two, from my angle. Or omitted the summing up, as a lawyer would call it. But I think you must have guessed the layout, or you wouldn't have asked the question."

"Well," said Rose, "I wasn't exactly born yesterday, and I know when people are holding out on me. Especially Granddaddy."

"And so what?" asked Shane.

"I imagine that Mr. Shane O'Hara will be at the inquest by request, for one thing," said the girl. "It will be pointed out that he was alone in the vicinity of La Paloma and Black Sam about the time when Black Sam got plugged . . . I hope you didn't have any trouble with him yesterday. You didn't say. You didn't—" she paused to smile ruefully, "have much to say about anything. On the way to San Diego, I mean."

Shane ighored the taunt.

"But I did have trouble with Black Sam. Or, rather," he corrected himself, "he bawled me out. Claimed the ranch was his. Had possession and was going to keep it."

"And was that all?"

"Yep," said Shane. "All I remember. Oh, no. He said I should take possession only over his dead body."

Rose shivered. There was a horrible prophecy in the words Shane had quoted.

"Not so good, Shane O'Hara," she averred, shaking her head, so that the adorable dark curls danced blithely. "Not so good. You see what I mean? Public thought is not noted for depth; it's ability to put two and two together and make eight or ten has been proved. Not so good."

"You mean," offered Shane, glad that this girl was concerned about him, regretting that they were not talking of matters more pleasant, "you mean there will be those who will say that I did—h-m!—take possession over his dead body?"

"Right," said the girl. "They'll say you had a motive and opportunity—and because Don Fernando forgot his cigar-case, you haven't got an alibi to offer. Not so good."

Somewhat belatedly, Shane thought, the idea was beginning to get across to him that he might become involved in this business more deeply than had at first seemed possible. Perception of this fact was like a little blow in the wind.

"You don't think—" he began, but bit back his words. As if she'd be sitting here in a rose garden with him, analyzing the situation, if she thought he had killed Black Sam Verdugo!

"Don't be silly," said Rose, understanding him. "Granddaddy would have known it the minute he saw you—if you had shot Black Sam."

"Oh!" exclaimed Shane, doubtfully. "You're just taking Don Timoteo's judbment, then?"

"Maybe," said Rose shortly. "It's good enough for me. And, Mister O'Hara, if he offers to use any of that same judgment in your behalf, don't refuse it. Don't turn it down. My Granddaddy is a very wise old owl."

"He's certainly been kind to me," said Shane. "But look here, Miss—Miss Rose, I don't like this at all, now that I see it closer. I'm just getting you folks all entangled in a mess that will bother you. I think—yes—I think I had better go away from Soledad."

Rose Delane sniffed.

"A fat chance you've got! To go away before the unquest. And as for afterwards . . . I don't like it I don't like it."

"Don't you worry your pretty head about me," begged Shane, sincerity in his voice. "I'll be all right. I'll go and tell Mr Coroner just what happened. Add there'll be Don Fernando to give evidence that when we took our ride in the hills I certainly didn't act as if I'd just killed a man."

The girl rose shook her skirt into place, fingered her hair, looked at the young man oddly.

"I wish I knew just what Don Fernando will say," she said. And then, before Shane could ask what she implied, walked away.

Shane studied her last remark, but could make no sense out of it. There was only one thing Don Fernando could say.

"Hello, sis," Teddy greeted her from his chair on one side of a table covered with stamp-albums and stamps and hinges and envelopes and catalogues—all the trappings of philately-worship. "You're lookin' as fresh as what-oh!" Dick Truesdale grinned amiably at her, threw her a "Hello, Rose."

Rose sat down on the couch.

"How are you feeling today, Teddy?" she asked after returning Dick's greeting—"Okay?"

"Okay Number One," replied Teddy. He was a cheerful soul, for a lad with a bum leg she told herself for the ten-thousandth time. Never a whine nor a whimper out of him. She was proud of him. But she couldn't picture Don Timoteo's grandson having a yellow streak.

"Just dropped in to say hello," she offered. "Been getting an earful about the shooting of Black Sam. Of course, you've heard."

Two heads nodded assent.

"Not much loss to the community, is it?" asked Dick, with the callousness of youth.

"Oh, Black Sam wasn't so bad," Teddy defended the dead. "Member he brought me some Mexican stamps once."

"Oh, did he?" said Dick. That, apparently, made a difference. "Maybe I shouldn't have said what I did."

Rose got up.

"Well, be good. Don't steal each other's stamps," she admonished. And then, as an afterthought, "Don Fernando was up to see you last night, wasn't he?"

"Yeah," said Teddy. "He came up. Said he'd come back after his cigar-case. So he dropped in on us to say howdy. And to say he had some Spanish stamps coming for me. Chinned quite a little while. Then remembered that O'Hara was waiting for him to go riding."

"Look here, Granddaddy," she said, taking him by the arm and gently pulling his beard. "There's a young man around here who's got funny notions. I wish you'd get him out of them."

"Meaning?" questioned Don Timoteo.

"Meaning Mr. Shane O'Hara," Rose said. "He thinks he's a nuisance to us—because of this Black Sam business. Talks about going away."

"That's nonsense," said Don Timoteo.

"What I told him," assented the girl. "And besides, I pointed out that he wouldn't be doing much running away until—until after the inquest, anyhow."

"That inquest may be bothersome," said Don Timoteo. "For him. You've been discussing it with him?"

Don Timoteo nodded his head.

"I see," he said. Then he put his thin old hands on his granddaughter's slim shoulders and looked at her from under lowered brows.

"You want he should stay around here, girl? Is that it?"

The words meant little, but Rose could read the question behind them. She nodded.

"He might," she said, "turn out to be interesting."

* * *

That blanket had been withdrawn for a minute so that the coroner and his six jurors might look upon the twisted dark face, passionate still in death, upon the bullet-hole through the clothing and the hairy breast in front, upon the bullet-hole through smooth back and clothing behind—a small purple puncture the last, a swollen purple crater the first—through which Black Sam's life had fled.

Six jurors took the oath, peered and nodded their heads. Looked at each other and nodded again. Plain as the written word: Black Sam had been shot through the back.

They covered him up and trooped back to the stiff yellow oak kitchen chairs which had been moved from Black Sam's dining-room for their use. Six jurors who had no personality now, who were merely the six parts of a legal machine to decide upon the manner of a fellow creature's death so far as they, in their wisdom, could so decide. Most of them had served the coroner before; they knew the procedure, what was expected of them.

Building Health in Schools

Health Service of the Canadian Medical Association and Life Insurance Companies in Canada

We have already said that the first duty of everybody who has any authority in schools, from superintendents down to janitors, and from trustees up to parents, is to see first that children are not harmed in body by the school routine, that is, are not harmed much, and also that they are not neglected in their homes, but have a decent break. But that is merely negative. Health is not merely the avoidance of injury and the absence of disease. Health is a glowing, beautiful, positive thing.

There is a two hundred page report to the British Parliament on twenty-five years of building up of health in British schools. In the past quarter century this report tells us, anaemia of girls has almost vanished. Ringworm is steadily disappearing. Blindness prevented. A verminous child is not to be found in school. Malnourished children are only 1 per cent instead of 10 to 20 per cent in the "better and more prosperous" times. Heart disease, rickets and tuberculosis have been steadily reduced and the condition of teeth is improving. An increasing number of open-air school rooms are provided. The general physical condition of the children is beyond all comparison with the past. By all these improvements children have been rendered much more fit for education. Education has been more closely adapted to individual needs; and finally, a health consciousness has been developed among parents.

But these things are just a beginning. What I have mentioned are still the negative phases of health, the vanishing of dirt and disease. It is a vision of positive health Sir George wants the Parliament and the people to get. He tells them again and again and I wish he could tell every teacher, every trustee, every good citizen in Canada—that the organized physical education of the body of every child has a psychological purpose, a recreational aim, a mental and moral intention, a broad and wholesome and general educational value. This is not a military drill on the Spartan plan, or the Mussolini plan to train goose-stepping cannon fodder, but all-round physical education to make fit and fine well-balanced people, for the world's work the world's play and the world's salvation.

For instance, dances are very valuable—important enough to be discussed page after page in a parliamentary report. Dancing trains in control, in balance of mind and body, in poise, in ease and lightness of movement. It trains eye and ear and develops a feeling of rhythm and order. It arouses imagination and the creative powers. English schools simply cannot get on without dancing—and swimming. Hygiene is taught in habits rather than in strictures.

Games are of the utmost importance. Children who play well now will work well, and co-operate well when they grow up. How many times have you heard that the Battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton? Let me tell you that many finer victories than Waterloo, and many better products than generalship have been won on the playing fields of Eton, of Moose Jaw, Antigonish, Medicine Hat, Smith's Corners, Lachine or Dauphin.

If it is true that playtime may be as high in educational values as work time, and recess periods may be as important as arithmetic lessons, why is that play time rests so little on the conscience of the teacher and is so incidental in the day's programme? A boy would not be allowed to take reading in class and pass up arithmetic, or to take grammar and cut out geography. We demand that there should be some kind of all-round-ness in his education. Then why should he be able to chuck all sports month after month, scarcely appear on the playground at all and no questions asked? If Greece was right and if England is right a boy might as well pass up reading as pass up games.

Some of these wonderful things that were told in Plato's day are new again today and are considered by us that they ought to be. Let me urge all who have anything to do with primary, or secondary, or university education to catch this new vision, this vision of sane, well-balanced, clear-thinking minds in healthy, strong, glowing, graceful bodies.

THEN SILENCE REIGNED

His father scowled at him, and Tommy waited.

Two minutes later. "Daddy, this egg is not fresh!"

One minute later. "Daddy, this egg is—"

"If you can't keep quiet at the table I'll give you something to make you!" roared his father. There is many a child would be glad of an egg for breakfast!"

Silence. Then in a whisper: "Daddy, can I leave the beak?"

Name Hugh Creed As New President

Ward Six Saanich Conservatives, Keating, held its annual meeting at the home of W. H. McNally, Veyanas Avenue, on Wednesday evening. Officers elected were as follows: Honorary president, Hon. R. B. Bennett, honorary vice-president, Dr. Frank Patterson; president, Hugh Creed; vice-president, Mrs. Henderson Lawrie, second vice-president, Mrs. M. Guy, and secretary, W. H. McNally. Plans were made for a social evening to be held in November. The platform and resolutions passed at the Conservative convention in Vancouver on June 29 and 30 were approved.

LONGSHOREM' HURT

CHEMAINUS, Sept. 26 — John Boyd Neale, longshoreman, thirty-five years of age, residing in Nanaimo, was seriously hurt here on Monday afternoon while working between decks on the King Edgar. In some manner he fell into the empty hold of the ship, a distance of nearly twenty-five feet. He was removed to the Chemainus General Hospital. He is suffering from two broken arms, head and internal injuries, his condition being serious.

DOCTORS CHECK KIDNEYS FIRST

Because they know that healthy Kidneys remove from the blood the waste matter—the excess acids and poisons, formed by the ever-changing human body as it decays and rebuilds itself. But if the Kidneys fail, illness surely follows. Backache, Rheumatism, Impure Blood, Lack of Energy, Too Frequent Urination, Sleeplessness, Headaches—all may result from faulty kidneys. As a health safeguard—as a wise precaution—regulate your kidneys frequently with Dodd's Kidney Pills—for over fifty years the favorite Kidney remedy—non-habit forming—safe. 105

TAKING NO CHANCES

A city bus pulled up at a request stop, where a lady was waiting to board it. She had a baby in her arms and a radio set on the ground at her side. The courteous conductor got down to help her and picked up the wireless set, and was the most astonished man on earth when the woman immediately snapped: "Oh no you don't! You might drop that! Ere, take the kid!"

That Body of Yours

(By James W. Barton, M.D.)

THE SAFE REDUCING DIET

When an overweight individual, wishing to reduce weight, is told by her physician to simply eat less food and she will lose weight, she goes at it half-heartedly because on former occasions she has cut down her food to some extent, didn't lose much weight, felt miserable, and became constipated.

If then she were told that she could eat as much, perhaps more food, lose weight, feel better and not be constipated, she would hardly be inclined to believe it. Nevertheless it is a fact that if instead of meat, eggs, butter, potatoes and bread, more lettuce, cabbage, celery, string beans, skimmed milk, tomatoes, cucumbers and clear soup were eaten there would be a noticeable drop in weight in from ten days to two weeks.

1. A pint of milk should be taken daily.

2. Vitamins should be included: Vitamin A from whole milk, cream, butter or eggs; and vitamins B and C from fruits and vegetables.

3. Bread, potatoes, sugar and other starchy foods should be reduced.

4. Butter, cream and other fats should be reduced.

5. Excess of sugar, jams, jellies and nuts should not be used.

6. Meat or fish or cheese or eggs should be eaten at least once a day.

7. Only enough fat should be used to make the food acceptable.

8. Generally speaking, the servings of meat, eggs, fish and cheese should be small and the servings of vegetables (leafy vegetables) and fruits should be large. Fruit juices should not be used.

9. With the average serving of one-half cup of vegetables, the allowance is one-half teaspoonful of butter.

CULBERTSON on CONTRACT

By Ely Culbertson

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

POOR, DOWNTRODDEN DUMMY

Average players are enormously handicapped by their deeply ingrained habit of regarding the dummy as a mere auxiliary, often invaluable in protecting or building tricks for their own hand, but hardly to be looked on as an equally important unit.

Aside from habit there is no basis whatever for this conception. Dummy's tricks count just as much on the score as declarer's. In fact it is a mistake to think of declarer's hand and dummy as two separate entities. The twenty-six cards should be subtly blended in a declarer's mind and a plan of operation selected on that basis. Today's hand will be extremely baffling to every one who is a victim of habit.

The bidding—

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♥	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	4 ♣	Double
4 ♦	Double	5 ♥	Pass
6 ♥	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding as may be seen, was peculiar to say the least. North felt that his hand was slightly too weak for an opening no trump (in which he was wrong; no trump was the correct bid) and therefore chose his higher and better three card minor. South's first two responses were all right, but his jump from four diamonds to five hearts was a "stretch," particularly since he should have feared the adverse club distribution after West's double. The mere fact that North, in response to the four club asking bid, showed the diamond ace and second round club control was not nearly enough to justify South's strong slam-try. (Asking bids, good as they are, cannot carry on alone. Their user must have a fair sense of values.)

But, fortunately for himself and partner, South's play proved immeasurably superior to his bidding. He ruffed West's opening spade lead and entered the dummy with a diamond to ruff a second spade. This process was repeated with the second diamond honor with a third spade, and then dummy's king of clubs was used as entry for the ruff of the last spade with the ace of trumps. South's last trump, then was led and dummy's king-queen-jack were played, declarer discarding his losing diamond and one club. Now a low club was led from dummy and declarer nonchalantly put on his seven. West won with the nine, but had nothing left but clubs, and, therefore, had to lead away from his queen up to South's ace. Of course, it was lucky for the declarer that West had held only two diamonds, since otherwise he would have been able to exit safely. But the fact remains that the hand was played correctly on the basis of the bidding, and the one opportunity grasped for fulfilling the over-ambitious contract. The crux was the conversion of dummy's three trumps into the master trump holding.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Question—What is the penalty when a player passes and then decides to change his pass to a bid?

Answer—A change from a pass to a bid is the same as a bid out of turn and the penalty is that partner is barred from further participation in the bidding.

Members of First Baptist Church in Own Home at Last

After Career Marked by Many Difficulties, Recent Purchase of Former Congregational Church On Quadra Street Provides Local Cause With Well-Equipped Edifice

By REV. DR. J. K. UNSWORTH

THIS is a happy day for the members of the First Baptist congregation of this city. After long years of wandering—more indeed than the historic forty years of the Israelites in the Arabian desert—they have come into their Promised Land. At long last they have a home of their own. They recently purchased the Metropolitan Institute where they have been tenants—just tenants—for eleven years. Today they relight the home fire on their own hearthstone.

No congregation in this city has had to battle with so many difficulties as has this. From its origin six decades ago, its middle name has been "trouble." And much of this has been because of the uncertain tenure of their earthly tabernacles. They lost their first edifice on Pandora Avenue to the mortgagee. A comely building on Herald Street, built in 1885, was destroyed by fire in 1907.

High hopes of the boom period gathered around the foundation laying of what was to be a metropolitan edifice on upper Fisgard Street. Only a huge gaping basement is there. A temporary building was erected at the corner of Yates and Quadra Streets. Temporary it was intended to be, and therefore framed as an inconsequential structure that resembled more a skating rink than a church edifice, yet it was occupied for full fifteen years from 1910 to 1925.

The Congregational Church building on Quadra Street was rented in the latter year and only bought a few months ago, more than ten years later. The congregation has been indeed a nomad, as compared to the other religious groups here. The Church of Our Lord has had but one home, also the Jewish Synagogue of Temple Emanu-El. St. Andrew's Presbyterian is in its second house of worship, both of them beautiful. The First Baptist cause has had a dozen stopping places. At last it is happily domiciled, and this is the day of rejoicing and re-dedication.

Pastor, First Baptist Church

FAITH AND PERTINACITY

That this congregation has not only maintained itself but has also done a fine Christian work is evidence of faith and pertinacity in its membership. Never did they appear to be daunted. Their middle name may have been "trouble," but they seem to have written "courage" in its place. It is a tribute to their spiritual life and sacrificial spirit that they have weathered so well the years of homelessness. The occupancy of the present church may bring a forward movement in the church life.

The building that the First Baptist people have taken over was erected by the Congregationalists. This Christian body had a cause here from 1859 to 1864, but was not permanently established until 1895. A church on the corner of Blanshard and Pandora—now put to commercial use—was outgrown, and the congregation built the Quadra Street structure at a cost, with the equipment, of $80,000. This advance step was taken under the leadership of Rev. Hermon A. Carson. The church was dedicated on June 15, 1913, Rev. Sidney Strong, of Seattle, preaching the opening sermons. Hon. T. W. Paterson had laid the cornerstone and Sir Richard McBride spoke at a public meeting following the dedicatory service.

At the national church union in 1925, the First Congregational group united with that of Metropolitan, near by, previously Methodists and Rev. A. K. McMinn, the Congregational minister at the time, became assistant to the Metropolitan United pastor, Rev. Dr. W. J. Sipprell. Thus taken over, the building became the Metropolitan Institute. It was rented to the Baptists, for limited use, the Metropolitan people carrying on its institutional work under its roof.

BUILDING WELL-EQUIPPED

The architectural motif of the building was to combine public worship with Christian education, using that term in its broadest sense. Opportunity for the social life of the congregation, for Sunday school activities and for general character building of the young people is provided for. There is a good gymnasium and convenient social rooms. The present congregation now takes over this opportunity.

The Baptists will find no alien atmosphere lingering in their new home. The principles and traditions of Congregationalism are very similar to that of the Baptist fellowship. Both are independents in church government, finding in the local congregation the direct headship of Christ. Both have the ideal of a Christian congregation as that of a brotherhood, in which there are no class distinctions, not even a clerical class. Because of this, the new proprietors will not want to change the legend on the cornerstone, the words of Christ: "One Is Your Master, Even Christ, and All Ye Are Brethren." The fact is that the two bodies are ecclesiastical sisters.

The main distinction is the insistence on baptism as expressing an act of faith on the part of the individual baptised, and immersion as the method. Congregationalists ordinarily baptize infants as an expression of the parents' faith and by sprinkling or affusion. This, which is to the Baptist a crucial question, is held by the sister group as secondary. Now that they are no longer tenants and transients but owners, a baptistry for immersion will be installed.

"TWELVE MILESTONES"

Heading a thumb-nail historical sketch with the Scriptural sentence: "Ebenezer; Hitherto Hath the Lord Helped Us," the following twelve milestones are appended to the order of service and programme of the week of re-dedication.

First Milestone, 1874—Through the instrumentality of Alex Clyde, who came to Victoria in 1874 from Stratford, Ontario, a small group of Baptists in the city met at various homes for prayer and conference.

Second Milestone, May 3, 1876—On May 3, 1876, the first Baptist Church in British Columbia was organized in Victoria, with fifteen constituent members, by Rev. William Carnes, who became its first pastor.

Third Milestone, September, 1876—In September, at the church's request, it was accepted into the fellowship of the Puget Sound Baptist Association of Washington Territory.

Fourth Milestone, February 22, 1877—February 22, 1877, a new church building on Pandora Street, erected at a cost of $6,000 was dedicated; at which service three persons were baptized.

Fifth Milestone, 1877—In the Summer of 1877 the Puget Sound Baptist Association met in Victoria, fifteen delegates being present.

Sixth Milestone, June, 1883—In June, 1883, the church was reorganized and renamed Calvary Baptist Church.

Seventh Milestone, 1885—Local expansion began. Mission stations and Sunday schools were started in outlying districts, becoming in turn nuclei of Emmanuel and Douglas Street Churches. Mother church at Victoria already had been instrumental in establishment of other churches at New Westminster, Chemainus, and other places.

Eighth Milestone, December 13, 1885—December 13, 1885, witnessed the dedication of a new church home on Herald Street. This building was opened free of debt. Rev. Walter Barss was pastor.

Ninth Milestone, 1907—In a disastrous city fire, the church was destroyed in 1907.

Tenth Milestone, 1910—Temporary building erected on corner of Yates and Quadra Streets, and occupied from 1910 until 1925. The church resumed the name of First Baptist Church.

Eleventh Milestone, 1925—Congregational Church building on Quadra Street was rented and occupied in 1925.

Twelfth Milestone, June, 1936—First Baptist Church purchased Congregational Church building, thus being once again established in a home of its own.

During the sixty years of its history the church has been served by eighteen pastors. Its present minister, Rev. George A. Reynolds, accepted its spiritual leadership in September, 1930.

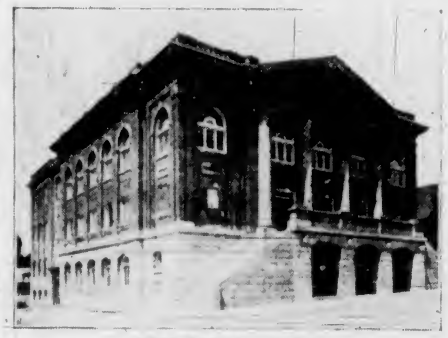

The programme includes sermons today by Rev. Elbert Paul, of Vancouver, president of the Baptist Union of British Columbia, and the minister, Rev. G. A. Reynolds, a lecture on Wednesday by Very Rev. C. S. Quainton, D.D., Dean of Columbia, on "The Chained Man," and a social evening on Friday.

"Now, tell me," said the magistrate, "when you knocked down this man, what was his attitude, roughly speaking?"

"It was," answered the woman.

To Be Re-Dedicated Today

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH
On Quadra Street, north of Pandora Avenue, from 1913 to 1925 First Congregational Church, then the Metropolitan Institute. Occupied since 1925 by First Baptist congregation, which purchased it last June.

Six Matches End With Honors Evenly Divided—Derby County Still in Top Berth With Eleven Points—Wrightson and Payne Are Stars

LONDON, Sept. 26 (CP).—Football experts are finding it hard to pick this season's outstanding team in the English League. First Division matches today saw six fixtures end with honors even and in most of these games contenders for the leadership figured. A 2-2 draw against Arsenal at Highbury kept Derby County on the top of the heap with eleven points, but Everton, Stoke City and Portsmouth are treading on the Midlanders' heels, one point behind.

YANKEES SET UP ANOTHER BALL RECORD

AMERICAN LEAGUE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP)—The New York Yankees added another record to their long string today as they downed the Washington Senators 3 to 1, getting eight hits to surpass the American League mark for total bases by one club in a season.

Their seven singles and a double boosted their total bases to 2,660, compared to the old league record of 2,657 compiled by the Yankees of 1930.

Two Cards Are Out in Bonehead Play

This play, pulled by St. Louis Cardinals against New York Giants in their crucial Polo Grounds series, ranks as one of the bonehead plays of baseball history. Garibaldi hit a two-base hit, but Henry Pippen, Cards' rookie pitcher, hung between third and home, holding Terry Moore between third and second. Then Pippen and his cohorts started running bases in reverse. Garibaldi got back to first, but Moore was tagged out at second and here is Pippen getting the same medicine near the plate. Fitzsimmons, Giant pitcher, has the ball and is tossing it to Catcher Mancuso. Pippen hits the dirt on all fours just as the camera clicks. A moment later he was out.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT . . . . . . By Ripley

EXPLANATION FOR YESTERDAY'S RIPLEY CARTOON

A Strange Accident—Mr. Gray was walking on the streets of Sheraden near Pittsburgh, when the breast pocket of his coat exploded in flames. A celluloid fountain pen, a card case of the same material and a comb became ignited through friction in the pocket. The fire was taken to the fire house. He was uninjured.

WEMBLEY, England, Sept. 26 (CP).—Sir Edmund Craine, chairman of a leading cycle company, today presented William "Torchy" Peden, of Victoria, with a cheque for £110 for the sporting manner in which the towering redhead took his elimination in the six-day bicycle race here.

Peden was eliminated when his partner, Southall, was involved in a spill soon after the race started. The Canadian rode alone steadily for many hours hoping a new partner could be found by the splitting up of another team through illness or injury. The German team, Kilian-Vopel, won the race. The Germans covered 1,939 miles scoring 776 points. Aerth and Buysse, of Belgium, were second, one lap behind, with 1,046 points. Douglas Peden, Victoria, and Henri Lapage, Montreal, thirteen laps behind with 311 points finished thirteenth.

GALLOPS TO VICTORY IN FEATURE RACE ON WELL-BALANCED CARD

Flag Bearer, Overlooked by Betters, Returns $24.20 Straight, $8.65 Place and $4.50 Show —Daily Double Returns Backers $93.10

Flag Bearer, ten-year-old gelding from the Hudkins Bros.' Stables, yesterday scored an easy triumph in the Empress Handicap, feature race on the day's racing card at the Willows enclosure. Taken to the front by Jockey Young soon after the start, Flag Bearer was a front-runner for the remainder of the distance and came home with two and one-half lengths to spare over Mr. Spence. Made the favorite by the betters, the latter could never run better than second. Shasta Dream was third.

Starting at the longest odds in the event, Flag Bearer, certainly overlooked by the punters, paid his faithful backers with $24.20, the best straight price of the day. Cerasus Lady and Galefier were the other thoroughbreds to return double figures when they paid $17.50 and $17.30, respectively, in the third and seventh races.

REPEAT VICTORIES

In six of the eight events repeat victories were registered as the winners, running back to their form, scored their second straight triumphs, while Flag Bearer made it three in a row.

Capt. Larco displayed plenty of speed in the initial race and won in the clear. Clemente Girl was second and Bad Bad third.

Billy Easter, with Chipping in the saddle, took the lion's share of the purse in the second race, as the thoroughbreds ran to form Spartan Beauty was second and Jungle Chick third.

Cerasus Lady came home in front in the next race at five and one-half furlongs and rewarded the betters with $17.50. Bracketed with Billy Easter, winner of the second gallop, Cerasus Lady made possible a daily double of $93.10.

Breaking on top of the field and making every post a winner, Kite, the favorite, clicked in the fourth race. Mahukona trailed the leader to the wire, while King Beauty took the show position.

Gaining its second win in two days, Miss Goldstream, from the Parsons Bridge Stables, captured the fifth race. Love Us was one length behind, and Ben Wiggins was a very close third.

GALEFIER WINS

"Cotton" Barnett brought Galefier to the wire in the seventh after a hard drive. Princess A.A. took the place slot and Red Casino finished third. Paris Leave, the favorite, was well out of the money.

Boy O' Mine, champion British Columbia jumper, had no difficulty in the steeplechase, and won by ten lengths. Dr. Millerick, with Tompkins in the saddle, was second, and Vancouver Express third. Officials announced following the race that Tompkins had been suspended indefinitely for deliberately trying to run Boy O' Mine off the course going to the first jump.

British Columbia's 1936 season will be brought to a close tomorrow with a bang-up racing card at the local track. Seven flat races and the steeplechase have been lined up for "going away day," and racing fans are promised a good programme. The first post time will be 1:45 o'clock.

LEADING TEAMS IN SCOTTISH FOOTBALL VICTORIOUS

Aberdeen, Rangers And Celtic Retain Coveted Positions

Gain Triumphs in First Division Play—Dons Blank Motherwell, 2-0—J. Delaney Is Hero in Celtic's 1-0 Victory Over The Hearts—Rangers Defeat Dunfermline, 5-3

GLASGOW, Sept. 26 (CP). — Scotland's football triumvirate of Aberdeen, Rangers and Celtic, threats for the league championship, displayed their real form today to consolidate their positions at the top of the circuit. The Dons have a two-point advantage over Rangers, who in turn lead last year's champions by two. Dundee is also tied with Celtic.

Celtic's visit to Tynecastle Park against Edinburgh's No. 1 team, Hearts, was regarded as one of the biggest tests of the day and ended in favor of the champions. J. Delaney, star of the battle, scored the only goal of the game six minutes from time.

It was a hard-fought affair with Celtic showing a little more "polish." Hearts, however, had not the best of luck, several players being injured with two, Murray and Anderson, watching the game from the sidelines for a time.

What promised to be a match bordering on the sensational was billed for Ibrox Park, but it turned into a free-scoring contest, with Rangers winning, 5-3, over Dunfermline. Goals by Chalmers and McGrogan shot the Fifers into a commanding lead, but McPhail, spearhead of the Ranger offence, knotted the count, getting one marker from a penalty. McGrogan again beat Dawson in the Ranger nets and Fiddie got it back from the cupholders before the first half ended.

BETTER COMBINATION

Showing better combination and speed, the home team forged ahead in the final forty-five minutes when Smith sizzled one in, and McPhail got his third. It was McPhail's first game for several weeks, and his return added materially to Rangers attacking force.

Eight years ago Aberdeen defeated Motherwell at Pittodrie, and until today the Dons could not duplicate the feat. Strauss and Beynon assured victory for the home players in the first half with two well-deserved goals. Scoring ended there.

With three new men on the line-up, Clyde was odds-on favorite to defeat Hibernians at Shawfield Park. At the end of ninety minutes, however, the shipbuilders had their sixth loss chalked against them. Dallas, a juvenile from Stonehaven playing in major league company for the first time, shot in the Hib's first goal, and McLean made it 2-0 before change of ends. Wilson reduced the margin and Miller finished the scoring to give Hibernians a 3-1 decision.

Partick Thistle, well up with the leaders in the championship table, stayed in the running with a 4-2 triumph over Albion Rovers. Playing two reserve backs, the Thistles jumped into an early lead when Smith and McSpadden counted. Bruce, from a penalty, scored for the Rovers to make the first half score stand at 2-1. McKennan and Wallace added two more for Partick before Lyon netted for the nineteenth position outfit.

St. Mirren and Falkirk, companions in the climb to First Division status this Spring, had "away" games. The Saints found it difficult to dispose of Queen of South, 2-1, while Falkirk fell, 1-0, before Perth's entry, St. Johnstone. At Dumfries, the Paisley team drew first blood when Cunningham netted from a penalty. In the second half Queen of South equalized, Cumming getting the goal. Black notched the final counter. St. Johnstone had to fight hard to beat the Fir Park club. After a scoreless first half Lorimer wriggled through the Falkirk defence for a counter.

More of a fight is being waged in the Second Division after Saturday's games. Raith Rovers and Morton are in first and second positions respectively, Cowdenbeath made it 4-1 against the Rovers, while Leith Athletic edged out Morton, 2-1. The third place is held jointly by St. Bernards, Cowdenbeath, Ayr United and Dumbarton, two points behind Raith and one less than Morton.

The sixteen best scores will qualify to play off for the city championship and possession of the cup, donated by Mrs. David Spencer.

Basketballers to Meet at Y.M.C.A. Tomorrow Night

AN important meeting of the Victoria and District Basketball League will be held tomorrow evening in the Y.M.C.A. at 7:30 o'clock. All teams contemplating entering the league must have their entries in, as no entries will be accepted after this date. Delegates from all teams are asked to attend as a report of the British Columbia Basketball Association meeting will be given.

There will be other flights, according to the number of entries. Post entries will be accepted.

SAANICH TEAMS TO OPEN PLAY

Double-Header Will Usher In Season at Lake Hill Park —First Game 1:30

The Norman Whittaker Cup will be at stake this afternoon when the Saanich and district football clubs swing into action in a double-header at Lake Hill Park, Reynolds Road.

Victoria Meat Market will tackle the newly-organized Saanich Native Sons squad in the opening game at 1:30 o'clock with Teddy Hawkes as referee.

Last year's champions, Pitzer & Nex, are scheduled to meet the Marigold eleven in the second game. No referee has yet been secured for the second attraction and another appeal for arbiters to handle league fixtures has been issued by the officials.

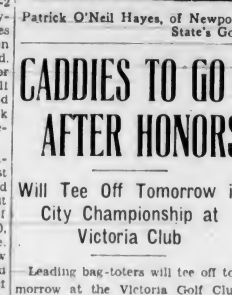

The Saanichton club has signified its intention to participate in the loop. Hiram Casillo, secretary, reported. They are still awaiting word from another team, the Cooperage, who are as yet undecided. It is rumored that they are endeavoring to gain entrance into the newly-formed intermediate league, which is being inaugurated in the city this year.

GOLF FACTS

NOT THEORIES

By ALEX MORRISON

There are a Hundred ways of helping or hurting others on the course. One way to hurt others is by digging up the putting surface. This can be done when the green is soft, either by a ball, your shoes, your caddy, your club or the hole marker.

In lifting your ball and making a mark to indicate where your ball is to be replaced, you should avoid leaving any break in the putting surface. If the green is soft, you should exercise care in walking about, likewise see that your caddy does not make footprints in another player's line.

It is tough to find your ball in a divot hole through the fairway, but you have a fighting chance to overcome this handicap. A rough spot between your ball and the cup on the green is about tops in bad breaks because it makes a successful putt almost impossible. It originates through carelessness.

Recreation Centre Activities

The recreational classes will start in Victoria at an early date in October. Mrs. R. E. Horsfield will again be in charge of the women's work and will be assisted by Miss F. Borde.

Members will be pleased to hear that A. C. Batchelor will be back in Victoria to carry on his work with the men's division. Assisting him will be Harry Gordon-Cooper who is one of Vancouver's outstanding leaders. Other leaders have not yet been named.

It is planned to have dancing classes in the Memorial Hall on Wednesday evenings and Friday afternoons. There will be swimming in the Crystal Garden and it is hoped that the Victoria High School will be available for gym classes.

Hockey and basketball teams have been suggested as new activities and it is hoped that a monthly dance can be held at the Crystal Garden. It is expected that outside centres will be established at Lake Hill Community Hall, Esquimalt and North Saanich.

The date of opening and registration will be announced at an early date.

BADMINTON CLUB NAMES OFFICERS

The annual general meeting of the Willows Badminton Club was held at the Oak Bay Municipal Hall recently. There was a good attendance, and the following officers were elected for the coming season: Honorary president, Col. G. A. Phillips; honorary vice-president, Col. R. S. Worsley; president, G. H. Walton; vice-president, H. B. Witter; secretary-treasurer, J. P. Phillips; executive committee, Major J. C. MacDonald, Colonel A. E. Harris, S. P. Birley, Miss B. Nelson, Miss M. Hughes and Miss U. McAulay.

Play will open Friday, October 2. Junior play, however, will not commence until Saturday morning, October 10.

Minnesota Gophers Turn Back Washington Huskies

Open 1936 Football Season With 14-7 Victory Before Capacity Throng of 37,000 at Seattle —Make Winning Points in Final Period

WASHINGTON STADIUM, SEATTLE, Sept. 26 (AP). — Still on a triumphal rampage, the University of Minnesota opened its 1936 football season today with its eighteenth consecutive victory, smashing the touted University of Washington Huskies, 14 to 7, before a capacity throng of 37,000 in this horseshoe stadium.

The thrilling triumph started the Gophers on their way toward another national championship, and safely protected their undefeated record of three successive years.

Minnesota has rolled up a record of twenty-five straight games without defeat, but four ties were mixed with victories in 1933. Since the last tie, the Gophers have won eighteen in a row.

The big inter-sectional battle today was a toss-up until the final period when the Minnesota warriors, taking their own breaks and most of the punishment, put over a touchdown on a perfectly-executed pass for the winning score.

DONALD BUDGE AND PERRY IN TENNIS FINAL

Gain Select Bracket With Straight-Set Triumphs —Meet Today

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 26 (AP). — Blasting their way through straight-set victories, Fred Perry of England, self-confessed tennis champion of the amateur ranks, and red-haired Donald Budge, of Oakland, Calif., American Davis Cup star, won the right today to cast aside each other for the men's singles championship of the Pacific Southwest lawn tennis tournament.

Southwest champion Jack Tidball, of Budge's home, by the lop-sided scores of 6-2, 6-2, and Perry defeated Los Angeles, 6-2, and Perry defeated Lester Stoefen, of Hollywood, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4. Budge will get his chance to defeat Perry when the two meet in the Pacific Southwest championship tournament tomorrow. Perry won the title in 1932, 1933 and 1934. He did not compete last year. Budge captured the title when Budge last met Perry in their meeting. California ace in a match at Forest Hills, N.Y. Shields will engage in the men's singles, complaining of a sore shoulder. Perry and Budge defaulted to Caroline Babcock, Santa Monica, Gracyn Wheeler, Hollywood, 6-2, 6-4. In the women's singles semi-finals of their respective brackets, Miss Wheeler will play Thus, Miss Wheeler defeated Alice Marble, national champion, in the women's singles match for the championship tomorrow. Van Ryn won over Budge and Mako in the men's doubles, and Miss Yvon Petra, of Fresno, defeated Workman, 6-4, 6-3.

Thief Pays Visit To Dressing-Rooms

SEATTLE, Sept. 26 (AP). While Minnesota football players were battling for victory today, a thief broke into the University of Washington dressing-rooms and stole $25, several locker room and athletic charms, and watches and rings belonging to athletic director of Ray Eckmann, athletic director of Washington, said the visiting players would be reimbursed by the university.

New Trophy for Athletes

This handsome trophy, designed as a memorial to the late Lou E. Marsh, famous Toronto sports writer, has been donated by Charles E. Ring, of Toronto, for presentation annually to the outstanding Canadian athlete, amateur or professional. It is made from black and gold marble and monel metal. The trophy will be awarded early in January of each year by a committee of five Toronto sportsmen. Both men and women athletes are eligible and winners will receive miniature replicas to keep permanently.

Vancouver Dog Is Given Top Honors in Show Here

Smooth Fox Terrier, Winsome Peddler's Double, Owned by Victor W. Williams, Gains Best-in-Show Award at V.I.D.F.A. Event

Victor W. Williams' smooth Fox Terrier, Winsome Peddler's Double, an animal valued at $500, last night won best of show award in the first all-breed championship dog show of the Vancouver Island Dog Fanciers' Association held at the Crystal Garden. Williams is from Vancouver.

A. F. Picard, Winnipeg, who officiated as judge for the show, declared it was one of the best he had ever attended. This was his first visit to Victoria to adjudicate in a local dog show. It was a point show, well deserving of the reception it was given by local dog fanciers, he said.

MANY DOGS

There were about 154 dogs benched in the show, and it was a successful event from every standpoint, officials said. There were nearly forty entries from outside Victoria, including dogs from Seattle, San Francisco and Portland.

Williams' dog, Winsome Peddler's Double, has just won the Canadian Kennel Club's trophy for the best Canadian-bred dog or bitch in show at the last three shows entered. These include the Vancouver exhibition, the Vancouver Kennel Club Labor Day show and the present show, thus establishing an all-time Canadian record.

TWO TIED IN CADDIES' GOLF

B. Barnes and D. Todd Register Scores of 74—Play-Off Set for Monday

Checking in with scores of 74, B. Barnes and D. Todd tied for the best net score in the annual caddies' golf tournament at the Victoria Golf Club yesterday. They will play off Monday for the Milbank Cup and miniature trophy.

S. Elliott placed third with a card of 75, while Pat Fletcher was next with 76. M. McLellan and H. Price tied for the fifth and sixth prizes. B. Hines took seventh place honors.

The hidden hole prize was won by H. Price, and B. Barnes and D. Todd turned in the best net to cop the special prizes donated by Hon. John Hart, with S. Elliott third. P. Fletcher had the best gross, with D. Todd second, and R. McLellan and H. Price deadlocked for third.

The caddies extend their thanks to all those who assisted in making the tournament a success.

Yesterday's results follow:

With six well-balanced clubs in the race for the honors, league officials anticipate another successful season.

TWO IN A ROW FOR PORTLAND

Beavers Defeat Oakland, 10-0, in Second Game of Coast League

PORTLAND, Sept. 26 (AP).—Behind the brilliant flinging of Sailor Bill Posedel, the battering Portland Beavers pummeled Oakland Acorns, 10 to 0, tonight, to climb one step closer to the 1936 Pacific Coast League pennant. Portland now leads two games to none in the championship series.

For six innings the game was a tight pitching duel between Posedel and Jimmy Tobin, but in the seventh Tobin and his successor Hal Haid, went completely to pieces to allow Portland to score five runs on only two hits.

The Beavers mauled Olds for three more runs in the eighth on Bongy's double, walks to Lee and Sweeney, and another double by Frederick.

The two teams will meet here again tomorrow night and then will travel south to play at Oakland until one team has won four games. Tonight's victory was the sixth in a row for Portland since the end of the regular season.

Win Polo Trophy

WESTBURY, N.Y., Sept. 26 (AP).—Argentine's wild riding "four horsemen" shattered all tradition today as they rode away with the cherished America's Cup, emblem of international team polo supremacy.

Before 39,000 spectators, second largest throng to watch a polo match in this country's history, the Gauchos crushed Greentree, United States team champion, 8 to 4, for the second successive time.

Wins Golf Crown

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 26 (AP).—Hoard Creel, of Pueblo, Col., won the championship of the First National Left-Handers' Golf Tournament, and possession of the Richard H. Waltke Trophy, by defeating Fred Evans, of St. Louis, 6 and 4, in the final match today.

OARSMEN TAKE RUGBY OPENER

Chalk Up 14-8 Verdict Over Occasionals in League Match on Mainland

VANCOUVER, Sept. 26 (AP).—Vancouver Rowing Club's English Rugby machine opened the First Division of the English Rugby League today by crushing out a 14-8 victory over a fighting Occasionals' squad.

Bruce Clark ran over two tries for Rowing Club in the first half, one of which was converted by Hal Atkinson, leaving the Rowers leading, 8-0, at the half.

Play improved as the game progressed and "J Maguire took a triple pass to go over for Occasionals' first try, which was converted by Howie Cleveland.

As the end of the game neared with Occasionals down, 14-5, they fought harder than ever. They wound up the game with a spectacular try that went sixty yards.

John Calland took the ball and passed back. Two yards from the line Calland slipped and the ball bounced out of his hands. There was a scramble for possession as the ball rolled over the line, and when the players were untangled Mackie was lying on the ball to give Occasionals their second successful try.

The whistle blew a few minutes later.

NEAR RIOT WHEN FANS JOIN FIGHT

Kitzmiller Kicked Insensible By Spectators at Wild Wrestling Exhibition

Disorder reigned and wrestlers clawed, kicked, punched and swarmed after each other, in and out of the ring, at the Tillicum Gym, last night, while the feminine fans screamed their delights and men rushed into the fray to grapple with ushers and police, and a few kicked George "Cannonball" Kitzmiller, of Portland, into insensibility after the matman had catapulted himself into the aisles.

Local fans have perhaps never seen such a night of turbulence. Noo-ses of wire and belting were used in the semi-main and the main events by the wildmen.

CHOKING SPREE

Choked into a defenceless condition by the referee's belt in the hands of Jack Forsgren, 230-pound Vancouver fireman, the mighty Chief Jules Strongbow, 276 pounds, of Oklahoma, was awarded the deciding fall in the fifth round of the main match. Referee Johnny Pears had previously used the belt on the chief in an effort to make him break an unorthodox hold. Jack was quick to pick up the strap and try his skill.

Kicking, punching and gouging his opponent, then tossing Forsgren to the mat, Chief Strongbow threw on his huge bulk and was awarded the first fall in the third round, after three minutes and forty seconds. With his punishing Boston crab hold, the Vancouver fireman evened the battle in the next round. The fifth round saw the finish on a foul award to the chief.

HECTIC BATTLE

After bowling Chief Thunderbird, 190-pound Victorian, into a daze in the fourth round, "Cannonball" Kitzmiller missed on one of his flying tackles and flew through the ropes, where he was met with the boots of Thunderbird supporters. He failed to return and the local Indian took the match.

Repeatedly the two men took their fight into the laps of the ringside fans. Kitzmiller gained the first fall in the second round with a short-arm scissor hold and a body press, after using a wire neck cord. The "Chief" evened the battle in the next round with a hammerlock. The fourth round saw the close of the battle.

FIFTH STRAIGHT FOR GRANVILLE

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (AP).—William Woodward's Granville scored his fifth straight victory today, capturing the Lawrence Realization Stake at Belmont at one and five-eight miles. W. A. Jefford's Giant Killer was second, and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Memory Book third.

The great son of Gallant Fox was a prohibitive favorite at 1 to 8. Giant Killer paid 7 to 5 for place, and Memory Book 2 to 5 for show.

WINS MEDAL ROUND

Turning in a card of 93-21—72, Miss E. Gwynne won the monthly medal competition at the Ardmore Golf Club.

Plays and Players

Espionage, Thrills and Romance in New Drama

"Secret Agent," the spy thriller based on W. Somerset Maugham's "Ashenden" stories and showing currently at the Dominion Theatre, is a production that is right up Alfred Hitchcock's particular street.

The man has a genius for novelty in thrills and he proved in "The 39 Steps," his previous production for GB, that he can handle spy stories with an especially deft and original touch. "Secret Agent," which stars Madeleine Carroll, Peter Lorre, John Gielgud and Robert Young, is littered with spies and secrets, with agents and intrigue, with eerie close-ups, hurtling trains, misty mountain peaks and with a dash of love and a spot of murder thrown in to make the film what it is.

Played against the background of Switzerland in 1916, "Secret Agent" keeps on the move from the first uncanny shot to the final fade-out, which comes after a Continental express train is spectacularly wrecked by bombing planes.

The acting, down to the smallest role, is excellent, with Madeleine Carroll gorgeous and fiery as Elsa, Gielgud thrilling as Ashenden, Lorre outstanding as the General and Robert Young extremely natural, whether he is being the spurned lover or the trapped villain.

CHINESE TROUPE HELD OVER HERE

Wing Wing Organization to Appear For Three More Days at Empire Theatre

Capacity houses have greeted the Wing Wing Chinese troupe at the Empire Theatre for the past four days, and due to public demand, this clever troupe will remain for three more days.

On Thursday this group which came from China to entertain the Vancouver public at their great Jubilee, will sail for their homeland, thus making Victoria their last port of call.

For the next three days, this troupe will include some special features with their acts. The main acts will remain the same, but in order to make the show still more interesting, many novelty turns have been added.

Dominion — "Secret Agent," starring Pete Lorre.

Oak Bay—Katharine Hepburn in "Alice Adams."

SIMONE SIMON IS STARRED AT ATLAS

Youthful New Player Has Important Role in "Girls' Dormitory" —Good Cast

One of the most important cinema events in years will take place beginning tomorrow at the Atlas Theatre when an exciting new personality, Simone Simon (pronounced See-moan See-moan), makes her debut in the Twentieth Century-Fox production, "Girls' Dormitory."

The film opens in an exclusive boarding school. Herbert Marshall is the director of the school, and Ruth Chatterton, Constance Collier, J. Edward Bromberg, are important members of the faculty.

It is but a short time before graduation. Simone, a remarkably beautiful girl, is about to leave the surroundings she has known for years—and the man she has youthfully loved almost as long, Herbert Marshall.

One of the teachers discovers a romantic love note, evidently written by one of the girls.

Simone is discovered to be the author of the note. Hailed before the faculty, she admits writing it, but denies that the contents of the note are true.

Ruth Chatterton takes her aside and Simone reveals that she wrote the note, in a girlish mood, to Marshall, and that she is in love with the teacher.

When Marshall is informed of Simone's statement, he realizes that he, too, loves the young girl. In their romance, they find temporary happiness, but Simone overhears a conversation that makes her believe Marshall is really in love with Miss Chatterton.

GREAT FILM ON OAK BAY SCREEN

"Alice Adams," With Katharine Hepburn, Currently Featured At New Theatre

One of the most vivid characterizations in recent years is Katharine Hepburn's portrayal of the heroine in "Alice Adams," the Booth Tarkington Pulitzer Prize novel of some years ago. The story, showing at the Oak Bay Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, revolves about a young girl and her family in a small town in the Middle West.

Greatly embarrassed by her shabby home, lack of money and the resulting social oblivion, she strives to cover her hurt pride with a mask of pretense. When she stops trying to deceive herself and the man she loves, she wins the things she desires.

DON COSSACKS WILL SING HERE NOV. 2

The thirty-six singing horsemen of the Steppes—the Don Cassack Russian Male Chorus, will give one of their stirring programmes of Russian music on Monday, November 2, at the Empire Theatre.

Dressed in uniform dark blue, their knee-high riding boots polished to regimental brilliancy, they make an impressive picture as they march on the stage and stand at attention in a semi-circle, awaiting the command of their leader.

The men of the Don Cossaack Chorus come from that part of the Southwestern Russia called the Steppes, and from that particular province through which the slow-flowing waters of the Don move majestically on to the Sea of Azov.

The amazing technical perfection of their performances has made them the sensational drawing-card of Europe. One of the costliest attractions ever imported, they return this season for their fifth American tour, which will extend from coast to coast.

PLAZA PRESENTS DRAMA OF SOCIETY

"Ah, Wilderness," by Eugene O'Neill, Has Aline McMahon and Lionel Barrymore

The finest part an actor can play is that of a character everyone knows personally, through knowing someone like the person portrayed on stage or screen.

This is the reason Eugene O'Neill is the actors' favorite playwright. For O'Neill, perhaps better than anyone, has the uncanny knack of making all his characters such persons.

An outstanding instance is his "Ah Wilderness!" opening tomorrow at the Plaza Theatre. In this remarkable story of American family life O'Neill has woven in characters we all know. We can see in them our own parents, and the older players, watching the youngsters, can recognize in them themselves when young.

And Aline MacMahon's role of the maiden aunt, with memories of a love hidden deep in her heart, of Lionel Barrymore's part as the father, guiding the steps of his son into the right paths, are great performances.

COLUMBIA OFFERS COMEDY SUCCESS

Carole Lombard became a "lady with the black eye" during the filming of "Love Before Breakfast," the Universal laugh hit at the Columbia Theatre. She gathered a magnificent "sure enough" purple morning glory around her eye during a battle royal in front of the camera, when a black eye from the make-up man would have been sufficient.

Preston Foster was heaving punches right, left and centre when Carole walked into the fray. She accidentally stepped into Foster's hand and stopped a fast inshoot. Then Carole took a long count, but she gamely resumed work twenty minutes later.

For the following scenes, which required the "sunset lamp" according to the script, she did not have to add a bit of make-up to her "shiner." It glowed like an engine headlight.

Mrs. R. S. Beswick and Miss Iris Readings were hostesses at a miscellaneous shower recently at Mrs. Beswick's home, East Saanich Road, in honor of Miss Anne Bosher, whose marriage will take place early next month to Mr. Jonathon Slafer, Victoria. The gifts were concealed in a beehive. Pink and yellow were the colors chosen. A buffet supper was served. Contests were enjoyed, the winners being Mrs. Ben Readings and Mrs. J. Barry. The invited guests were Mrs. J. E. Bosher, Sr., Mrs. J. Barry, Mrs. W. Beswick, Sr., Mrs. A. A. Nunn, Mrs. J. E. Bosher, Jr., Mrs. Ben Readings, Mrs. W. A. Beswick, Mrs. C. Pulitzer Prize Play Is Featured at the Capitol

Something new and different, as refreshing as the clean breath of an ocean breeze across hot sands, came to the screen of the Capitol Theatre yesterday when the Warner Bros. production, "The Green Pastures," had its local premiere.

In picturizing Marc Connelly's famous Pulitzer Prize play, which ran for five years on the stage and enthralled millions, Warner Bros. have given the drama a lavishness of production that far outstrips the stage play. The transfer of the play to the screen cost it nothing of its quaint humor and inspirational characterizations, but added much in the magnitude of spectacular backgrounds and settings.

The scenic effects, impossible on the stage, are remarkable for both their beauty and grandeur. The creation of the world, the story being evolved from the most primitive concept of the Bible, evolving from a formless mass of vapor and resolving itself into water and then a sphere with well defined continents and oceans, is something that only the magic of the cinematographer's art could present.

Nor could there be produced anywhere except on the screen the scene of the great flood in which Noah's Ark starts on its forty-day voyage, riding the raging seas until the waters subside and it is able to land on Mount Ararat.

PROTECTION IS NOT ADEQUATE

B.C. Forests Are Not Reproducing Satisfactorily, Says A. W. Cooper, Expert

Forests of British Columbia are not reproducing themselves satisfactorily in many coastal areas and the reason for this grave condition is largely that the young forests are inadequately protected from fire.

This warning was voiced here yesterday by A. W. Cooper, Master of Forestry of Yale Forestry School, and for many years a high executive official of the United States Forest Service.

At Cowichan Lake, Mr. Cooper said he was delighted with the forestry camp for unemployed boys, established by the Provincial Government, but declared that far more forestry work must be undertaken if British Columbia is to assure itself of future timber supplies in abundance.

CARELESS PEOPLE

"Left alone, your country reproduces forests magnificently after being logged clean," Mr. Cooper declared. "The present method of burning off the slash of logging operations is satisfactory from the conservation standpoint. But what happens after the original burning of slash. In far too many places subsequent fires occur, lighted generally by careless people. The result is that young forests are destroyed and the ground often ruined for reproduction for many years to come.

"You can only save these young forests, the timber supply of the future, by more intensive protection against fire. At present you are operating like an industrialist who fails to maintain his plant. You are taking huge sums out of the forests in taxes but you are not putting nearly enough back in fire prevention. It is absurd to talk about artificial planting or restricting the cut of mature timber when you are burning up huge forests of young growth every year and you can only prevent this by putting back into the forest, in the form of fire protection, more of the money you take out of them in taxes. The little tree is the key to your whole conservation problem. It must be saved from fire."

What Today Means

"LIBRA"

If September 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m., from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p.m.

Whether or not this day will turn out to be a pleasantly progressive one of entertainment or disappointingly dismal will depend largely on your mental attitude towards life in general. Peevishness will be the principal obstacle to harmonious conditions in home circles and the planning of social activities, so do not give in to it. Be careful of persons you know have a proclivity to repeat remarks, for they are apt to be trouble makers this day. Hosts must use good judgment if their duty involves seating arrangement, or the pairing of partners, for the success of any entertainment will depend on the couples brought together being congenial. Married and engaged couples, and those expecting devoted love to reap a rich reward, must guard against being placed in any compromising position this day because trouble is liable to result.

If a woman and September 27 is your birthday, clothing in some way is likely to be one of your most absorbing interests. You ought to be a very skillful needlewoman. An artistic touch and eye may enable you to become a great financial success. Loyalty to relatives and friends will bear gratifying results. Be cautious about dieting, for it can be harmful as well as beneficial. Food will, apparently, play an important part in your life, possibly in a commercial way. As a dietician, trained nurse, restaurant manager, caterer, candy maker, seamstress, teacher, fiction writer or artist you probably will be successful. Women born on this date are usually very fortunate in their matrimonial choice.

The child born on September 27 is, as a rule, a great addition to any household, if permitted to fill it with laughter and love. In its early childhood any attempt to suppress its natural cheerful, carefree disposition by strict disciplinary measures will be a great mistake, and is likely to change the child's prevailing spirit of happiness.

If a man and September 27 is your natal day, you are a typical Libran, energetic, very aggressive, and possess keen perception and good judgment. Law, politics, promoting, journalism, construction work, selling and the army or navy are among the best activities for you to engage in.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 28

"LIBRA"

If September 28 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:45 to 10:45 a.m., from 12:45 to 2:45 p.m. and from 7:45 to 9:45 p.m. The danger periods are from 6:45 to 8:45 a.m., from 5:45 to 7:45 p.m. and from 9:45 to 11:45 p.m.

This week should be successful, if you begin it by being accommodating and agreeable. Many petty annoyances may originate in both home and office through discovering, when most needed, that this, that, or the other thing, has disappeared or been used up. The wise housewife and business man will take an inventory of their supplies this day. Keep in mind that no workman can successfully complete this task without the right tools. Married and engaged couples, and those who are matrimonially optimistic, must avoid engaging in personalities this day if they would avoid controversies.

If a woman and September 28 is your birthday, you ought not to leave the handling of your personal business affairs in the hands of comparative strangers, for complications might come from this. Be active if you expect to be happy, for inaction is apt to have a bad reaction on your disposition. You ought to have excellent taste, and your artistic discernment probably will prove most helpful in the very near future. Lady Luck is likely to show you some special favor, probably in helping you to increase your income. As a tearoom hostess, insurance or real estate broker, writer, teacher, musician, secretary or artist you may make a remarkable record. Your choice in the selection of a husband is liable to be a very good one.

The child born on September 28 will, from its earliest childhood probably have many blessings in the way of health, a good home and freedom from worry. It may have a gift for making money.

If a man and September 28 is your natal day, self-control, particularly in regard to your temper, is the most important thing for you to practice. A brusque manner of speech can seriously affect your popularity. Be neither reckless nor stingy with money. The lecture platform, stage, pulpit, army, navy, literary or artistic field, as well as work of a promotional nature, may enable you to gain prosperity.

National Temperance Courses for Sunday Schools Planned Here —Five Lessons

The ninth national temperance course for Sunday schools will commence on October 4 and consists of five lessons.

The lessons will be found in the Northern Messenger, Presbyterian and United Church Sunday school papers, Canadian Baptist, and in pamphlets which may be had from denominational headquarters or from Mrs. J. P. Hicks, 617 Drake Avenue, G 5497.

Pass certificates are given by the Dominion headquarters, to all who make 50 per cent on the written test, and honor certificates to those making 65 per cent. The number of certificates issued last year was of the preceding year. A similar increase is hoped for this year.

Prizes are awarded to papers of special merit, and buttons to all who have written five contests.

Lady (meeting friend in bus): "Isn't it dreadful, my dear? I've just heard that the vicar's youngest son has entered a well-known racing stable to be trained as a jockey. He was to have become a minister, you know."

"Well, no doubt he's made a good choice. He'll perhaps bring more people to repentance as a jockey than he ever would as a minister."

CHINESE ATTEMPTING TO END OLD CUSTOM

NANKING, China, Sept. 26 (AP).—Tipping is the latest dragon of old-time China which General Chiang Kai-Shek and his new life movement cohorts are sharpening their swords to slay.

Hotels, restaurants and public amusement houses have been limited out as the first types of organizations in which the ancient and accepted practice of giving "wine" or "tea" money is to cease.

Every Worth-While Radio Improvement — Performance that Thrills You with its Naturalness

THE NEW MAJESTIC 1937 RADIOS!

Dreadnought Series

JUST as the new Zeppelin Hindenburg outstrips the previous Zeppelins in performance and appointments; the Queen Mary towers above the Mauretania, or the new China Clipper outshines any other seaplane — so do the New Majestic Radios for 1937 set new standards of beauty, performance, tone-quality and VALUE.

Credit must be given to the genius of Majestic engineering for making so many improvements, yet retaining all of the revolutionary developments of last season. Majestic presents this season all six of the recent major refinements—Noise Suppressor—turn from one station to another with a minimum of interference, noise etc. Locality Adjuster—a variable adjustment which minimizes annoying interference peculiar to any given locality. Acoustic Boom Absorber—just as a sponge absorbs water the Majestic Chladni Disc absorbs the cabinet boom frequently heard on low notes. Band Spreader—stations spread out 8 times farther apart for fine tuning and logging of short-wave stations. Dual-Purpose Metal-Spray Tubes—better than ever—noise-free, double performance. And—in addition —"No-Stoop" Tuning with the new Majestic "Kleer-Vue" "Strate-Line" Music Bar Tuning Dial. You'll never be satisfied until you own a Majestic when you hear one. The styles of the cabinets are sensationally beautiful—a treat to the eye and a greater treat to the ear with its life-like colorful tone. See the New Majestic Series to-day. Look, listen and learn why the new "No-Stoop" Tuning is the only sensible, civilized way to tune a radio.

Stop Stooping Like This

Stop Stooping, Squinting, Squatting. Tune your radio the modern way with the startling, new "Kleer-Vue", "Strate-Line" Majestic Music Bar Tuning Dial. Here is a feature which makes an ordinary radio as old fashioned as bustles. All three bands (standard, short-wave, police and amateur) are on individual "Strate-Lines". Each line (or band) lights up separately when being used. No guesswork, no conglomeration of small numbers to confuse or have to figure out. Just as simple as reading a sheet of music—no squinting or straining of the eyes. Truly, the modern way to tune your radio.

Government's Ace Trouble Shooter Arrives on Coast

Assistant Secretary of Labor E. F. McGrady Will Endeavor to Smooth Out Differences Between Waterfront Workers and Employers

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 26 (AP).—The United States Government's ace "trouble-shooter" stepped tonight into the troubled waterfront situation while shipowners and maritime unions still were seeking to avert a threatened tieup October 1.

McGrady, who was instrumental in bringing about a truce in the bloody 1934 maritime strike, conferred with Government labor conciliators, E. P. Marsh and E. H. Fitzgerald, in the initial move toward averting the new crisis.

FIRST STEP

After the conference, McGrady said the situation had been outlined to him and that his first step would probably be an effort tonight to contact the Coast committee for Waterfront and ship employers.

Waterfront employers and the district executive board of the International Longshoremen's Union made various proposals to each other for a temporary continuance of work after expiration of their regular agreements next Wednesday.

Pursuant to its decision last night the I.L.A. proposed a fifteen-day extension of the present agreements to give an opportunity for negotiating new contracts.

The employers held there was no assurance that negotiations could be completed in fifteen days.

T. G. Plant, employer spokesman, then announced the shipowners were willing to extend the agreement thirty days providing the longshoremen would agree that all proposals not settled between employers and unions be submitted to arbitration.

WAS REJECTED

The employers then suggested the longshoremen work fifteen days under terms offered by the employers. The I.L.A. rejected this.

The I.L.A. issued a statement saying the shipowners' rejection of the fifteen-day truce offer was accompanied by a shipowners' proposal to hire men directly at the piers under a new wage scale, instead of at the union-controlled dispatching hall under conditions imposed by the peace agreement of 1934.

FOR TIME BEING

HYDE PARK, N.Y., Sept. 26 (AP).—President Roosevelt today appointed Rear-Admiral Montgomery M. Taylor as a member of the new maritime commission to serve temporarily in place of Rear-Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, of the coast guard.

A White House announcement said Hamlet does not retire until early in October, and under the law he would lose "all the benefits of his long service in the coast guard" if he were to take over his new job now.

"For this reason," the announcement said, "the President has asked Admiral Taylor to serve temporarily in order that the organization of the commission may be completed to meet with the requirements of the law creating it."

Rear-Admiral Henry A. Wiley, U.S.N., retired, and George Landick, Jr., of the Treasury Department, are other members of the temporary commission. The law provides for five members, but others are not expected to be appointed for some time.

COLLECTING SHIP FACTS

Historic Society Gathering Data of Marine Craft in San Francisco

Fast becoming obsolete are the few remaining sailing craft as they lie at their last anchorages waiting for a little more time to completely obliterate them. San Francisco where not so long ago the masts of many tall ships reached skyward, and the water in the harbor washed along the sides of wooden ships, is now the headquarters of a project designed to perpetuate the old craft of yesterday.

The WPA under the sponsorship of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, have been active in the San Francisco Bay area since April last. A company of twelve men has been making drawings, photographs and measurements of all vessels built prior to 1900, and any other interesting craft. The data which is being collected will be sent to the Smithsonian Institution, where it is to be preserved either in the form of half models or drawings.

SURVEY TO DATE

The survey to date has covered the bark Emily F. Whitney, last of the Down-Easters which now lies off Sausalito; the schooners Commerce and City of Papette, also at Sausalito, the one remaining Chinese junk from a fleet once well-known in the bay; the scow schooners, erstwhile bay barges, and many other intresting craft.

With the arrival of the Golden Gate, William H. Smith and Louise from cod-fishing in Alaska, they too, will be surveyed. The enterprise, which is known as the Historic American Merchant Marine Survey, is anxious to find all vessels either built before 1900 or of particular interest.

Activity has not been confined to sailing ships. The party has worked on the Roosevelt, in which Perry went to the North Pole. The old vessel, still in commission, is lying in Oakland Creek. Detailed drawings have been made of the Gjoa, Amundsen's famous vessel, which rests high and dry in Golden Gate Park.

A few have risen to cast some criticism at the idea of preserving the old sailing vessels. It is the first move of the kind to record American craft, and its aim is to reproduce the sea-going history of the past which has been otherwise carefully chronicled.

NOTED RUM-RUNNING VESSEL, JOSEPHINE K., IS CHANGING HANDS

HALIFAX, Sept. 26 (CP). — Motor-vessel Josephine K., once known along the Atlantic Coast as "the pride of the rum fleet," is changing hands. Its present Halifax owners are selling the boat to Prince Edward Island interests. Sale of the Josephine K. recalls a thrilling chase on Christmas Eve six years ago when Captain William Cluett was killed by a United States coast guard shell off Staten Island.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

Sailor Rendered Totally Blind in Electrical Storm Off Panama

VANCOUVER, Sept. 26 (CP).—Word reaching here today told of a terrific electrical storm which struck the British freighter Ss. Caithness, off Panama, leaving one sailor totally blind.

The Caithness was en route from British Columbia ports to England with a cargo of lumber. When the storm struck, William S. Middleton took refuge under a canvas at the foot of a mast. Lightning struck the mast and shipmates found Middleton lying totally blind.

Physicians and specialists at Panama, where the man was taken, said, however, that he would recover his sight in two or three weeks.

GULF ISLANDS

The combined land and water trip of Vancouver Island Coach Lines and Gulf Islands Ferry next Wednesday will be a drive to Swartz Bay where the Mv. Cy Peck will be boarded for a cruise through the Gulf Islands. Beaver Point, Port Washington, Galiano and Mayne Islands will be the points of call. Coaches leave the local depot at 9 a.m. while the Cy Peck will leave Swartz Bay at 10 a.m.

Twice Stopped by Spanish Warships

Twice since Spain's civil war broke out the British freight steamer Gibel Zerjon has been halted on the high seas by Spanish Government warships. After the British battle cruiser H.M.S. Repulse had forced the Spanish vessel to allow the Gibel Zerjon to continue on the first occasion, an apology was demanded and received from Spain. A second protest may be lodged by Britain. Her destroyers again drove off the molesting Spanish vessel when the Gibel Zerjon radioed for assistance en route from Gibraltar to Melilla. Here is the British freight steamer Gibel Zerjon, centre of the incidents.

New York Canoeists Leave McMurray on Way to Lake Athabaska

McMURRAY, Alta., Sept. 26 (CP).—Five months out of New York on a canoe journey to Nome, Alaska, Sheldon P. Taylor and Geoffrey W. Pope were paddling down the Athabaska River today on the last lap of their travels before Winter closes Northland navigation.

The young adventurers reached McMurray, about 280 miles northeast of Edmonton, late Friday. They left New York on April 25. The voyageurs crossed the Canadian border at Montreal and made their way west and north via the Great Lakes and rivers.

At Chipewyan, at the west end of Lake Athabaska, they will spend the Winter. Next Spring they will continue down the Slave River, across Slave Lake to the Mackenzie River and thus on down to Aklavik. From there they will cross the Rat River Portage to Porcupine River and then on into the Yukon River, to Nome.

COMFORT
"I enjoy riding on the new, luxurious coaches that the 'COACH LINES' operate between Victoria and Nanaimo. Their smooth riding, comfortable seats, and draftless, fume-free ventilation contribute so much to the trip."

CONVENIENCE
"I can save a lot of time—traveling by 'COACH LINES'—and time means money to me."
Three round trips daily between Victoria and Nanaimo—two round trips daily between Nanaimo and Courtenay and Port Alberni.

ECONOMY
"It costs me less to travel Up-Island by bus than it does to use my own car. And besides saving money, I save energy by having someone else do the driving."
LOW WEEK END FARES—Single fare and a quarter for the round trip. Effective every week-end to Up-Island points.

TRAVEL BY BUS

CHANGE OF ROUTING
Owing to the closing of the Malahat from Monday to Friday, inclusive, until further notice the 9:15 a.m. from Victoria and the 8:15 a.m. from Nanaimo on the Victoria-Nanaimo route will be routed via the Mill Bay Ferry.

Stock Prices at New York Mart Advance Briskly

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (AP) — A broad buying movement lifted stocks briskly today in what financial observers took to be a bullish reception of France's move to revalue her currency, with a helping hand from the United States and England.

The break in the prolonged suspense over the franc released demand for securities that turned the week-end market into the most active session on the stock exchange since April 4. In the two hours of trading, 900,760 shares changed hands.

Leading active stocks climbed fractionally to more than 3 points. The Associated Press average of sixty issues, recaptured most of its loss of the previous day and finished .8 of a point higher at 67.9.

Chrysler, a lure for bulls in view of the motor industry's shift to manufacture of new models, was whirled up more than 4 points at one time. It finished at 122 1-4, up 3 3-8.

Along with motors and steels, rails were favored for the seasonal expansion in operations evident in the week's carloading figures, showing traffic at a new peak for the recovery.

French bonds broke sharply as domestic issues moved higher in the bond market.

French Government 7 1-2's plunged 16 1-2 points on one transaction to 140, a new low for the year. The unstamped 7's went unwanted after being offered at 150, off 10. Other foreign issues moved narrowly.

Prices Rise at Toronto Mart

Metals, Distillers and Oil Stocks Lead in Strong Advance

TORONTO, Sept. 26 (CP)—Without waiting for ratification of the French currency devaluation plan by the deputies, the Toronto market for industrial stocks advanced strongly today.

The early up-surge of prices modified to some extent before the close. International Nickel shot up to 61 1-2 and closed at 60 7-8 for a net gain of 1 1-8. Fractions up to 3-4 were gained by Consolidated Smelters. Distillers-Seagrams, Walkers common and British-American Oil.

Brazilian advanced 1 3-8 to 13 3-8. Ford "A." International Petroleum and Pantepec were higher, while C.P.R. was steady.

Wheat Prices Change Little

Traders Remain Out of Winnipeg Market Until Monetary Crisis Is Passed

WINNIPEG, Sept. 26 (CP)—Grain trade uncertainty concerning financial developments abroad took the pep out of the wheat market and brought about a pause in foreign buying of Canada's most valuable commodity.

Futures prices closed a lustreless session unchanged to 1-8 cent lower as the majority of traders withheld market commitments lending clarification of the monetary crisis. October finished at $1.10 3-8, November $1.10 1-2, December $1.08 1-2 and May $1.10 3-8.

The brisk investment buying of futures that had featured the market during the past fortnight's advance was absent.

Export sales of wheat dropped to a minimum, coincident with Liverpool reports that shippers had withdrawn all C.I.F. offers there. Futures prices in that market, responsive to speculative "covering," closed 1 3-8d higher.

Franc and Pound Sterling Recede

British Funds Rally on New York Market After Equalization Fund Is Utilized

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (AP).—The French franc and the pound sterling slipped downward today in the New York foreign exchange market, the only major centre where dealings were recorded.

There was no trading in either London or Paris because of the French devaluation move and in New York early quotations were mostly nominal.

Actual transactions near the close, however, placed the franc at 5.12 cents, down 1 46 3-8 cents. Sterling, quoted at 4.90 early in the trading after reports the Russian state bank had offered £1,000,000 at the market, improved to finish at $4.95 off 5 cents. Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury, announced the American Equalization Fund had absorbed the Russian offering.

The Dutch guilder was off 1.53 cents to 65.95 cents and the Canadian dollar slipped 9-64 of a cent to 99 7-8 cents. The Swiss franc was not quoted.

Additional Services Supplied to Tenants at Enterprise Wharf

Boat-owning patrons of the floats at Enterprise Wharf are being extended additional services at no cost, George Willis, the proprietor, stated yesterday. He is keeping, he said, one float open for owners who wish to repair their own boats, supplying them with light and water on the float.

Others who wish to take engines out, put their boats ashore or load them onto trucks will be privileged to use the derrick for these purposes. There will be no objection to patrons bringing mechanics to work on the float, either. A grid is also being installed, which will be available to regular customers.

SOO—On Thursday, September 24, at the Jubilee Hospital, Tom Soo, of 621 Chatham Street. He was born in China and had been a resident of this city for thirty-three years.
The remains are resting at McCall Bros. Funeral Home, and will be forwarded to China, where interment will be made.

VAUGHN—On September 26, 1936, at the Royal Jubilee Hospital, George Vaughn, aged thirty-one years. Born in South Bend, U.S.A., the late Mr. Vaughn came to Canada twenty-five years ago, his late residence being 6968 Angus Drive, Vancouver, B.C.
The remains are resting at Hayward's B.C. Funeral Company's Chapel, and will be forwarded to Nanaimo, B.C., for interment, at a date to be announced later.

PARKER—At the family residence, 1125 Esquimalt Road, on September 24, 1936, Horatio Seymour Parker, in his eighty-first year, born in Walton, Nova Scotia, and a resident of Victoria for sixteen years. He is survived by his widow, at home, two daughters, Mrs. Brooke and Mrs. Alma Campbell, both of Saskatoon, Sask.; three sons, Harold Parker, Prince Rupert; Frank Parker, Vancouver, and Roy Parker, in Asquith, Sask.
The time and date of funeral will be announced later. Arrangements with Hayward's B.C. Funeral Company, Ltd.

TRUSTY—The death occurred Friday morning at the Royal Jubilee Hospital, of Mrs. Jennie Trusty, beloved wife of Mr. Edward Trusty, aged thirty-six years, born in Ireland and a resident of this city for the last two weeks, late residence, Briahouse, Lulu Island. Deceased is survived by, besides her husband, at present residing in this city, her parents and two sisters and two brothers, in Ireland, and one brother, in New Westminster.
The funeral will take place on Monday, September 28, at 11 o'clock, from the chapel of the Sands Mortuary, Ltd., Canon F. A. P. Chadwick officiating. The remains will be laid to rest at the Colwood Burial Park.

BATE—The death occurred suddenly on Thursday afternoon at her home, 3154 Davin Street, of Mrs. Mary Jane Bate, aged seventy-six years, born in Newfoundland, and a resident of this city for the last forty-eight years. Deceased is survived by five sons and two daughters, Harold William, Fred C. and Steven Bate, all residents of this city, and John Herbert Bate, residing at View Royal, and Walter Bate, residing at Keating; Mrs. O. E. Atkinson and Mrs. S. Perkins, residing in Victoria. There also survive fourteen grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.
The funeral will take place on Monday, September 28, at 3.30 o'clock, from the chapel of the Sands Mortuary, Ltd. Mr. C. Morson will officiate, and the remains will be laid at rest in the family plot at Royal Oak Burial Park.

OLD—There passed away Wednesday evening, at the Royal Jubilee Hospital, Marion John Old, aged twenty-nine years, of Cowichan Station. The late Mr. Old was born in Davidson, Saskatchewan, and moved here two years ago. He leaves to sorrow his widow, Thelma, and one daughter, Marilyn, at their residence, Cowichan Station; his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Old, of Davidson, Sask., who are at present in this city; four brothers, Wayne, at Port Alberni, B.C.; Teddy, Howard and Merritt, also ten sisters, Helen, Ruby, Goldie, Vivian, Nandes, Phete, Nina, Iris, Frances and Mrs. Ernie Evans, in Saskatchewan.
Funeral services will be held this afternoon, the cortege leaving the S. J. Curry & Son Funeral Home at 1 o'clock, proceeding to St. Andrew's Church, Cowichan Station, where Rev. T. M. Hughes will officiate at 3 o'clock. The remains will be laid to rest in the church cemetery.

4 CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Charlotte E. Kuhn and daughter wish to express their grateful thanks for the kindness and sympathy received in the illness and death of the former's brother, Mr. E. C. Montagu.

4 CARD OF THANKS (Continued)

Mr. Robert D. Lemmax and Miss Victoria E. Lemmax wish to extend their sincere thanks and appreciation to the doctors, nurses and their many friends, both in Victoria and elsewhere, who have so kindly assisted them in their recent bereavements in the two-fold loss of a loving mother and a beloved friend. They also wish to express their grateful thanks to Dr. W. G. Wilson, Rev. E. W. Horton, staff of Department of Labor, school board and city officials, principal and teachers, churches, Local Union 230 and all lodge organizations, and to one and all for the loving messages and numerous beautiful floral tributes sent in sympathy.

AROUND the DIAL

TODAY

Because of the reversion to standard time in the East, many of the programmes originating in New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Chicago, will be heard in Victoria one hour later than in the past three months. Several old programmes will be taken from the air, some old broadcasts will return, and several new features will make their bow. With time changes and programme alterations, programme listings for a few days may be incorrect in some instances, but every effort will be made to keep them accurate.

9 a.m.—Artists of the Parisian stations will supply the entertainment during a fifteen-minute salute to the N.B.C. on its tenth year of radio service. The broadcast will be short-waved to United States from Paris. KOMO.

11 a.m.—Paul Robeson, world-famous negro baritone, will be featured guest on the "Magic Key" programme. He will sing selections from his latest film "Show Boat" from London, England, where he is now working on a picture. Other celebrated artists to appear on this N.B.C.-blue network programme are Jane Froman, young contralto; Casper Reardon, "swing" harpist; John B. Kennedy, N.B.C. news commentator; and the N.B.C. Symphony Orchestra under Frank Black. KJR.

12 noon—"Andante" from "A Night in the Tropics" by Gottschalk; "Dirge" and "Love Song" from MacDowell's "Indian Suite"; "The Pleasure Dome of Kubla Khan" by Griffes; "Fugue" from "The Fourth Symphony" by Ives, and "Nocturne and Scherzo" from "Suite" by Herrmann, will be played by Howard Barlow and the Columbia Symphony Orchestra on the "Everybodys' Music" broadcast. KOL, KVI.

12 noon—An Oriental motif will prevail through Marion Talley's singing broadcast with Josef Koestner's orchestra at this new time. KOMO.

2:15 p.m.—A rapid-fire description of the Roosevelt Raceway qualifying finals will be broadcast by the N.B.C.-blue chain. KJR.

5 p.m.—Popeye, the spinach-eating hero of the black and white comics will make his return to the air after a Summer vacation. KJR.

5 p.m.—Baritone star, Nelson Eddy; Francis White, soprano, and Josef Pasternach's orchestra will inaugurate a new series of Sunday afternoon radio concerts for Columbia from Hollywood under the title "Open House." Eddy and Miss White will take part in special playlets written around songs suitable for duet rendition. KOL, KVI, KSL.

5:30 p.m.—The Royal Hawaiian Band will present a special concert in a broadcast from Honolulu over the N.B.C.-blue network. KJR.

6 p.m.— Mendelssohn's "First Movement" from his "Violin Concerto in E Minor"; Schubert's "Ave Maria"; Kerby's "Viennese Memory"; and Espago's "Air Tzigane" will be played by Mischa Elman, internationally-known concert violinist, who will appear as guest star on the "Sunday Evening Hour." Fritz Reiner will direct the Ford Symphony Orchestra in Berlioz' "The Roman Carnival"; "Street Parade" and "Bareback Riders" from Deems Taylor's suite "Circus Day"; Tschaikovsky's "Marche Miniature"; and Smetana's overture to "The Bartered Bride." KOL, KVI, KSL.

7 p.m.—Rosa Ponselle, Metropolitan Opera soprano, will be guest soloist during the "G.M. Concert." Accompanying Miss Ponselle and offering a programme of operatic and symphonic works will be the seventy-piece symphony orchestra under the direction of Erno Rapee. KOMO.

8:30 p.m.—The curtain will fall on the Summer act of the Wacky family, as interpreted by Tim Ryan and Irene Noblette, as they end this series of programmes with Don Wilson, Morton Bowe and Don Voorhees' orchestra. Next week, Wilson, Kenny Baker, Mary Livingstone and possibly Phil Harris' orchestra will return to the air with that master comedian, Jack Benny, from Hollywood. KOMO.

9:15 p.m.—What happens to a public figure when fame fades will be disclosed in the story to be related by the night editor, Hal Burdick, during his N.B.C.-red network programme. The title of the broadcast is "The Landmark Goes Down." KOMO.

MONDAY

12 noon — Fannie Hurst, noted novelist, and Sheila Hibben, cooking expert, will be guest speakers on the Columbia "Magazine of the Air" programme. KOL, KVI.

6 p.m.—In the 100th production of the "Radio Theatre," Wallace Beery will be starred in a version of Booth Tarkington's play, "The Plutocrat." KOL, KVI.

6:30 p.m.—Larry Keating will step to the N.B.C.-Blue network as master of ceremonies of the "Carefree Carnival," replacing Ned Tollinger, who was moved to Hollywood. All the regular favorites will be heard. KJR.

7 p.m.—"Ten Years In Retrospect," a half-hour programme in the series marking N.B.C.'s ten-year anniversary in radio broadcasting, will be presented over the blue chain. KJR.

8:30 p.m.—Friml's "L'Amour Toujours L'Amour"; "My Hero" from O. Strauss' "Chocolate Soldier"; Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Song of India"; Noel Coward's "I'll Follow My Secret Heart"; and Liszt's "Liebestraum," will be sung by Lucille Manners, soprano, during her recital with William Daly's orchestra on the "Voice of Firestone" programme. KOMO.

9 p.m.—The Colonist news. CFCT.

9:30 p.m.—Harry Richman, night club entertainer, who recently completed a round-trip crossing of the Atlantic Ocean by air, will be guest star of Richard Himber and his orchestra on this thirty-minute N.B.C. programme. KOMO.

9:30 p.m.—Helen Hayes will be heard in the first chapter of her new radio serial, "Bambi," over the N.B.C.-Blue network, entitled "The Surprise Marriage." Mark Warnow will conduct the orchestra. KJR.

9:30 p.m.—The popular serial of last year, "The Romance of Helen Trent," will be resumed over Columbia at this time. KOL, KVI.

OUR DEFENCELESS COAST

Sir,—Quite a lot has been written lately about "Defenceless Canada," and all that has appeared in the press points to the same thing, viz., something must be done in this matter. No longer can this defenceless state of our coasts be allowed to exist if Canada wishes to continue as an independent free country and a member of the Empire. Great Britain, in her genuine effort to prevent war has at last realized that the unprepared state of her defences constitute a serious menace to peace, and the failure of the League of Nations, as it was, to effectively keep the peace, shows that some other form of league or means must be found before the nations of the world can live peacefully together.

Meanwhile, the Empire, as a whole, is preparing effectively its defences, with the exception of Canada. Considering the stand Canada took with the Empire during the last war, and the outstanding fighting record made, it is hard to understand this present state of indifference. It certainly is hard to believe that we are too mean to spare the money for the defence of our independence and neutrality. Also our lack of coast defences, undoubtedly, is a great menace to world peace and a serious weakening of Empire defences. The time has come for our Government to effectively remedy this neglect, and the matter should be put before the public so that it will realize the seriousness of it.

The other day our Chief of Police had a notice in the papers to warn the citizens to be careful to see that their premises were properly locked at night on account of burglaries, and any negligence in this respect was a serious risk to the public welfare. This notice shows that our Chief of Police is on the job in a proper manner. He warns the people and points to a danger to be guarded against. If he neglected his duty by indifference to his work in attending to the safeguarding of our community, how long would he keep his job?

Yet here we have a matter of national importance, viz., the safeguarding of not only our individual homes, but the whole of our country, neglected by indifference and in charge of an official who openly leaves this vital matter to the chance of being looked after by Great Britain, or our friendly neighbor the United States of America, and nothing is being done in the matter. The difference in these two cases is one is local and the other is Empire-wide. Can anyone be in doubt as to the greater importance of the two? Something must surely be wrong if Canada really is too poor to afford the cost of self-protection. Why? The revenue from our gold mines must be enormous, probably second to none in the world. Why cannot some of this wealth, taken from the earth, be used to protect the earth that yields it? Or is Canada so poor in spirit today as to care nothing for its future—then, God help it.

There must be hundreds of people who sympathize with these sentiments of ours. This is an appeal to them for some action towards making the Government assume its proper station amongst the nations of our Empire by the immediate attention to our coast defences, so that Great Britain, when the need comes, will be able to concentrate on her own defence, secure in the knowledge that her Dominions are safeguarded by their own strength.

Dominion strength is Empire strength; our defences are our strength, and we need them for the protection of our independence, neutrality, country and Empire.

J. A. PHILIPSEN,
Hon. Secretary, Victoria Branch, Navy League of Canada, Victoria, B.C., September 17, 1936.

SAANICH EVENING SCHOOL TO START

Night Classes Will Commence on October 1—Variety of Subjects Are Offered

The annual evening classes sponsored by the Saanich School Board will be held again this year, board officials announced yesterday. The classes will start on Thursday, October 1, and will continue to March 31, 1937. Registrations will be accepted at Mount View High School, where the classes will be held at 7.30 p.m. on October 1.

The courses include fifty lessons at moderate rates and will be arranged subject to an average enrolment of fifteen pupils, the board said.

The curriculum for the evening classes includes a matriculation course for students who have to write matriculation supplementals, or who desire to complete their course; elementary shorthand, typing, bookkeeping, dressmaking and public speaking.

THE OBSTACLE

Farm Hand—Sometimes there is and sometimes there ain't. It just depends on you bull.

ANSWER TO YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE

THE TUTTS... By Crawford Young

PRINCIPLES ARE PRINCIPAL

When William died suddenly the neighbors were shocked, and a kindly woman proceeded to comfort Williams wife by describing his good points.

"He was such a man of principle," said the neighbor.

"And am I not the one to know it?" said the bereaved woman. "Every Saturday night didn't he come home and place his pay envelope in front of me as regular as clockwork? Not a night did he miss all the time we were married. Of course, the envelope was always empty, but look at the principle of the thing!"

Jane Dixon Says:

HERE IS A WOMAN WHO PERHAPS DOESN'T REALIZE HOW LUCKY SHE IS THAT THE BOY FRIEND MARRIED AN "OLD FLAME" WHILE SHE WAS AWAY ON VACATION

When a man by his conduct serves notice on a woman that he is unsteady, unreliable, weak-willed . . .

When he carries along an "off again on again" courtship . . .

When he hurts her heart and bruises her pride . . .

If that woman continues to cling and to cry about "love," and to try to find some excuse whereby she can justify her own lack of stamina . . .

Then . . . She deserves the bitter medicine she is due to swallow, and she may be sure she will get it.

Dear Miss Dixon: I met the young man a year and a half ago. We went together during that time—he'd leave me, but we always came back together, confessed that we loved one another and that there was no one else for either of us.

Two months ago, after one of these separations, he came back and we had a grand time. We planned our marriage, which was to take place at the end of a year.

The first time we were together after my return he called looking sick and tired.

We went for a drive.

He suggested we park.

I consented, for I knew something was on his mind.

HE DIDN'T KNOW WHAT HE WANTED

I was right. He started right in to tell me he went back to an old "flame" during my vacation. She talked him into marrying her the second time they went out together.

So now he's married.

After one day of married life he wants it annulled.

No one knows of this marriage except he, his wife, and I. If his parents find out about it there'll be war.

It will have to be kept quiet for at least two years. He wants me to wait until he can get a chance to do something about it (annulment or divorce), then to go back to where we left off!

He vows he still loves me, and the worst part of it is I still love him.

What do you think of this whole affair? Please help me out.

Double-Crossed

Answer: I think very little of this whole affair and less of the man who staged it.

When you signed your letter "Double-Crossed" you gave the best reason I know for signing off on the whole affair, for summarily dismissing the double-crosser from your life now and for all time.

WIFE'S STORY MIGHT BE DIFFERENT

I'd like to hear the wife's side of the story—who talked who into marriage? I'll bet it would be very different from the story you heard that night in the parked automobile from the lips of a double-crosser.

Sometimes he thinks he wants you and sometimes he thinks he doesn't.

He thought he wanted the girl he married and after he had her he thought he'd like to get rid of her.

What assurance can you have, possibly, that marriage to you will make him go on wanting you or that your fate will be different from that of the misfortunate girl he did marry?

So now he "wants you to wait two years" until he can dig up a divorce or an annulment.

What fun that would be! And what a cheerful outlook for you, not knowing when another wanting fit might come over him and he'd be off on a double-crossing adventure.

My sympathies are with the unlucky girl who committed the folly of marrying this man.

You escaped.

WELL KNOWN HOTEL OPENS RESTAURANT OF HIGH STANDARD

St. James Cafe Will Be Officially Opened Next Saturday—Artistic Decoration Found Throughout—Premises Entirely Redecorated—Hotel Shows Much Progress

NEXT Saturday, October 3, will see the opening of the new St. James Hotel Cafe, a fully modern establishment to be operated in conjunction with the hotel. The opening of the cafe marks yet another milestone in the progress the St. James has made since being taken over by Ben Pruss last April. During the time the races were at the Willows, Mr. Pruss opened the cafe temporarily, in order to accommodate the guests who thronged the St. James Hotel, but it will close tonight, for five days, in order that the work may be completed.

Realizing the necessity of having an up-to-date restaurant in connection with the hotel, Mr. Pruss acquired the premises next door some weeks ago and placed them in the hands of carpenters and decorators. The result testifies both to the excellent workmanship done and to the careful plans Mr. Pruss laid down. No trace of the former occupancy remains. Two big windows effectively lit by Neon signs forms the front, with entry to the cafe either from the street or from the lobby of the hotel. Dark green and buff has been chosen as the decorative motif, with gleaming white tiles underfoot. Both counter accommodation and booth service is offered and the highest standard of service will be maintained. The waitresses will assume a smart uniform which matches well the entire color scheme.

FULLY EQUIPPED KITCHEN

To the rear is a fully equipped kitchen, combining efficiency and the most scrupulous cleanliness with a half cement, half tiled floor. All white help will be used throughout. In the main body of the cafe there are modernistic lighting fixtures overhead so arranged as to cast a diffused glow with the minimum of glare. A long wall mirror gives the impression of depth and brightness to the whole, reflecting the gleaming cutlery and white cloths.

WELL KNOWN HERE

Since his arrival in the city, six and a half years ago, Mr. Pruss has been known in hotel circles as manager of the Fairfield Hotel. Formerly he had been in Portland and has had years of experience in the business on the Pacific Coast. Early this year negotiations were commenced, whereby he became proprietor of the St. James Hotel. Associated with him in the capacity of manager is Lee Halberg. Mr. Halberg was selected for the post as being thoroughly conversant with the needs of the traveling public, this knowledge having been gained through some years experience as commercial traveler in the Western district, from Winnipeg to Vancouver. He has many friends both in B.C. and in the prairie provinces as well as Up-Island, where he received his schooling at Ladysmith.

COMPLETE REDECORATION

Immediately on taking over the St. James Hotel, Mr. Pruss embarked on an extensive programme of renovation and redecoration, bringing the entire establishment up to date. Today it has achieved a growing reputation as a thoroughly modern hotel of 108 rooms, all opening on the outer air, and, through an exceptionally efficient steam heating system, warm and cosy during the Winter months. During the past Summer a greater patronage has been enjoyed than ever in the entire history of the hotel, surpassing even the days when the St. James was the headquarters for the visiting hockey teams and their following of fans who flocked to the city to attend the games at the old Arena. This year the cricket clubs who played in Victoria were quartered here, likewise the delegates to the recent wrestlers convention.

The St. James Hotel is ideally located, within a short distance to the theatre district and in the heart of the business section. The big building is 100 per cent fireproof and well constructed. With the opening of the St. James Cafe it is proved that Mr. Pruss is content with no half measures in offering his patrons the best in service.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

MORATORIUM

We had gotten so used to the moratorium of one kind and another, that we might almost be said to have become callous to the thought.

Then somebody suggested a moratorium on sermons.

Now is the time for a moratorium to end all moratoriums—or is it moratoria?

We are for a moratorium on moratoriums—again hoping we are saying the suffix right, and taking slight comfort in the conviction that if we aren't, our readers will be—and soon!

First Aid Group Is Given Banquet

NANAIMO, Sept. 26.—A complimentary banquet and dance took place in St. John's Hall Friday night in honor of the South Wellington first aid team, winners of the Dominion Championship Cup, with Nanaimo Centre hosts and hostesses. Col. Villiers, of Cumberland, made the presentation. William Fulton was chairman and G. H. Stevens and Mr. H. W. Edwardson, of the Provincial Branch of St. John Ambulance Association, were the speakers. A dance and musical programme followed the supper.

Announces Opening of New Cafe

B. "BEN" PRUSS

PROPRIETOR of the St. James Hotel, under whose management the establishment has made such big progress. Mr. Pruss has spared no effort to make the new cafe an outstanding success.

The trouble with the moratorium, as with so many other intrinsically good innovations, is that it gives the wrong people contagious ideas.

Before we know it, we are having too much of a good thing, thus making it bad.

Having wandered somewhat afield of how it started, we bring ourselves—tardily, but as you shall see, not inappropriately—back to our own particular little function.

Your Health and Your Weight

MORE THAN FOOD IS NECESSARY TO INCREASE WEIGHT

By JAS. W. BARTON, M.D.

"There is likely to be something wrong with the health of one who is either too thin or too fat. What we call normal weight is associated with a store of fat sufficient to give the body that symmetry which we associate with a sense of well-being. Graceful contour can only exist when there is sufficient padding of fat beneath the skin to eradicate depressions and irregularities of surface. The fat around the kidneys helps to support them, and a normal fat deposit in the mesentery (the connective and fat tissue that holds the abdominal organs suspended from the spinal column) helps to keep the stomach and intestines in their proper position. A normal fat reserve is a great protection against cold. It is one evidence of a state of good nutrition."

When one reads the above statements from one fo the foremost nutrition experts, Prof. E. V. McCollum, Johns Hopkins University, it would appear that fat, which is the bugbear of so many men and women today, is really something that we should all try to accumulate.

However, just as too much fat is a menace to health, so also is a lack of "sufficient" quantity to supply the actual needs of the body from the standpoint of health and appearance.

Generally speaking, the individual with a little excess fat feels "better" than one who is underweight—who lacks sufficient fat. As a matter of fact the average thin individual doesn't usually have much wrong with him physically. "Many physicians have commented upon the fact that few of the thin, anemic (thin-blooded) and underweight people we see are found on examination to have anything organically wrong with them. There is an army of this class continually going the rounds of specialists trying to discover why they do not feel well. Why are there so many who are thin-visaged, sharp-featured, angular and bony? Why do so many of these people show deviations (act differently) from the ideal in personality? The cartoonist depicts the miser, the reformer, the confirmed grouch and the pessimist, as skinny, with the sharp and thin penetrating noses, and no sense of humor." The grouch and the pessimist in many instances are what they are because their thyroid gland is too active and burns up the "cushion" of fat which their nerves really need.

Naturally the first thought in increasing weight is to eat more food of the right kind, just as in reducing weight less of certain foods is eaten.

However, while decreasing the food intake will definitely decrease weight in every case—which may be dangerous to life if food is cut down too much—the increasing of food will not definitely increase weight in a great many cases. This means then that in trying to increase weight other factors besides increasing food must be considered.

Many underweights are worriers, anxious about everything, afraid to eat certain foods, afraid of constipation and so unduly purge themselves. "They are the restless, active and overconscious people who habitually work beyond their capacity because their strength is so limited."

You can thus see that more food is necessary to build up this type of individual.

It has long been known that rest is as good as food in building up weight, just as too much rest will put on weight in those who are trying to reduce weight by reducing the food only.

But in addition to physical rest, mental rest is necessary also in building up weight, and so these thin individuals must learn to attain calmness of spirit also. This is why a holiday often increases weight in thin individuals, as they, for the time being, "leave their cares behind."

The thin individual in addition to making sure of mental and physical rest, should be examined by physician and dentist to make sure that there are no infected teeth or tonsils which may be sapping strength and preventing the normal increase in weight.

There are certain foods the fat foods—cream, butter, fat meat, egg yolks—which are direct fat producers, and the starch foods—sugar, bread, potatoes, pastry—which are readily converted into fat by the tissues.

Thus the foods which should be eaten to increase weight are fat bacon, butter, cheese, corn syrup, cream, dates, eggs, figs, nuts, honey, maple syrup, oleomargarine, olive oil, rice, sugar and milk.

A little extra "snack" of food—banana, orange, glass of milk, eggnog—at 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. and just before retiring is a definite help to increase weight.

KIDDIES WILL VIEW PALACE

Duncan Rotary Club Bringing Solarium Children to Victoria Today

For some fifty children of the Queen Alexandra Solarium, today will be a memorable one, for they are to see Titania's Palace, now being exhibited at the Hudson's Bay Company store.

Accompanied by ten nurses, the kiddies are expected to arrive at the store about 2:30 o'clock in twelve cars and a bus. They will be brought here as guests of the Duncan Rotary Club, and will be served ice cream and refreshments at the store, following their inspection of the art treasure and its 4,000 priceless furnishings.

The palace has been loaned by Sir Nevile Wilkinson, its creator, to the Rotary Clubs in Canada for showings throughout the Dominion in the interests of crippled children. All money contributed here will go to the Queen Alexandra Solarium, and the local committee is anxious that thousands of Victorians will see the wondrous exhibit and thereby help the crippled children.

Choral Union Planning for Busy Season

The Victoria Choral Union and Orchestra has a most interesting season ahead of it, with the third annual performance of Handel's "Messiah" to be given in Christ Church Cathedral on December 9 and the organization participating in the Coronation celebration in May, 1937.

This second event will be in the nature of a State and Civic function, and the programme will include Handel's "Zadok the Priest." This work was composed by Handel for the Coronation of King George II and Queen Caroline and has been sung at every coronation since. It is a great favorite with lovers of Handel's music and is invariably included in the great triennial Handel Festival at the Crystal Palace at Sydenham, London.

Inaugurated in 1857, the festival has continued ever since, and grows in popularity as the years go by. The chorus numbers some 3,200 picked singers and is accompanied by a band of 495 instruments.

REHEARSALS ANNOUNCED

Rehearsals for the "Messiah" and "Zadok the Priest" will start at the Memorial Hall on Friday, October 2, at 8:30 p.m., for the chorus and on Monday, October 5, at 7:30 p.m., for the orchestra. Those wishing to take part in this memorable and unique event are requested to register as soon as possible. The chorus is limited to 284 members, this being the seating capacity of the special platform used on these occasions.

Names of soloists for the "Messiah" will be announced by the committee later.

NEW VARIETY OF RICE

MANILA, P.I., Sept. 26 (AP).—Eight years of crossbreeding by the Philippines Bureau of Plant Industry has produced a new rice known as "raminad." It gives a higher yield than existing varieties.

Two club members were having a heated argument in a city club lounge. Every moment their words became more personal. Finally one said: "You've enough tin in your head to make a kettle."

"And you've got enough water in your head to fill it," came the prompt reply.

Another member who had been listening to the futile argument in disgust rose to his feet. "And both of you have enough gas to boil it," he said, and quickly left the room.

MOSCOW, Sept. 26 (AP).—Drying and seasoning of wood by ultra-short radioactive rays has been accomplished successfully by the scientific research institute for the reworking of wood. Engineers claim they can cure beams for railroad car construction in two and three-quarter hours instead of fifteen days required for fire-curing.

FILLING IN

A man out for a walk threw a coin towards a blind man's cup. The coin missed and rolled along the pavement, but the man with the dark glasses quickly recovered it.

"But I thought you were blind," said the man who had thrown the coin.

"No, I am not the regular blind man, sir," he said. "I'm just taking his place while he's at the movies."

LADYSMITH TRIUMPHANT

LADYSMITH CITY COUNCIL, 1904

By B.A. McKELVIE and R.S. WOOD

FORESHORE BUILDINGS AND HARBOR

BOOMING GROUNDS

ON a newly levelled plot of ground surrounding a shining 100-foot flagpole, residents of Ladysmith yesterday witnessed a ceremony unique in these times. Mayor Wymond W. Walkem and members of his Council, with former chief magistrates and aldermen, set fire to a sheaf of redeemed debentures, and proclaimed that the comunity was free from its bonded debt. At the same time a bright new flag broke out from the top of the big staff, heralding new hopes and a new outlook for the city, which, despite tremendous odds, fought on through adversity and kept faith with those who had trusted in her word.

This event is the more outstanding coming, as it does, on the eve of a special sitting of the Legislature called to consider provincial aid to municipalities, and when the larger communities of British Columbia are seeking accommodation from their bondholders in the way of reduced interest. During the past six years several cities and municipalities had to abandon local administration and turn their affairs over to Government-appointed commissioners. If any town was justified in such action, Ladysmith would have been that community, for circumstances were such that the sole support of the town's industrial activity, the coal mines at Extension, were closed. But Ladysmith refused to admit defeat, and the idea of repudiating its obligations was never considered. Citizens struggled on doggedly, making sacrifices, public and personal, meeting new difficulties and financial calamities undaunted, always looking forward to the day when brighter prospects might appear.

New Era of Progress

LADYSMITH is celebrating an accomplishment. She has a right to be proud of her record, and is justified in a vision of a new era of progress. The Comox Logging Company has come in to conduct vast lumbering operations in the region behind the town, and appreciative of the spirit of Ladysmith is making the city the headquarters of its work, so the bright new flag, donated by Hugh Savage, member in the Legislative Assembly for the district, which was yesterday hauled to the top of the big pole—a gift of the logging company, and the first timber brought out from the virgin timber stands—signifies a fulfillment, in part, of the sustaining vision through the dark years.

Ladysmith was born during the tumult of war, for it came into being at the time that Canada's sons were aiding the cause of Empire on the South African veldts. Hon. James Dunsmuir, president of the Wellington Colliery Company, was engaged in opening up recently located coal beds five miles from Nanaimo. When arrangements could not be made to ship the product of the new mines from that place he determined to lay out a new town and shipping centre. He selected sloping ground on Oyster Harbor—one of the most sheltered inlets on the Coast.

Plans had progressed to a point where a name for the community must be selected. Several were under consideration, when the news was flashed across the world that Ladysmith, in Natal, where Sir George White had been besieged for months by Boers under Joubert, had been relieved by General Lord Dundonald. In jubilation, Mr. Dunsmuir declared "the town shall be named Ladysmith." Further, he ordered that each street should bear the name of a British general, and with one exception—that of High Street—they were dedicated to preserving the memory of the leaders of British arms, while the highest point, later crowned by the public school, was christened Spion Kop.

In the midst of such reminders of the fighting spirit of Great Britain, citizens of Ladysmith developed a determination and steadfast character that has carried them through many trials and tribulations in the past thirty-six years.

Mother of Ladysmith

THE mother-town of Ladysmith was Old Wellington, where Robert Dunsmuir had achieved fame and fortune in the operation of the great colliery he constructed there. At one time Wellington was one of the most populous and prosperous mining communities in the West, but gradually the famous coal beds were worked out, and with the establishment of the new enterprise, which became known as Extension Mines, and the location of Ladysmith as the communal centre and shipping point, Wellington was closed. The miners there were offered employment at Extension, and Mr. Dunsmuir offered to transport their houses to the new townsite. So house after house was torn down and removed from Wellington to Ladysmith, while new structures, business blocks and coal docks rose rapidly on the slopes above Oyster Harbor.

In the first three years of its existence it looked as if Ladysmith might become a considerable industrial community. Rich copper and gold ore had been discovered on Mount Sicker, and Clermont Livingstone, head of the Tyee Copper Company, selected Ladysmith as the site for a smelter. Freel & Davidson started a large foundary close to the metallurgical works of the Tyee Company, and on the waterfront before the town the Ladysmith Lumber Company, under direction of John W. Coburn, built a shingle mill.

In 1904 these industries were operating, adding their payrolls to the vast sums paid out in wages monthly by the Wellington Collieries. Building was active, a big school was but recently completed, new homes were going up, and fifteen hotels were hardly sufficient to accommodate the demand for room and board by single men and those who could not find residential quarters for their families. Times were good. The ambitions of the people of Ladysmith were high, and prospects for continued prosperity were bright. The citizens decided to apply for incorporation.

Application to Victoria for incorporation was approved and a charter was granted. Nominations were called for the first Council, and those names were seated without division. Contests for municipal offices have been comparatively few in the history of Ladysmith, and in those that have been held the same spirit of sportsmanship that has characterized the citizens in the world of athletics has been manifested.

Town's First Mayor

JOHN W. Coburn, now a resident of Vancouver, was the first Mayor. A capable businessman who played a large part in the development of Vancouver Island, he gave unstintingly of his time and abilities in those early days of Ladysmith's corporate existence.

Patrick Malone, deceased, a highly respected and capable Irishman, who was quiet spoken but determined and far-seeing, succeeded Mayor Coburn.

Donald Nicholson, who died last year greatly lamented, took office after Mayor Malone. Mr. Nicholson was a man of powerful build and tremendous physical strength. He was a contractor, who did much to develop the city. His administration was, like that of his predecessors, cautious and careful of community interests.

Dr. R. B. Dier, now practicing his profession as dental surgeon in Nanaimo, was the fourth Mayor of the city. He was a progressive, energetic and popular chief magistrate.

Mayor Dier was followed by the late George Hillier, station agent for the E. & N., an upright man who maintained a firm faith in the future of the city, which he guided with acumen.

John Bickle succeeded Mayor Hillier, taking office after having demonstrated his ability on the aldermanic board. Mr. Bickle, a pioneer businessman, is still engaged in merchandising in Ladysmith. He brought to the office long marked business experience and unbounded faith in the community.

E. G. Pannell, another merchant, now resident of Seattle, was the next Mayor. He exercised sound judgment in his leadership.

William Anderson, who later passed away greatly mourned, a sturdy Scot of build and equally solid character and good common sense, succeeded Mayor Pannell. He occupied office in 1919 when His Majesty the King, as Prince of Wales, visited Ladysmith.

Pleasant Party

By Frederick Hazlitt Brennan

DESPITE the indubitable fact that God loves United States sailors if their hearts are pure, Seaman Linn and Fireman Dunnevan had landed in the worst jam of their naval careers.

Ten weeks in the brig and a fine of two weeks' pay had been quite bad enough. The knowledge that Lieut.-Commander Herrick, skipper of the Destroyer Trimble, had turned the light of his countenance from them was still harder to bear. But the final heart-breaking blow was the discovery that Linn & Dunnevan, Force and Brains, Inc., had run afoul of no less a personage than Captain "Rhino" Roscoe, commander of the 19th Destroyer Division.

"I bet Yeoman Webster was lyin' when he said the Skipper was gonna send us to different ships and separate us. I bet he was lyin', Benny."

"A yeoman never lies about bad news, Tim!"

Fireman Dunnevan's brawny shoulders heaved with all the sorrows of the world a-sighing. "Listen, Benny," he said. "Lemme go to the Skipper and tell him it was all my fault about Flavia! I'll go right now——"

A downward motion of Seaman Linn's right thumb.

"No brains to that, Tim," he said gently. "It was your fault about Flavia, but that's all down the slop chute. Next time, let me do the thinking——"

"But Benny! Their ain't gonna be no next time. I and you will be on different ships."

"Our hearts is pure and God loves U.S. sailors, Tim. We got liberty till eleven o'clock tonight. Let's circulate!"

Fireman Dunnevan made no move to leave his perch beside the sad sea waves. He quaffed the exceedingly bitter beer of what-might-have-been.

"Flavia said she was starving, Benny. They'd kicked her out of the Exposition. And she promussed if I was to give her act a chancet in the carnival that she wouldn't trip. You know yourself she promussed with tears in her eyes that she wouldn't strip. Yerse!"

This bit of reverie caused Seaman Linn to wince. Linn & Dunnevan, Inc., had promoted a sailors' carnival for the benefit of the Seaman's Church Institute. Seaman Linn, concentrating on high finance, had entrusted to Fireman Dunnevan the task of hiring entertainers. The treacherous Flavia, egged on by light-minded aviation mechanics from North Island and abetted by marines who crashed the carnival, had entertained not wisely but too well. Flavia had danced and Flavia had teased and Flavia had stripped——

Seaman Linn wasted no bitterness, now, on Flavia. His thoughts marched at once to the fundamental cause of disaster: "It was that Div. Com., Rhino Roscoe, Tim," he growled. "The Skipper had Reverend Milton all calmed down and everybody was gonna laugh it off. But them women reformers went straight to Roscoe; and that guy couldn't laugh nothing off. He ain't laughed sincet he was an ensign!"

GAMELY Seaman Linn essayed a laugh of scorn; but his large Adam's apple had sunk ten fathoms deep and he choked:

"It was the woman angle in this jam that got Rhino on his ear. He hates 'em. Webster says some gal jilted Rhino when he was a two-striper."

"Honest, Benny?"

"Yeah. Some sassiety gal back East."

Seaman Linn buttoned his pea-jacket; twisted the grommet in his new reg cap so that it had an even jauntier flair in front; stepped off the piling and set course for La Paloma Plaza. He was still the light cruiser moving to attack, badly battered but always cocky. Fireman Dunnevan plodded faithfully two steps behind him.

"Let's go over to Broadway and see Kay Francis' picture, Benny."

"Pipe down!"

Seaman Linn placed a warning hand on his pal's arm. He nodded to indicate several marines who were crossing the street in the middle of the second block. On the opposite side, Tim and Benny could see half a dozen blue-jackets loitering about a doorway.

Fireman Dunnevan grunted. "Looks like we can get a fight. It'll help to pass the time. But you hang back and let me start this one——"

Tim and Benny moved toward the strange spectacle. Then something even stranger met their gaze. It was a neatly lettered sign across the front of what looked to be a tearoom:

Sailors of the World for Peace
Welcome, U.S. Navy

"They're feeding sailors inside, Tim!"

"Yerse! Free, do you reckon?"

"Sassiety dames. Handing out free eats. Turkey breast sandwidges an' cream of mush-room soup! I'm going back after this setties!"

A very pretty Junior Leaguer stepped out on the sidewalk. "You boys come right in!" she said. "We have oodles of food left. Just follow me."

Seaman Linn and Fireman Dunnevan shuffled in, behind their guide, and through a bevy of Junior Leaguers who were serving a handsome buffet luncheon to a score of uneasy sailors and marines.

MISS Virginia Atkinson looked up from her desk as the sailors entered. Fireman Dunnevan clutched his hat and breathed noisily. Even Seaman Linn's sang-froid suffered a momentary fluster. Miss Atkinson was class, the real thing. She looked about forty years old and extremely handsome.

"These boys would like to ask you some questions about the Movement, Miss Atkinson," said the Junior Leaguer.

"Thank you." Miss Atkinson nodded and smiled. The Junior Leaguer departed.

"Er . . . won't you boys sit down?"

"Uh . . . thanks. Take that chair, Tim. Oh, excuse me, Miss. I'm Benny Linn, seaman first, and this is Tim Dunnevan, fireman second."

"I'm so glad to know you both. Have you read any of our literature?".

"No'm. Not yet."

"Yerse, but I and Benny'll read it, and Benny can read it good, too. He's the smartest guy in the Destroyer Force."

Miss Atkinson beamed. It had been easy to feed sailors; but it was proving difficult to get to know sailors. And the entire success of the Movement depended on making contact with enlisted men.

Seaman Linn coughed.

Miss Atkinson Brought the Gavel Down on Red Katie's Head. The Rest Was Nightmare . . . Pandemonium.

"I and Tim come in to ast you what Sailors of the World for Peace is about, so on and so forth. Us U.S. sailors has got to be careful about accepting any handouts on account of it may be against the Regs. See?"

This speech caused Miss Atkinson to stiffen perceptibly. Perhaps Captain Ronald Roscoe had sent them to spy on her! It would be just like him. After all these years, he would still be full of bitterness and hatred. Just because she had told him she could never marry a bloodthirsty militarist who made a profession of war——

"Were you sent by your commanding officer to investigate us?"

"Oh, no'm, nothin' like 'at!"

"To tell you the truth, ma'am, I and Benny was kinda hungry and——"

"Pipe down, Tim!"

"Oh, don't bother to deny it." Miss Atkinson laughed with faint irony. "We know your officers are watching our Movement. They realize that if we succeed there won't be any navies for them to command!"

"Oh . . . are you a pacifist, Miss?"

"I guess we better be goin', Benny."

Miss Atkinson transfixed Fireman Dunnevan with a charming smile. "I am not a pacifist. I am merely a believer in peace."

Seaman Linn relaxed. "Oh, that's okay, then. I and Tim believes in peace and so does all the officers!"

"I happen to know an officer—several officers very well. Peace! How can men who devote their lives to preparation for war be anything but bloodthirsty? They'd like nothing better than to send you enlisted men into a battle!"

Seaman Linn coughed again.

"Ain't you thinking of generals, Miss? They stay ten miles behind the trenches. But you take admirals——. Admirals has to go wherever the ships go, see? Right down the line with we enlisted men!"

DISREGARDING this turn of the argument with an idealist's ruthless concentration, Miss Atkinson began to talk. Sailors of the world for peace, she said, would end all wars. The enlisted men in every navy were being organized. If statesmen started a war and officers ordered enlisted men to fight, they would simply refuse. Sailors of the World for Peace did not believe in mutiny or sabotage. That was violence and abhorrent to any right-thinking individual. They would simply refuse to load the guns. . . .

"Yerse, but you don't know Chief Mulcahy, ma'am. When Chief Mulcahy says 'Load——'"

"Pipe down, Tim!"

Seaman Linn's bright blue eyes were bland and unctuous.

"Tim don't mean that, Miss," quoth he. "Tim has just as high ideals of peace, so on and so forth, and loving your brother—as any of us. I think you got a good slant on this peace business! It may take a little time to work out, but it's a good slant!"

"I knew you'd see it! Tell me, Mr. Linn, did you ever do any organization work?"

"I'm a whiz at that, Miss. Ain't I, Tim?"

"Yerse . . . only we land in the brig every time——"

"Why, Tim don't you remember the big dance we promoted up at San Pedro and got eleven hundred to turn out?"

"You're nuts, man!" declared Miss Atkinson, rising in her enthusiasm. "You're a real leader even though you are small in stature——"

"Pipe down, Tim!"

Carried away with an idea, Miss Atkinson appeared not to have heard Mr. Dunnevan's remark. Mr. Linn was her man. The Movement wanted to organize a big peace rally of enlisted men.

Seaman Linn, his Adam's apple rising from the depths, stopped her: "I'll tell you how you can fix that, Miss! You give attendance prizes, see? You number each ticket and maybe have twenty free prizes in the draw, see? Sailors will go for anything that's free——"

"An inspiration, Mr. Linn!"

Honest tears of relief moistened Miss Atkinson's eyes. Mr. Linn was a godsend. Sailors of the World for Peace had at last made a contact which would send the movement straight into the heart of the Fleet. A peace rally! Oh, yes. Let Captain Ronald Roscoe laugh at her now! Let him set his stubborn, cruel nature against her now! Let him call her an impossible idealist now!

"Would five thousand dollars in attendance prizes awaken real interest?"

"F-five thou——"

"Pipe down, Tim. Yeah . . . I think that'd be okay, Miss. We mightn't get the whole U.S. Navy there on account of the battleships is up to Pedro. . . . Yeah. . . . I think that'd be okay. . . ."

"Could you find time to be our manager?"

"But Benny——"

"Yeah. I'm awful busy, so on and so forth . . . but . . . yeah . . . y'see, I figure we could give a new coupe for grand prize and a couple of motorsickles for second and third prizes. . . ."

"You're my man!"

FIREMAN Dunnevan and Seaman Linn dined in state at the U.S. Grant Hotel that evening. But Fireman Dunnevan had qualms.

"But Benny—it's another promotion. And we're still in the jam the last one you got us into!"

"You go to work on your steak. We gotta start peddling tickets!"

"Peddling 'em? Miss Atkinson said we was to give 'em away——"

"No brains, Tim. You know sailors better'n that. If we was to tell them guys they could get chances on five thousand bucks' worth of prizes for nothing they'd say we was screwy and throw their tickets in the Bay!"

Fireman Dunnevan reflectively smeared his steak with half a bottle of catsup. "Somebody's screwy though, Benny. And it seems to me like it's Miss Atkinson. She can't stop no wars."

"Did I say she could!"

"No, but you kinda encouraged her, Benny."

Seaman Linn ordered the waiter to bring more pie and more coffee. Then he shook his head, sadly, sweetly, reproachfully: "I sure am ashamed of you, Tim. A swell high-class dame comes along that's got the best interests of the U.S. Navy at heart and wants to keep peace, so on and so forth, and instead of encouraging her you go an' alla time throw cold water!"

Fireman Dunnevan's conscience smoth him so hard he pushed his plate away.

"She don't know them Japs, Benny."

"Hold on, Tim! You can't tell a high-class lady like Miss Atkinson how you might hafta use force if some foreign country gets too tough. She don't know what force means."

"Aw . . . she does so."

"I bet you Miss Atkinson ain't never been in a scrap in her hull life. I bet nobody ever socked her even oncet or even pulled her hair."

"Not even oncet, Benny? Millicent and Georgine——"

"A lot of destroyer guys are over to the Dream Palace. I'll sell them an' you tackle the cruisers——"

"Atta boy, Tim! And listen—our asting price is four bits a ticket an' we don't sell none for lessen twenty-fi' cents. Get it?"

"Yerse."

THE great rally of the Sailors of the World for Peace Movement was about to get underway. Thirteen hundred and eleven sailors, marines and aviation mechanics had assembled in an extravagantly decorated dance pavilion at Coronado. They had met—the flower and chivalry of the Scouting Force—in the cause of peace; but each man clutched a numbered ticket and each man looked frequently through an open doorway to an anteroom. There the attendance prizes had been shrewdly marshaled by General Manager Benjamin Linn.

Mr. Linn sat now upon the speakers' platform. He wore his best dress blues; his hair had been neatly pastered down with water and his face shone with the knowedge of work well done. This evening promised to net Linn & Dunnevan, Inc., $434.17.

Fireman Dunnevan, on Mr. Linn's right hand, faced the audience with less aplomb. His square jaw was shaven to a polished blue steel; his fingernails were almost clean; but Fireman Dunnevan had a troubled conscience. What would the Skipper and Rhina Roscoe think about all this?

Neither aplomb nor a troubled conscience could be said to characterize Miss Virginia Atkinson, who sat in the post of honor among two chaplains and several clergymen. Proud possession is the phrase for Miss Atkinson. This was her meeting. She had bought and paid for it. Let Captain Ronald Roscoe laugh at her now.

"Very well, Mr. Linn. The meeting will please come to order. Mr. Linn . . . whom you all know——"

Seaman Linn gulped and struggled weakly to his feet. "Uh . . . you guys . . . you fellows know, I presume, what you are assembled for. This is in favor of peace—and—uh—peace is okay—uh——"

Cheers. Laughter. Mr. Linn hastened on. "Uh . . . I will now introduce to you Miss Atkinson——" (Cheers. Applause. Great enthusiasm . . . "—and—uh—you bugs better give her respectable attention—and uh . . . I will now take my seat——"

Tremendous applause.

Miss Atkinson took the floor. The meeting settled quickly to order. Miss Atkinson was pretty and she was in earnest—

"Enlisted men of the United States Navy—we are met here tonight in the cause of peace. Now, what do I mean by that word 'peace?' Is it an ugly armed-to-the-teeth compromise or——"

There was an interruption.

"Just a moment, you!"

From a side entrance strode a large, red-headed woman in a black dress. She was followed by a delegation of men and women bearing banners with strange devices. "You Can't Fool Us, Miss Atkinson!" . . . "Down With Capitalist Peace!" . . . and "Longshoremen's Local Disarmament Committee . . ."

Miss Atkinson stared.

"You are out of order," she said calmly, "I have the floor——"

Red Katie Klause, the most militant pacifist on the Pacific Coast, snorted. "You had the floor, you mean!"

"You will be given an opportunity——"

"You're darn' tootin' I will!" snapped Katie Klause, climbing to the platform. Ignoring Miss Atkinson, she turned on the astonished audience.

"Why wouldn't you sailors attend our peace meetings?" yelled Katie. "Why are you letting this capitalist, bourgeois, Fascist blue stocking fool you with fake pacifism? I'll tell you——"

"Order, order!" said Miss Atkinson.

SEAMAN Linn and Fireman Dunnevan exchanged meaning glances. There was a sudden, ominous shuffle in the audience.

"Gimme that gavel, you!" said Red Katie.

"I'm very sorry——"

Rer Katie turned and grabbed the gavel. Miss Atkinson tightened her grip and held on. Abruptly, ruthlessly, Katie Krause wrenched the gavel away. The handle rasped Miss Atkison's fingers; it felt as if two of her fingers had been torn away with the gavel.

"Now, go sit down, you!"

A police whistle sounded. For the first time in her life Miss Atkinson was face to face with force—"force to the utmost." Red Katie was big and she was tough and she was angry.

"You give me that gavel——"

"Sit down, you!"

Seaman Linn got to his feet. Fireman Dunnevan stood up. Miss Atkinson reached for the gavel as Katie tried to shove her . . . Smack! Miss Atkinson fell back against the table, gavel in hand. Her face stung and her head felt like the inside of a gong just struck. . .

"You . . . you hit me? Why, you . . ."

Another police whistle sounded. Seaman Linn's voice rang above the muttering storm: "All right, sailors! Throw 'em out!"

"You hit me, did you?

Miss Atkinson raised her arm and brought the gavel down on Red Katie's head. The rest was nightmare . . . pandemonium . . . Red Katie screaming, "They're beating up my boys. Stop them, you!" Miss Atkinson was hit again . . . she looked into a hate-inflamed face . . . She heard her own voice saying hoarsely: "I'll scratch your eyes out . . . I'll k-kill you . . . let me at her . . . let me at her . . ."

Seaman Linn dived expertly between Red Katie and Miss Atkinson just as Red Katie seized a chair. He clipped Red Katie deftly on the button and Red Katie subsided.

"Let me at her——" sobbed Miss Atkinson.

"Here, Tim . . . you take Miss Atkinson outa here."

"You take her, Benny. I wanta stay——"

"Shore Patrol! Shore Patrol!"

Seacan Linn turned reluctantly to Miss Atkinson and said: "Don't bother to kick Katie, miss. C'mon, you gotta get outa here——"

Shame overwhelmed Miss Atkinson. She burst into tears. Seaman Linn quickly led her through the din of battle—just as flying squads of Shore Patrols charged the melee—and out a back door to Miss Atkinson's limousine.

"Put some fresh-ground hamburger on that eye, miss," he said, "I got to go back and help Tim. S'long."

Miss Atkinson, ignoring her Filipino chauffeur's questions, sank down on the running board and wept bitterly.

CAPTAIN Ronald Roscoe, routed out of a bridge game with brother officers by word of a riot, was astounded to see a woman in a mink coat, her hair loosened and her right eye blackened, being helped into a handsome car. He paused——

"Virginia? You? Why, what in the world——"

"Ronald! Oh, Ronald!"

To Miss Atkinson the sight of Captain Roscoe, solid, dependable and official, was very welcome. She turned and impulsively threw her arms round his neck.

"I'm so sorry, Ronald . . . so sorry for everything——"

"There . . . there . . . it's all over now . . ."

"I'm so ashamed——"

"Who hit you? Who dared——"

"A terrible woman—but I hit her, too—with my gavel——"

"Don't cry, Virginia. I'm going to look after you——"

Later, riding home with Captain Roscoe diplomatically silent and looking extremely handsome, Miss Atkinson spoke her heart: "I was wrong, Ronald. About force—it's in the world—it will take years to educate men to control force."

Captain Roscoe squeezed her hand. I was too harsh. I was a young fool——"

Miss Atkinson shuddered. "That woman—if Mr. Linn and Mr. Dunnevan hadn't rescued me—she—she was going to hit me with a chair——"

"Linn and Dunnevan?"

"They were wonderful! They went into action like—like veterans—but all our sailors fought well——"

Captain Roscoe winced. "Linn and Dunnevan, eh?"

Miss Atkinson snuggled closer. "You must do something for those boys, Ronald. I—I think they saved my life——"

A hard man, Captain Roscoe, but a fair man. "They saved mine, too," he said, taking Miss Atkinson in his arms.

Fireman gazed around at the familiar grey walls of the storeroom which the U.S.S. Trimble used as a brig.

"It was your fault this time, Benny."

"Yeah."

"This is a nice place compared to Portsmouth, Benny." Then, swallowing hard, "Don't look so low, Benny. You look orful."

Fireman Dunnevan sighed.

"It was a good riot. You hafta admit that."

"Yeah. Ten years' worth."

Faithful ao the and, Fireman Dunnevan shook his head stubbornly. "Miss Atkinson is part Erish colleen. If she hadn't got socked by Katie I bet she would do somepin for us. I bet she sends us cigarettes at Portsmouth."

Seaman Linn scowled. "They get sailors in trouble—then they don't know you. All dames is alike."

There was a jaunty rapping on the door. The face of Yeoman Webster, the Skipper's writer, appeared in the peek window.

"Hi, you guys!"

"Hand me that slop bucket, Tim."

Yeoman Webster backed off. "I was just going to tell you that you guys are both to be released and promoted one grade and have your pay restored."

"Liar."

Fireman Dunnevan shuffled forward.

"Who said so, Webster?"

"Captain Rhino Roscoe said so, that's who. I just this minute saw the written order he sent the Skipper. I saw it with my own eyes."

"Rhino Roscoe? Now I know you're lying——"

"No, you dope. That Miss Atkinson you guys got mixed up with is Roscoe's old girl. They're gonna get married. I saw it in The Herald this morning."

Seaman Linn quickly closed the peep window. He could not allow a yeoman to see a U.S. sailor emotional.

On the Forbidden Plateau

As a London Writer Saw It

(By H. M. in The Overseas Daily Mail, London, Eng.)

MIDWAY up the East Coast of Vancouver Island, some thirty miles beyond the highway, lies one of the most wonderful yet least explored spots of Western Canada—a hundred square miles of magic and beauty, 4,500 feet above the sea.

Until a few years ago, when accidentally stumbled on to by a party of lost gold prospectors, this was practically unknown except to the Indians of the district, to whom it was a land of evil spirits and misfortune—which accounts for the name, the Forbidden Plateau.

Three-Miles' Trail

A SEVEN-HOURS' run by motor car from Victoria to the north takes one to Courtenay, from where now runs a good road to the Forbidden Plateau Lodge, a cluster of red cedar cabins, 2,200 feet above sea level, at the head of the steep three-miles' trail (which can be mounted either afoot or on horseback) to the plateau proper.

The climb is stiff but consistent, and in a little under two hours one is at the top of the pass, 2,300 feet above the lodge, from where the view is indescribably magnificent. Range upon range of dazzling snow-covered peaks and blue-green glaciers stretch as far north and south as the eye can reach.

The first view of the plateau is impressive. From the narrow pass the trail drops slightly, and the plateau, hemmed in on all sides except to the east by mighty snow-covered peaks, broaden out into comparatively open country, grassy meadowlands, carpeted with beautiful wild flowers, the wide sweeps of the mauve and white mountain phlox creating a wonderfully charming picture; stretches of open alpine glades covered with white and purple heather; wooded hillsides, eternal snow-capped peaks, lakes and tumbling waterfalls.

Wonder of the Lakes

THE lakes are very numerous on the plateau, deep grey in color, reflecting the beauty of the overhanging banks of rocks and heather, or a most lovely clear dark blue like that of some of the Swiss lakes. The lakes and streams alike abound in trout.

The only fault, if fault it be, is that from the fishermen's viewpoint the trout are perhaps a little too plentiful.

To wander over the plateau, camping where and how one likes—one's bed a sleeping bag laid on top of the heather—is a rarely delightful holiday experience. There is always plenty to do on the plateau besides the obvious pleasures of hiking, fishing and exploring.

The plateau has been created a game reserve and all its wild life is extremely friendly and unafraid. Deer come down to the waters to drink seemingly quite unconcerned over the presence of humans. Ptarmigan and grouse walk about almost under one's feet, and wild ducks and geese settle down on to their resting places contentedly and unafraid. It is no uncommon sight on the plateau to see as many as half a dozen bears together on the hillsides during blueberry time, enjoying the fruit.

Mountain Climbing

FOR the mountaineer there are numerous mountains waiting to be climbed—easy as well as difficult. Mount Castle, with its serrated ridges and fantastic towers and pinnacles, and Mount Albert Edward, with its great dome-like head, are the two mountains most favored by experienced climbers. Neither is a mountain for the amateur to assail. High up on Mount Castle that rare and muchly prized yellow heather and the peculiar vegetation known as red snow are found.

The season is short on the plateau—from about early July until late in September—for the snows come early and lie late. Slowly it has become realized that the plateau besides being an ideal Summer camping ground for those who like solitude and high places, affords wonderful opportunities for Winter sports and skiing.

Lily Eight Feet High

A GIANT arum lily, eight feet high and three and a half feet across, is attracting crowds to the hothouse of the Agricultural High School at Wageningen, in Holland. It is growing from a bulb that weighs eighty-eight pounds. The lily, which is from the tropics, seldom blossoms. The flower lasts only two days. It blossomed the first time in July, 1932, and is the only specimen in Europe.

Animal Stowaways

BOARDING the liner Nestor at Fremantle, Australia, recently, customs inspectors found parrots, marmosets and monkeys worth $1,000 concealed in the stoker and bunkers. The crew denied all knowledge of them, so the customs authorities classified them as stowaways and sent them to the Perth Zoo.

Elizabeth Gaskell's Cranford

By J. Edward Norcross

Storm Over New Stamp—An Old English Custom—Silver Jubilee's Speed—Out Into the World

LONDON (By Mail).—There are certain pilgrimages which the visitor to this country who is at all interested in English literature simply must make. They may be classified as major and minor.

That to Stratford-upon-Avon comes first, of course, after one has done one's London, and then there are Wordsworth's cottage at Grasmere, Ruskin's house on Coniston, Milton's cottage in Buckinghamshire, the Tennyson country in Lincolnshire (one of the few places in England where one may sit, like the lotus eaters, upon the yellow sand, "between the sun and moon upon the shore"; Hardy's Wessex, and Gray's churchyard at Stoke Poges, to mention a few taken at random, each of them with its own beauty, all different from one another, yet all typically and unmistakably English.

I made my pilgrimage to Cranford the other day. I suppose Cranford would count as a minor shrine. It is only twenty miles from Smoky Manchester but, set amid the rich meadows of Cheshire, where feed the placid kine which are ultimately responsible for the famous cheeses, it is in a world quite other than the grim, industrial North so close at hand.

But you won't find Cranford on the map. It conceals its identity by calling itself Knutsford. The house where Miss Matty lived for so many years, however, still stands on Princes Street, disguised as a drugstore with a very modern front—so different from the teashop the old lady opened in the front room when she lost her money in the bank failure.

Quiet Little Chapel

HIDDEN behind a comparatively modern building at Knutsford there is a quiet little graveyard in which stands a Unitarian chapel (places of worship of whatever denomination other than those of the Established Church are usually called chapels in this country) which when erected early in the eighteenth century may have looked plain to the point of austerity.

Time has toned its brisk walls into a warm, soft red and partially covered them with ivy which has to be cut back from the diamond-paned windows, peeping out from under the tiled roof.

Trees of a funereal appearance, weeping willows and conifers, give shade to this quiet retreat in which there is a grave with a stone inscribed: "Elizabeth Gaskell; September 29, 1810; November 12, 1865."

Hither come visitors from all over the English-speaking world and not a few from other parts, quiet bespectacled people from New England and Australia, students from Canada who have just "done" Chester, twenty or thirty miles away, intellectual-looking Germans and Scandinavians, and teachers from Liverpool and Manchester conducting their literature classes for boys and girls.

They wander through the narrow streets of Mrs. Gaskell's Cranford and look for the house where Captain Brown read extracts from the first monthly parts of the "Pickwick Papers" to Miss Deborah Jenkyns, thus linking "Cranford," the story, with the Pickwick centenary.

Didn't Like Dickens

DICKENS was an unknown writer then and, as you may read, Miss Deborah did not think much of him. She preferred the works of Dr. Johnson.

But she was tolerant. "Still, perhaps, the author is young," she said. "Let him persevere and who knows what he will become if he will take the great Doctor for his model."

Reluctantly, as you may also remember, she consented to listen, "in patient gravity," to the account of the "swarry" which Sam Weller gave at Bath, and then, in her turn, read one of the conversations between Rasselas and Imlac, crushing the captain, only he wouldn't be crushed, by observing in magisterial tones as she concluded, "I imagine I am now justified in my preference for Dr. Johnson as a writer of fiction."

The modern shop-fronts apart, Knutsford seems very much what it was when Mrs. Gaskell lived there as a girl, among the quaint early-Victorians who she was later to describe with such gentle humor.

The half-timbered houses, reminding one of Christmas cards, that date back to the Tudors, still stand on the market place. "Ye Angel Inn" still caters for travelers as it did in the thirteenth century and as it has done ever since.

The sidewalks in the narrow streets are but little wider than when they were laid in conformity with the condition imposed by a lady who left a legacy for the purpose. They must be just wide enough for people to walk on them in single file, she declared, as all her life she had objected to seeing a man and a woman "linking."

The background is still there and imagination can fill in the picture with the dear, old ladies with whom Mrs. Gaskell peopled Cranford—for there were no gentlemen in this paradise of female gentility except Captain Brown, who, however, was run over and killed on the new railway (it should have a centenary, too, this year) early in the story.

For lovers of "Cranford," the Misses Jenkyns, Miss Pole, Mrs. Jamieson and the rest of the delightful coterie still trip along the streets of Knutsford in their pattens and galashes.

The Hungry Forties

MOST of Mrs. Gaskell's life was spent, not in Knutsford, but in Manchester where, as the wife of a Unitarian minister, she saw the conditions under which the poor of the manufacturing towns lived in the "hungry forties" and described them in "Mary Burton."

She wrote many stories but is chiefly remembered for "Mary Burton" and "Cranford." She must have received a good deal of money from her publishers.

It would be more proper to say, perhaps, that her husband received it. "Do you know hey sent me ten pounds for 'Lizzie Leigh'? William has composedly buttoned it up in his pocket," she wrote to a friend.

This was quite in accordance with William's rights under the law as it then stood. A married woman could own nothing. Her income, even when it was an earned income, could be taken from her by her husband to the last farthing. This applied in all ranks of society. The money a poor woman earned by washing clothes to provide her children with bread might be pounced upon by a drunken husband.

Mrs. Gaskell made no complaint, but she was one of the first to sign a petition for a Married Woman's Property Act, less, it may be surmised, from a sense of the injustice of the law as it affected herself than from her abhorrence of the wrongs she had seen done poorer women by brutal husbands.

The act was passed but not until she had been lying for more than twenty years in the quiet grave by the Unitarian chapel that makes Knutsford and Cranford live forever.

Hitler Defies Russia in Speech to Nazis

JOSEF STALIN ADOLF HITLER K. E. VOROSHILOFF

Germany's greatest enemy is Soviet Russia, Reich Chancellor Adolf Hitler told the Nazi party congress at Nuremberg in a bitter diatribe against Communism. He declared that Russia was moving troops ever closer to the German border, and that he believed a "showdown" was inevitable. The Nazi chieftain also indicated where Germany's attempts at expansion may lie when he cast covetous eyes upon Russian sources of raw material which Germany lacks. Should armed conflict between Russia and Germany break out, strong man of the Soviet would be K. E. Voroshiloff (right), Commissar of Defence, and generally favored to succeed Dictator Josef Stalin (left), already reported seriously ill. A battalion of crack Red infantry troops are shown top as they paraded through Moscow. Chancellor Hitler is shown in familiar speaking pose as he addresses his Nazi stalwarts.

Storm Over Stamps

THE new postage stamps, which have just been issued for Great Britain and Northern Ireland, are causing the storm of criticism which seems inevitable when familiar designs, whether of stamps or comage, are departed from.

The present design is the simplest the Post-office has ever issued. There is no ornamentation, no "twiddly bits." The head of His Majesty, taken from a photograph (an innovation) is displayed in profile on a shaded background which deepens towards the left, to which the King's head is looking. Plain white figures in the top left-hand corner state the denomination. A small crown balances them in the opposite corner. Below, in large type, is the one word "postage."

And that is all. There is no indication of the country of origin as in other stamps. There never has been on British stamps, the likeness of the monarch being held sufficient.

"Refreshing in its starkness," is one comment on the King's likeness. Enlarging on this another writer says that "in their clear-cut directness the new designs are true to the spirit of the age and are the more characteristic of the King whom they depict."

"Bold, arresting, efficient and effective," is a third, "though," it continues, "many may be of the opinion that the expression is unnecessarily stern."

In the opposite camp it is declared that the new stamps "strike a heavy blow at the national pride . . . the King looks into darkness, an accidental rather than an imaginative comment on his era."

The face is grave and the lips are firmly set. "The well-poised head . . . has all the dignity that public symbolism should require." Nevertheless, "millions would have been delighted had the famous smile been reproduced."

The photograph used, it has just been announced, was chosen by the King himself.

It is understood that the new stamps are "test stamps." If it is found that the public really does not like them another design will be substituted. The first stamps of King George V were ultimately rejected. The penny scarlet of 1912 is now much sought by collectors.

The Modern Touch

THE new postage stamps have been issued at an unprecedentedly early date as compared with those of other reigns. New coins are a more difficult matter and they are not to appear before next year.

The stamps, as has been noted, depict the King's head looking to the left. In the new coins it will look to the right, it being the custom to make the change from one profile to the other each reign.

Stamps, however, have been issued during only four reigns. If a change were to be made it should have been when King Edward VII ascended the throne. The position on the coins was changed but that on the stamps was not and so has remained the same ever since the first postage stamps were issued early in the reign of Queen Victoria.

Coinage changes are more risky than even changes in the designs of stamps. For one thing they are not so easily modified. It is a costly business to produce a new coinage.

Elderly people will recall the uproar that arose over the issue made to mark Queen Victoria's first jubilee. The effigies were scrapped, [illegible]

A serious mistake marked the issue. The sixpences and half-sovereigns were very similar in appearance, except that the former were silver and the latter gold, so similar that expert rascals made a good deal of money by coating sixpences with gold and passing them off as half-sovereigns.

Elderly people will also remember when a ship and a lighthouse were depicted along with Britannia on the "tails" of copper coins. They have disappeared, despite their popularity, but Britannia continues to hold her trident in her left hand—for what reason I am not informed.

Old English Custom

THE English habit of taking a cup of tea at 4 o'clock has found its way into some Canadian offices but, so far as I am aware, the morning coffee habit has not yet crossed the Atlantic. Over here, at 11 o'clock work stops while the clerks slip out to the nearest cafe for ten minutes or so.

It is an open question whether either custom makes for better work. A lecturer at the Summer School of the Drapers' Chamber of Trade, held at Oxford, had nothing to say about afternoon tea, but roundly denounced morning coffee.

He had asked more than one young man, he said, whether the morning coffee habit was on the straight road to the managing directorship. He thought not.

At the end of the lecture a young Londoner defended morning coffee, saying that sometimes far more deals were done round the coffee table than in the firm's premises.

"There is a lot more done without it," was the stern reply. "There was some further discussion and then, it being about 11 o'clock, the students went out in a body for coffee."

The discussion reminds me of the old days when there were bars in Canada. There were men who argued that you couldn't get on in business without taking a drink with another man now and then. But I never knew a man who didn't like whisky and soda to find its consumption necessary to putting across a business deal.

This country is enjoying the cheapest fruit season in many years. The wet Summer, which was against the small fruits, seems to have brought about a plethora of apples and plums. The cheaper varieties of the latter are on sale at retail at as low as 2 cents a pound and cooking apples and pears at 6 cents.

The markets are glutted and many farmers will leave their fruit to rot rather than ship at prices which not only give no profit but which may actually result in debit bills from the brokers.

Housewives are taking advantage of the situation to make preserves at home. "Plum and apple" seems likely to become almost as much a staple of consumption next Winter as it was in the trenches. Veterans are not enjoying the prospect.

The Silver Jubilee

IT is stated that the Silver Jubilee, the London & Northeastern's fastest train, when it attained the speed of, 115 miles an hour for a short distance recently, not only broke the British record but the world record for speed made by a steam train on a regular run.

Germany claims the fastest ever with 119.85 m.p.h. achieved in June, 1935, but this was on test. The Burlington Zephyr in the United States has reached a maximum of 112.1-2 miles per hou[illegible]

The remarkable fact about the Silver Jubilee's performance was that the passengers were not aware that anything extraordinary was happening. Many of them were at lunch at the time, but there was never a quiver of a glass nor a spilling of the contents of one to tell them that they were traveling over the rails at very nearly two miles a minute.

The Silver Jubilee is the crack train that runs from London to Newcastle, 268.3 miles, in four hours, making, it is claimed, the fastest long-distance run by a steam train anywhere in the world.

Moreover, in all comparisons with foreign trains it must be remembered that the Silver Jubilee runs through many large towns and cities and across the points at numerous junctions so that its speed is necessarily reduced again and again.

National pride aroused by the achievement of the Silver Jubilee swelled immeasureably when the Queen Mary came home bringing two records with her. She has not yet secured the blue riband of the Atlantic, however, for her record must stand for three months before she can fly it at the masthead.

Whether this occurs or not depends to some extent on the weather for the next few weeks. There is no doubt that the Normandie will do her best to recapture the record before next Winter and there is good reason to believe that she still holds something in reserve.

So, also, according to her chief engineer, has the Queen Mary. "We have another horse or two in the stable," he told the guests at a welcoming luncheon.

When the Mauretania won the blue riband she kept it unchallenged for twenty years. There is not, however, the same difference between the Queen Mary and the Normandie as between the old Cunarder and her competitors. It looks likely, therefore, that we may have quite a little Atlantic racing for some time to come.

Prestige Restored

THE Queen Mary having restored British prestige on the Atlantic, Great Britain should forthwith resolve to regain the blue riband of the Pacific, says The Daily Mail.

"Heavily subsidized competitors are driving British vessels off their ancient trade routes, and the unequal struggle daily grows more hopeless," it continues.

"We still possess splendid ships. The mercantile fleet operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway is as magnificently equipped and [illegible] as any afloat. But even the energy and drive of Sir Edward Beatty, the president of the company, known to be one of the most forceful businessmen in the Empire, cannot make shipping pay against impossible odds.

"Not only have our lines to contend with America's financially-nursed tonnage but American coastal reservation excludes British traffic from trading between important and profitable ports. Yet American ships still ply freely between Canada and Australia or Australia and New Zealand."

The Daily Mail concludes by urging that the British Government grant now the subsidy that it has been promising for four years and make it at least equal to that given by the United States to American mercantile fleets.

The Rothermere paper also advocates reprisals. Coastal reservation, it says, should be met with a plan of corresponding reservation by Great Britain.

"Why not do the obvious and demand that British cargoes shall be conveyed only in British ships manned by British seamen?" it asks.

"'British' is the only policy for inter-imperial relations of every kind," it concludes.

Out in the World

MORE than 70,000 secondary school children are going out into the world this year. They are the children born during the great rise in the birth-rate which occurred in the early post-war period.

The Ministry of Labor is concerned as to the future of these youngsters and has issued a pamphlet, "Careers for Secondary School Boys," in which the boys are advised as to the requirements, qualifications and opportunities of all sorts of occupations from auctioneering and agriculture to film-producing, stock-broking and tea-tasting.

The boys are informed that advertising requires "imagination, ability to express ideas, practical business sense and appreciation of news value" and that dramatic art and film-producing need an "equable temperament."

The pamphlet advises against "the overcrowded path of routine clerical employment, in which remuneration and prospects are small" and points out that "the development of mechanical methods for routine clerical work has much diminished the number of junior clerical openings."

It is fortunate for a number of boys who are leaving school meanwhile that the Royal Air Force will need rather more than a thousand of them early next year. They are to be classified as aircraft apprentices and boy entrants. The former will be given three years' training in one or other of several highly skilled trades; the latter may become armourers, photographers or wireless operators.

They have been playing football in Scotland for a month, but on this side of the border the season opened on the last Saturday in August which, of course, fell in the middle of a heat wave.

Fans, to the number of 814,000, mostly attired in flannels, turned out to watch the forty-four league matches.

The season promises to be the greatest on record in respect of the public interest it is exciting. The increased popularity of the football pools demonstrate this.

Thousands of extra employees are required this year to deal with the tremendous mail that pours into the offices of the pools. The additional work entailed on the Postoffice staffs constitutes a worse problem than ever before and one which, from the point of view of the overladen carriers, has by no means been satisfactorily solved.

These feel that they have a special grievance in that they are required to do a great deal of extra work without extra remuneration while the Postoffice Department profits by the sale of stamps and money orders to the extent of $2,500,000 a year.

About Your Dog

By P. HAMILTON GOODSELL

ARTICLE XV.

Supernaturalness in Dogs

A QUESTION that is ever recurring in my mind is, will we ever really understand dogs? After years of deliberation based upon the closest association and study of them, my answer is, I doubt it. This doubt has its foundation in the fact that the dog is possessed of certain attributes which are lacking in the average man. That it can convey to man so much understanding of its character and actions with the meagre means at its command is to me an ever present source of wonder.

Several years ago some breeders of a certain type of dog, in their efforts to popularize the breed in this country, used to advertize it as "the dog with the human brain." While recognizing that this might be a good advertising slogan, it amused me, for it wasn't true. Man is given the power to cultivate and improve his grey matter. A dog can do the same, but it must rely largely upon man for help.

The attributes of the dog which loom so large in the path of man's effort to understand canine nature are what I term supernatural. I call them this because, so far as I am concerned at least, they cannot logically be explained or accounted for. They form an additional sixth sense, so to speak, not possessed by man generically. Everyone who understands dogs at all and has studied them and lived with them in close contact, knows that they all are, to a greater or lesser degree, psychic. This fact is most clearly indicated by two instincts, intuitive abilities, or call them what you will. The first I shall term the homing instinct, which a dog puts to various uses; and, secondly, the ability or power to sense death or disaster without any definite or explainable reason.

As to the first, a dog's sense of smell being so keen, it can be readily understood how one can find its way home even from a great distance by following its own or its master's scent. But how can we explain the fact that dogs taken hundreds of miles away from home by car or train have unerringly returned after weeks or months of weary traveling?

Sensitive to Emotions

NO scent upon the ground of their own or their master's in these cases. Hundreds of such instances are recorded. No one has explained how the animal has done it, and I believe no one ever will. As to the dog's ability to sense the approach of death, it may be argued that in the case of illness of its master or one of the family in its household, a dog may react to the feelings of worry, anxiety and apprehension that usually prevail in a house in which anyone is critically ill.

The dog is extremely sensitive to the emotions of those with whom it lives and so, in such a case, the air of foreboding prevalent may partly account for its recognition of the imminence of death; but I do not believe it is entirely due to this fact. For were this the case, how should we explain that many times a dog has clearly shown by its actions that it was aware of dire disaster at the exact moment its master died miles away?

The Great War furnished many instances to prove the truth of certain qualities of men and dogs, and so I am going to cite two recorded examples.

A British officer went to the front, leaving his dog behind. The animal sorely missed its master, but was equally devoted to its mistress, and slept on a rug just inside her bedroom whence it never stirred until she awoke in the morning, when it would come over to the bed for a matinal caress.

One day on awakening and calling to the dog, as usual, its mistress was surprised not to receive the customary response of a lick of her extended hand. Turning her head, she did not see the dog in its usual place upon the rug.

Foretold Master's Death

FINALLY, after repeated calling, the dog slowly crawled from beneath the bed much dejected. Its tail was down, its eyes frightened and mournful, its nose hot and dry, and it immediately returned under the bed and refused to emerge even for its morning walk. Thinking that something was seriously wrong with the dog, the woman glanced at the clock, wondering if she would have time to get to the vet's office before he left. At that moment the dog raised its head and gave voice to a prolonged and mournful howl, trembling violently the while.

Four days later the woman received word that her husband had been instantly killed as he started "over the top" at the exact moment his faithful pal back in England gave vent to its cry of anguish.

Again a man living in Ireland enlisted in 1914 and went to France leaving his wife and dog. Shortly after he went to the front, the wife moved to a suburb of London, taking the dog with her. Later on soldier-husband received leave of absence and joined his wife in the new home in England. The joy of the dog at the brief reunion was unbounded. When the husband's leave expired and he returned to the front, his dog was dejected, and after a few days disappeared. The wife advertised for and sought the dog everywhere, but without success. Finally, after about ten days, she wrote her husband advising him of the loss of the dog.

Imagine her surprise on receiving a letter from the soldier, saying that his dog had joined him a few days before while he was in the front line trenches at the very time all the area behind the line was being drenched with a vicious barrage of high explosives. To accomplish this astounding feat the dog had had to travel through ten miles of unfamiliar London streets, sixty or seventy miles of unknown countryside to the coast, board a cross-channed boat, and then traverse about an equal distance to the front.

Explain these instances if you can. I can't.

Life of Lord Balfour

An Intimate Story

By J. EDWARD NORCROSS

IT had been generally known that a disappointment in an early love affair was the secret of the lifelong celibacy of the late Lord Balfour. The story is now told for the first time by his niece, Mrs. Blanche E. C. Dugdale, whose "Life of Lord Balfour" is being published serially in The Daily Telegraph.

When at Cambridge Balfour had become friendly with Spencer Lyttleton, son of Lord Lyttleton and one of the famous cricketing brothers. Lyttleton took him down to the family home in Worcestershire, and there he met his friend's sister, the Hon. Mary ("May") Lyttleton.

Lady Lyttleton and Mrs. Gladstone, wife of the great Prime Minister, were sisters, and at Christmas, 1870, a few months later, Balfour and Miss Lyttleton were fellow-guests at a big Christmas party at Hawarden, the residence of the Gladstones. It became apparent that Balfour was very much attracted by the young lady, then a bright girl of twenty.

They became intimate friends, but Balfour hesitated and Miss Lyttleton became engaged to another young man. The young man died within a year and the way seemed clear for Balfour. He was just about to propose formally and had, indeed, made his intentions clear when, in January, 1875, Miss Lyttleton was struck down by a terrible illness, to which she succumbed. The ring which was to have been the engagement ring was placed in her coffin.

Until now only one obscure hint of the tragic end of Lord Balfour's love story has ever appeared in print. It occurs in Mrs. Alfred Lyttleton's biography of her husband. Writing of his sister, she said:

"Just when death overtook her, there seemed to be opening before her a life completed by love, and with opportunities for the development of her powers."

Very few readers knew what lay behind this single sentence. To those who did not know, there was nothing to indicate what might have been for both May Lyttleton and Arthur Balfour.

Flowers Cause Ban

BECAUSE several foreign-made art objects contained decorative motifs which resembled the Japanese Imperial crest, they were ordered withdrawn by the police from an exhibition in Nihonbashi, Japan. The design is reported to be similar to the chrysanthemum which appears on the crest. Included were an Italian cake tray, a French stein, a set of hair ornaments and a Japanese ink set. The owners of the objects and interested Japanese were summoned to the police station and compelled to sign an abject apology.

Cure for Bad Temper

The serum, extracted from the red corpuscles of the blood, has been used with success in the treatment of mental diseases it is stated. The best results were obtained in cases of melancholy.

A Page For CHILDREN

Have You a School Garden

YOU are all back at school. Most of you, it is hoped, are determined to make your own school, public or private, the best on Vancouver Island. Your teachers are your leaders and will spare no pains to help you.

There is such a lot to be done in the years before you, but if you keep at it hour by hour, yes, minute by minute, you will get through.

Now, there is a little bit of your school life that can be improved by many children in country places. Are your schoolhouse and its surroundings beautiful or are they bleak and bare and ugly?

If already the walls are covered with roses and flowering creepers; if there are flowers in the borders so that their fragrance greets you as you turn the corner, then it is for you to trim and prune and prepare the ground for next year's seeds.

But if nothing has yet been done to beautify the place which is to be your daylight home till next year's holidays come, there is something for each of you to do.

Of course, you must keep space clear for a playground. But if there is nowhere else to plant, there are the walls of the schoolhouse, the fences and outhouses. Window boxes can be put up inside and outside.

You can all get wild currant bushes, with their lovely crimson blossoms, to plant in some sheltered corner. Then there is the Oregon grape, with its shiny leaves, yellow blossoms and purple fruit. Sword ferns will grow almost anywhere, and there are many other kinds that will bear transplanting.

Neighbors will give you hollyhocks and Canterbury bells and columbines. Yes, it will cost you time and labor. Somehow your school garden must be watered in the holidays. There must be plans drawn and carried out. Your garden may not do much the first year, but long before you little folk are ready for High School, people will stop their motors to admire your garden.

Already some schools have made gardens. Will the pupils or teachers write and tell us how they managed it?

Your editor is sure many of the seedsmen would be glad to give boys and girls bulbs or cuttings, or even seeds, if they thought they would be used carefully.

Now is the time to start, before the Fall rains make the ground too wet. If your schoolhouse has been perched on a barren hill, it might be possible to make a rock garden. Think about it. But don't wait too long.

The Pigeon

IT was Carol's birthday. He had six presents in all, and each, as it came to him, seemed jollier than the last.

From father there was the right stamp album; from mother a book of true adventure; from the girls a game of Halma; from Uncle Tom the bicycle pump he needed. And so on. But was this another present? Carol thought, as, busy with a letter of thanks, he looked up about lunch-time to find his father entering the room holding a beautiful live pigeon in his hand.

Could it be? Carol had longed and longed for a pigeon and had never had one. But here it was, the lovely thing, with its burnished green and mauve neck feathers. Father held some grain near its beak; it lay quietly in his grasp, but it did not attempt to eat. It was frightened, and stared anxiously in front of it.

"One wing is cut," said Carol's father. "It can't fly."

"Oh, what a shame, father. But when it re-feathers, I suppose——"

"It will be all right then. I wonder where it has come from."

"Don't know in the least. Please, please let me hold it," Carol begged.

"Shall I put it in with the chickens for a bit? In case Tim eats it." (Tim was the family cat.)

"If nobody claims it, dad, do you think that I could keep it?" asked Carol eagerly, and he grew pale as he gazed at the bird, so soft and confiding in his hand. That anybody should have dared to clip its wing.

"If nobody claims it; yes, my boy, you shall keep it," was the answer.

All went well. Nobody claimed the bird all that long Summer day. But at evening Carol was passing down the back path and chanced to look in at the neighboring garden. There he saw a box with some wire-netting clumsily nailed in front and a little door.

"John Smith," Carol called sternly over the fence, "have you missed a pigeon?"

A friendly, dirty little face peeped at him through the bushes. Master Smith had forgotten all about his pet; he was busy acting a Red Indian, and he said gaily, "The cats had it."

"No, we've got it," said Carol, and his hopes sank. "It's quite safe. But, you know, it's wrong for it to be on the ground. Any cat could get hold of it there. And how are you feeding it?"

Sad end to a birthday to have to hand the precious thing over to this casual little boy who already didn't care very much whether he had the pigeon or no. But Johnny opened his mouth and said the most wonderful sentence you can imagine:

"I don't care whether you keep her altogether. I've got a new Red Indian outfit, and I'm too busy for anything else."

The Pound Party

THE Protestant Orphanage is one of the oldest as well as one of the most deserving of the charitable institutions of kind-hearted Victoria. The list of the members of the board of management shows that children and grandchildren of those who first undertook the care of those fatherless children are carrying on the good work in the old way. If it were permitted to learn the names of all who have spent their childhood in the big brick building, it would be found that not a few are doing their share of the world's work well.

Some day, perhaps, the names of the ladies who have been foster-mothers for the great family may receive the praise due them. In the meantime, they have the tribute of love and reverence from those who knew of their care for those bereaved of parental care and love.

One would like to know who first thought of a "Pound Party" to replenish the stores by the many boys and girls. It must be nearly two score years since citizens were invited to bring needed stores of food and clothing to the Orphanage.

Year by year gifts great and small have been brought or sent and friends new and old have made merry with the children, big and little. On their part, the young people have been in the habit of giving an entertainment to their visitors. This year the Pound Party falls on October 3—Saturday of this week. In the old homely way many Victorians will fill cupboard, storeroom and wardrobe with the gifts that children need and like most.

Two pavement artists were once discussing their work.

"I once drew the portrait of a donkey," said one, "and it was so lifelike that a woman stopped and offered it a carrot!"

"That's nothing," retorted the other. "I once drew a fifty-cent piece on the pavement and five people wore their fingers out trying to pick it up!"

The Ladrones

DO you know what and where they are? The Children's Newspaper tells us:

Ladrone is the Spanish word for thief, and, bearing that meaning, it appears on the map of the world as the name of a group of islands in the Pacific, given to the islands by the first white men who visited them.

It was March, 1521, when Ferdinand Magellan, on that marvelous voyage which took his ships for the first time round the world, sighted the islands with joy and thankfulness, not having seen land for ninety-eight days, so that he and all his men were starving.

When Magellan dropped anchor, the natives cut loose and made off with the boat under his prow; they swarmed over the ships and stole all they could lay their hands on. There was no withstanding them until the artillery of the ships were turned on them, after which they became docile with terror, and provisioned the ships with fruit and vegetables and all they had to offer.

Isles of the Lateen Sails

THE men who helped to quell them represented the England of Henry the Eighth, for Master Andrew, of Bristol, was master gunner of the flagship. Either the privations attending the voyage before the islands were reached, or the fighting deprived him of the immortal fame of being the first Englishman to sail round the world. Master Andrew died as they raised anchor and sailed from the Ladrones.

Magellan called the islands the Isles of the Lateen Sails, from the number of canoes so rigged; but the historian of the voyage wrote of the people: "They are poor but ingenious, but above all ladrones, thieves, and so for that reason we called these islands the Ladrones, or Robber Islands."

To us their sea is precious of memory as the grave of valiant Master Andrew, our first great sailor, who sailed the Pacific fifty-one years before Drake, beheld it with wondering eyes, and "besought Almighty God of His goodness to give him life and leave to sail that sea in an English ship."

Evening

Now came still evening on, and twilight grey
Had in her sober livery all things clad;
Silence accompanied, for beast and bird,
They to their grassy couch, these to their nests
Were slunk, all but the wakeful nightingale;
She all night long her amorous descant sung;
Silence was pleased: now glowed the firmament
With living sapphires: Hesperus that led
The starry host, rode brightest, till the moon
Rising in clouded majesty, at length,
Apparent queen, unveiled her peerless light,

—Milton.

Those Evening Bells

Those evening bells, those evening bells!
How many a tale their music tells,
Of youth and home, and that sweet time
When last I heard their soothing chime!

Those joyous hours are passed away,
And many a heart that then was gay
Within the tomb now darkly dwells
And hears no more those evening bells

And so 'twill be when I am gone,
That tuneful peal will still ring on,
While other bards shall walk these dells
And sing your praise, sweet evening bells.

—Thomas Moore.

Rose Trees

Rose trees, Either side the door were Growing lithe and growing tall;
Each one set, a Summer Warder
For the keeping of the hall——
With a red rose and a white rose leaning
Nodding at the wall.

—Mrs. Browning.

Mother had taken little Edith to town and in one of the big stores she was given her first ride in an elevator.

"Well, and how did you like it?" asked dad when she got home.

"It was ever so funny," replied Edith. "As soon as we got into the little house the upstairs came down!"

The River

Clear and cool, clear and cool,
By laughing shallow and dreaming pool;
Cool and clear, cool and clear,
By shining shingle and foaming weir;
Under the crag where the ousel sings,
And the ivied wall where the church bell rings,
Undefiled, for the undefiled;
Play by me, bathe in me, mother and child.

Dank and foul, dank and foul,
By the smoky town in its murky cowl;
Foul and dank, foul and dank,
By wharf and sewer and slimy bank;
Darker and darker the farther I go,
Baser and baser the richer I grow;
Who dare sport with the sin-defiled?
Shrink from me, turn from me, mother and child.

Strong and free, strong and free,
The flood-gates are open away to the sea;
Free and strong, free and strong,
Cleansing my streams as I hurry along
To the golden sands and the leaping bar,
And the taintless tide that awaits me afar;
As I lose myself in the infinite main,
Like a soul that has sinned and is pardoned again,
Undefiled, for the undefiled;
Play by me, bathe in me, mother and child.

—Charles Kingsley.

They Pass

From you, Ianthi, little troubles pass
Like little ripples down a sunny river.
Your pleasures spring like daisies in the grass
Cut down, but up as blithe as ever.

Hours Among Sharks

FOUR young men were fishing in the Indian Ocean off the coast of Mahe in the Seychelles Islands, when a violent squall upset the boat. One of them was drowned, and throughout the night the other three clung to the upturned boat while the squall turned into a raging storm. When dawn broke they found they were drifting out to sea.

With great courage one of them, a Creole called France Wilson, seized a plank and swam with it to the island of Mamelle, but he found the sea too mountainous to attempt a landing among the coral, and there was nothing to do but swim on to Praslin Island, about sixteen miles away. All through the night he lay on his crude raft, being tossed with the waves in a sea teeming with sharks.

Meanwhile a passing vessel had sighted his companions and rescued them; but they were too exhausted to think of France Wilson, and no one knew that a third man might be tossing about in the sea. Not till thirty-six hours later did some fishermen on the beach at Praslin notice something out on the water which they took for a turtle. They put out to sea and found it was the Creole, miraculously still alive, and now quite recovered from his fearful experience.

"When I bought this dog here a few weeks ago, you assured me that he was good for rats," cried the customer.

"That's right, sir, so I did," said the shopman.

"Well, he seems afraid to go near them," cried the customer.

I would it were my good fortune to be twenty years old in 1936.—Andre Maurois.

Laughs at the Photographer

When the photographer paid an informal visit to the King of the Jungle, resting in the Zoological Gardens, London, Mr. Lion kindly consented to pose. The king's Beast was so gracious that he laughed out loud when the photographer merely wanted a smile.

Games and Tricks

Nine of a Kind

HERE is a trick which will puzzle your friends. Ask one of them to write down the figures one to nine in a row, but omitting the figure eight. Then ask him to examine his work and tell you which figure he considers is badly formed. Multiply that figure mentally by nine and tell your friend to multiply his row of figures by the number you obtain. His answer will be the badly formed number written nine times. Here is an example: The badly formed figure is three, which, when multiplied by nine, gives twenty-seven.

      27
--------
86419753
24691358
--------
333333333
```

An Awkward Fix

A MAN left a village one morning and started to walk across the moor. He kept to one road, and presently came to a point where four roads met. To his dismay he found that the signpost at the crossroads had been uprooted and he did not know which way to go. Could you have helped him?

The way out of the difficulty is this. The post should have been put back in its hole. The arm pointing to the village he had left could be put in the right position, and the directions of the others, would, of necessity, be correct.

A Coin Trick

The trick must be done quickly. Do not forget to show both empty palms before closing the hands.

Two Lines

Straight is the line of duty,
Curved is the line of beauty,
Follow the straight line
Thou shalt see
The curved line ever follow thee

—Robert Browning.

Mercy

No ceremony that to great ones 'longs,
Not the king's crown, nor the deputed sword,
The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe,
Becomes them with one half so good a grace
As mercy does.

—Measure for Measure.

Cannot Last

For violent fires soon burn out themselves;
Small showers last long, but sudden storms are short;
He tires betimes that spurs too fast betimes.

—Richard the Second.

Oyster Girl

THE horses were all in the stables, Tess, Roger, Oyster Girl, Dawn and King George. Miss Terry was grooming Oyster Girl, and every now and then glancing with delight at the others.

Millie Terry was a jolly girl; she and her friend Georgie Owles kept these ponies in the Forest of Lofton and let them out for hire.

Now Rose Renton, aged thirteen, had come to stay in the neighboring farm, and often and often she would look over the fence and see the horses come in from a ride. She did so wish she could learn to ride. But alas, she had no money of her own. Her people were very poor. Her father was a shoemaker in Hammersmith, and they had just sent Rose down to an aunt because she had been very ill.

Her aunt and uncle were poor people, too. They had no pony for her to ride; they only kept cows and chickens.

She soon got to know each one. She loved Oyster Girl, the grey one, and she thought she would almost die with happiness if she were allowed to clamber on her back and try to ride. Ever since she had been a tiny girl Rose had adored horses.

One day her chance came, a chance to do something she longed to do—not a very straightforward thing, its a pity it must be said. Miss Terry and Miss Owles went off for the day in their little pony trap, and the ponies were all left in the big field.

Rose watched and waited, and very soon the back door opened and their little round-faced maid Nello came out in her new hat and coat, and that meant that the house was perfectly empty. Probably they would all be back in good time to feed the horses; but not yet.

She would catch Oyster Girl peacefully grazing, the darling, deep-eyed beauty, and just get on bareback. Just for a moment, for she wouldn't hurt her treasure for the world; she only wanted to feel what it was like to ride on a horse, little Londoner that she was.

And she did. She scrambled up with some difficulty, but the pony stood placidly by. Then when Rose was on, and laid her hands round her neck, Oyster Girl went off at a gallop. She cantered round the field, she trotted, and then cantered, and only after a long time did she slow down. Somehow, Rose managed to hang on all the time.

This adventure was witnessed by Miss Terry herself, who had forgotten her little handbag, and had jumped out of the trap and come back for it. She stood amazed. Who was this plucky girl?

Then, looking into Rose's face, she recognized her to be the child that had looked over the fence.

As Rose slipped off and Oyster Girl, none the worse, began to graze again, Miss Terry went up to Rose.

Rose was very much frightened, as indeed she ought to have been. In a shaking voice she apologized.

I so longed to try. It was lovely that galloping. I didnt mind in the least. But, oh, dear, I oughn't to have ridden on your horse without your permission. I'm very sorry."

"I've no time to talk to you now," said Millie Terry. "I'll see you when I come back. Meanwhile, you are on your honor, mind, not to do this again."

"Oh, I promise," said Rose.

But that night she saw Miss Terry again. Millie beckoned to her.

"Look here, what's-your-name" she said. "You can come in and help us every morning and evening if you like to do exactly what you're told, for our boy has to go for a holiday. You can learn a bit about horses."

So she did. But it was weeks before she was allowed to get on a pony.

But one afternoon Miss Terry took her out on Oyster Girl and gave her a riding lesson, because she could not help liking Rose. People that love horses generally like one another.

Then and Now

ABOUT sixty years ago in a warm corner of a comfortable farmhouse in the little colony of Prince Edward Island there stood a shoemaker's bench. Around it crowded a group of six or seven little boys and girls, the farmer's children and those of the nearest neighbor, looking at the leather seat, the awls, the waxed thread and the bristles, and handling them when cheery, bustling Mrs. Jones turned her back.

Presently there was a knock at the door, and in came the queerest figure. It was a man about four feet high, with a pale face, a large head, and great dark eyes. His legs were strangely misshapen and there was a hump on his back. Poor Jack Hunter was a wandering shoemaker who by the help of his crutches had come from a neighboring settlement to make and repair the boots and shoes of the farmer's large family. One by one the frightened children slipped away, but the pale face of Jack Hunter, his thin body and the great eyes, telling of patient suffering, remained a lifelong memory. In those days there was no remedy for the deformed limbs or misshapen body. The pain of mind and body must be borne till relief came with death.

Those who have visited the Solarium at Mill Bay and the many who have been restored to a life of happy usefulness know how much has been done for the crippled children of our day. Thanks to science, the skill of surgeons and the patience and perseverance of nurses and teachers, scores have been cured or fitted for a life of usefulness.

But such treatment is not obtained without cost. This has brought forth help from many sources. The opportunity has been given to all Victorians to help by Sir Neville Wilkinson's wonderful creation of "Titania's Palace" now showing at the Hudson's Bay store. If there are any children who have not seen the lovely and ingenious toy, there is still time for them to examine it, and for every grown-up who can afford it to add to the fund for which there is great need.

New Method of Detecting Nematode in Bulbous Iris

By DR. WILLIAM NEWTON

A NEW method of detecting the bulb nematode, anguillulina dipsaci, in bulbous iris such as Wedgewood, was discovered by R. J. Hastings, of the Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology, Saanichton. It consists of removing the old basal plate and dried up roots with the thumb nail or with a knife point. If the flesh beneath is discolored, the bulb is unsound and is usually infested with the bulb namatode.

The old basal plate and dead roots can be removed without injury to the bulbs providing they are dry and properly cured. In the ordinary course of cleaning, these old basal plates are frequently rubbed off on mother bulbs, and the daughter bulbs almost always break clean from the old roots. If mother bulbs are not properly cured, that is, if they are immature, the removal of the old basal plate will frequently break the flesh of the bulb, allowing the penicillium blue mold and other fungus diseases to enter.

The bulb grower can quickly ascertain for himself whether his bulbs are sufficiently mature to examine by removing the old basal plates. If mature, these old basal plates are only lightly attached to the mother bulbs.

A Timely Discovery

THE method of removing the old basal plates to detect the bulb necatode is a timely discovery. The United States Quarantine Bureau will not allow nematobe-infested bulbs to enter from Canada or other countries. Our growers can now ascertain whether their export shipments are free from this disease before they leave British Columbia without injuring the bulb, or without destroying the attractiveness of the shipment.

Heretofore our investigators suggested that it was necessary to peel back the tunic of the bulbs one centimeter from the base to reveal the bluish streaks that radiate from the base of the bulb, a characteristic symptom of nematode infestation in iris. This practice is laborious, and although it is a useful diagnostic method, it destroys the attractive appearance of a bulb sample.

No satisfactory method has been devised as yet for destroying the bulb nematode in iris, the same nematode can be destroyed in narcissi bulbs by immersing them in a hot-water bath for three hours at 112 degrees Fahrenheit, or by treating them in a vacuum tank with a solution containing one-half pound of silver nitrate and a pound and a half of potassium cyanide, but neither of these methods are effective with bulbous iris.

Nematode-Free Iris

THE production of nematode free iris can only be established by the exclusive use of nematode-free planting stock and the avoidance of infected soil. Iris growers should never plant on soils that have previously carried either iris or narcissi.

Our investigations have demonstrated that bulbous iris must be considered by growers as a carrier of the bulb nematode. The nematode appears to do little damage to the bulbs, either in gardens or when forced in a greenhouse, but the infection will be retained in the bulbs from year to year, and may serve to pollute soils, rendering them unfit for the production of narcissi, hyacinths and other crops.

Flint Grit Is Necessary For Poultry as Well As Shell Particles

THERE has been much contradictory advice given by different authorities concerning the value and use of grits and shells, with the result that the average poultry-keeper does not know what to believe. One food expert has made many experiments and been in touch with several scientists to form a correct opinion.

Any hard substance—such as flint or limestone grit, or oyster or cockle shell—in the gizzard, by the action of that organ, acts as a grinding agent.

Shell is hard when handled, but as it consists of lime salts which dissolve rapidly under the action of digestive juices, it quickly loses its grinding action. After only four hours in the gizzard it is considerably broken down, and as it softens it moves on to be further digested by other organs. As a grinding agent, therefore, it is of little value.

Limestone grit also dissolves quickly, and in no case is it as hard as shell to begin with. Its actual edges are soft. Owing to its greater thickness, it does remain in the crop longer than oyster or cockle shell, but, as we have found, it is broken up and passes from the gizzard in a short while.

Flint grit is insoluble, i.e., it won't dissolve in water and it is hard and "edgy." It is of no value whatever for providing lime for eggshelling, but there is nothing to take its place as a grinding agent in the gizzard. Flint grit does not lose its grinding edge quickly and it does not dissolve away. Even when it has become slightly rounded, it remains to perform its useful grinding purpose in the gizzard.

The Part Grit Plays

WHETHER hard or soaked grain, or dry or wet mash is fed, flint grit is necessary because the food, to be perfectly and easily digested, must be in a much finer state of division than as when fed.

There is another important reason. Grit being moved by the muscular action of the gizzard aids in the mechanical and even distribution of the foods, so that the digestive juices are able to penetrate and act quickly on the particles of foods.

Hens are not provided with teeth, although they eat just as "hard" foods as cows and horses, and it is obvious then that the food has to be ground by other means, which in this case is the flint grit in the gizzard.

Make no mistake when buying. Flint grit should be the size of a small pea and should be sharp and blue in color. Fine gravel or sand is by no means so efficient.

Limestone grit is dirty grey in color. Do not be led into feeding this by itself, as it will dissolve and pass from the gizzard in liquid form in a short time.

Impaction or binding of the crop may often be traced to blockage in the gizzard due to a lack of hard grinding material. Long hay-like grass stems rarely cause trouble if the gizzard is able to cope with them by using its artificial "teeth." Impaction of the gizzard will never occur if there is grinding material.

Intestinal catarrh (symptomized when the intestines are lined with a slimy mucus) is often due to clogging with food which has passed to them improperly digested in the previous organs. The droppings should be examined for areas of undigested mash.

In conclusion, flint grit should always be given in a separate container and in addition to some shell grit.

Perennial Wheat Tests

N. V. Tsitsu, Doctor of Agricultural Science, and A. I. Derzhavin, known locally as the Soviet Burbank, crossed wheat with perennial rye grown in in the Caucasian Mountains and eventually developed 153 plants which matured.

Flower stalks of pinks, carnations and sweet williams should be broken off at a low joint as soon as the flowers have faded; it enables basal growths to strengthen themselves and to do their full duty next year.

Why Cows Kick and How To Avoid the Trouble

WITH heifers, after calving, there is sometimes trouble at milking. Any heifer or cow will naturally kick or fail to stand stockstill, if roughly handled or milked so as to cause pain. Chapped teats, swollen udder, overstocked with milk, are all painful conditions, and even the most stolid of cows will manifest signs of discomfort, and may resent milking. Long hairs about the udder may get pulled with the teats, causing a sharp sting.

Kicking heifers may usually settle down to become sedate cows, if properly handled, provided, of course, that they are capable of producing a good yield of milk.

It is the poor yielders which are generally the worst kickers. As heifers these are better employed in suckling their calves than in being hand-milked. If these heifers show little signs of becoming useful milch cows in their maturity, they may be dried off, fattened, and turned over to the butcher.

Heavy milking cows are usually very quiet and docile, except when anything happens to upset their composure.

Cause of "Hard" Milking

SOME cows are harder to milk than others. It depends somewhat upon the size and conformation of the teats, but more so upon the width of the milk canal, or orifice. Thus from a free and easy to milk teat the milk comes in a strong jet or flow, whereas from a rather long teat with a narrow milk canal the milk comes in a thin jet.

Overstocking, as when the interval between milkings is too long, causes much suffering for the cow. Some cows, rather easy to milk, will be found with the milk dripping, or even trickling from their teats if the udder is overstocked.

Since the heaviest yielders are the more liable to suffer from overstocking, it is necessary to see that the cows are milked regularly and at not too long intervals. Failure to withdraw the whole of the milk at milking time, or to leave the teats but improperly stripped, will reduce the yield and lower the quality of the milk at the same time.

Cows Must Be Coaxed

A COW can withhold her milk if she is not handled properly, kindly and coaxed. Thus, often if a cow is accustomed to a certain milker, and more so if she is petted and fondled, she may resent being milked by a stranger. In any such case the cow usually withholds part of her milk.

The milking machine, in the case of dairy cows, now gets over many of these milking difficulties, but hand-stripping after the machine is nearly always necessary.

The kneading of the swollen udder of the newly-calved cow or heifer is very beneficial. After milking, warm olive oil may be rubbed into the udder, the teats wiped dry, and also dressed. That will prevent chaps, and so minimize the danger of kicking.

A Toadstool Fungus That Destroys Raspberries

By DR. WILLIAM NEWTON

TOADSTOOLS found growing around the base of sick fruit trees and other agricultural crops should be sent to the Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology, Saanichton, B.C., for identification. Such toadstools may be the surface expression of the "shoe-string rot," armillaria mellea, so called, because the rhizomes of the fungus are brown or black tough string-like structures that penetrate the soil in all directions. Walter Jones, of the laboratory staff, discovered several cases in the Fraser Valley where the fungus had destroyed raspberry plants.

The natural food of the "shoe-string rot" is decaying wood, hence the disease is often serious to fruit trees and raspberries recently established upon newly-cleared land, land wherein large numbers of the roots still remain. Newly-cleared lands should be devoted to forage crops for at least three years before they are established as orchard or raspberry plantations. Recent investigations suggest that heavy applications of ammonium sulphate assist in the destruction of the "shoe-string rot."

The Golden-Rayed Lily of Japan

—Photograph by Gus A. Maves.

This Single Flower of Lilium Auratum, the Golden-Rayed Lily of Japan, Measures More Than Twelve Inches Across From Tip to Tip of Petals, and Is Intensely Fragrant. It Is One of the Many Lilies That Thrive in Shady Spots.

Shade-Loving Lilies

By GUS A. MAVES

WHAT to plant in that shady place beneath the trees, by the wall of the house, or along the shady side of the tall fence where nothing seems to flourish is a problem confronting many gardeners everywhere. Yet there is an abundance of the loveliest flowers imaginable that will thrive in such places and reward their growers with a profusion of gorgeous and sweet-scented bloom all Summer long.

How many readers from Eastern Canada will recall seeing the graceful Canadian lily glowing brilliant orange deep in the forest shade of maple, oak and birch trees, their roots imbedded in the sand beneath centuries of accumulated leaf-mould and peat, the ideal compost for lily bulbs?

There is a large family of these shade-loving lilies, but if you wish them to thrive in your garden and to reward your labor with a profusion of gorgeously-colored and sweet-scented bloom, you must provide them with the identical soil and situation to which they are accustomed in their natural surroundings. Unless this is carefully observed and attended to with loving hands your bulbs will express their resentment by absence of bloom, deterioration and final death.

Some bulbs, however, even when planted perfectly will lie dormant for two or three seasons, during which time they make new offsets which themselves do not bloom for four or five years, when all at once an immense number of flowering stems will make their appearance above ground. Do not be discouraged therefore if after purchasing the largest size bulb obtainable you secure no immediate results, for it is with the largest size bulb that this phenomena is most likely to occur.

Essentially a Garden Plant

THE flowering stems of lilies should never be cut for vase decoration, as this is likely to prove fatal to the bulb. The lily is essentially a garden plant, to be admired as such and left undisturbed for many years. Sufficient space should be allowed between plantings for the plant to increase and form large clumps, and the leaf-mould should be taken from deciduous trees and must not contain any decayed needles from any conifers such as pine, cedar, hemlock, fir, etc.

Besides shade-loving lilies, which are in the vast majority, there are also numerous varieties which will grow and thrive only in full sunshine. Among these will be found L. croceum, the common orange lily; L. elegans and L. davuricum, and many others.

Then again there is a class of lilies that love the morning sunshine until nearing the noon hour, after which it is best in partial or full shade. Such a lily is L. auratum, the golden-rayed lily of Japan, which attains a height of six to ten feet, a single plant producing as many as 100 blooms on one stem opening simultaneously. A single flower of this plant will often measure twelve inches or more across. It blooms in August when most of the lilies are done flowering, and is intensely fagrant.

As with all lilies L. auratum should be planted in slightly-sloping well-drained soil in a compost of sandy loam and leaf-mould, where it will be protected from strolig winds.

Following is a partial list of twelve desirable lilies that will thrive in full or partial shade, and for the benefit of the careful gardener I have indicated briefly the color, position of planting, blooming season and height of each. All bulbs may be obtained from any reputable nursery or seed house, and should be planted in September, if possible, on Vancouver Island.

Twelve Desirable Lilies

L. Canadense—The Canadian lily. Most graceful trumpet-shaped orange, flowering in June and July. Plant in peat, leaf-mould and sand in half-shade, or in the shade of trees where scattered sunshine glints through the branches. Height, two to three feet.

L. Catesbaei—Catesby's lily, native of Carolina. Orange-scarlet spotted deep crimson. Plant in half-shade in sandy loam with peat. Foliage, evergreen; blooming in June and July. Height, eighteen inches to two feet.

L. Hansoni—Hanson's lily, the Japanese golden. Martagon. Plant in half-shade in loam, peat or leaf-mould. Flowers in June. Height, three to four feet.

L. Henryi—Henry's lily, native of China, with flowers widely expanded and petals reflexed. Color, light orange-yellow. Plant in half-shade in loam, peat or leaf-mould. Flowers in June and July. Height, two to four feet.

L. Humboldtii—Humboldt's lily, native of California. A rich golden-yellow spotted crimson-purple, trumpet shaped. Plant in half-shade in peat, leaf-mould and sand. Flowers in July. Height, three to four feet.

L. Martagon—The red Turk's Cap Lily, native of Germany, France and Italy. Large seed cases resembling small urns. Petals distinctly recurved. Plant in full or half-shade in loam, leaf-mould or peat, with some sand. Flowers in June. Height, two to three feet.

L. Pardalinum—Leopard-spotted panther lily, native of California. Plant in half or full shade in loam, peat and leaf-mould. Will thrive in a marshy spot. Flowers in June and July. Height, three feet.

L. Parvum—Little orange-colored flowers. Plant in full shade in sandy loam and peat. Flowers in June and July. Height, four feet.

L. Pyrenaicum—The Pyrenian lily, yellow spotted black. Plant in half-shade in rich loam and sand. Flowers in May and June. Height, two to four feet.

L. Speciosum Lancifolium — The showy speckled lance-leaved lily of Japan in many varieties ranging from white album to red rubrum; all deliciously scented and bearing twenty or more blooms per stem. Flowers from August to September. Plant in half-shade in leaf-mould, with some sand. Height, five to six feet.

L. Superbum—Native of Georgia, also known as the Swamp Lily. Plant in shady, damp spot in loam, peat or leaf-mould, or peat only. Flowers in July and August. Height, four to six feet.

L. Testaceum—Light brown Nankeen Lily, sweet scented and seldom fails. Plant in half-shade in ordinary soil enriched with well-decayed stable manure and leaf-mould only. Flowers in June and July. Height, five to six feet.

Prepare Beds Carefully

ALL shade-loving lilies should be planted in deep pockets trenched to a depth of at least two feet, which is then filled in with the required compost. The position must be one in which all excess moisture will readily drain off, and out of the drip of trees or overhanging branches.

After the bed is planted and levelled off you may cover it with hellebores, the common Christian or Lenten roses of English gardens. These will serve as a protection to the lily bulbs in Winter and also absorb any excessive moisture which lily bulbs dislike. The hellebores will also supply a delightful show of bloom during Christmas and the Winter season, and may be left undisturbed along with the lilies for a great many years, giving the lily bed a pleasing covering of green throughout the year.

Fill the Compost Pile on The Strata Plan

The pit can be of any size to suit the site or your convenience in handling. It should, however, be at least three to four feet in depth, and approximately four by five feet in area. On the bottom of the pit spread a six-inch layer of leaves, plant cuttings, weeds or lawn clippings. Over this spread several inches of soil, mixed with lime and ashes. Then as garden refuse accumulates, build another six-inch layer of leaves and plant cuttings, topped each time with the mixture of soil, lime and sifted ashes. When the pit is filled by these layers to the surface of the surrounding ground, cover with two or three inches of loose soil. The rains will reach through and gradually cause the contents of the pit to decompose and resolve into a fine, rich bedding soil.

A Turkey Experiment

EXPERIMENTS to check up on the respective rate of growth of two popular breeds of turkeys, the Black Norfolk and the American Mammoth Bronze, have been made at the Harper Adams College and are now reported upon by Professor A. J. Macdonald.

The American Bronze won the "race" most decisively. At twenty-eight weeks the average weight of the breed was 17 lb. 3 oz. as compared with the Norfolk's 11 lb. 3 oz. Though the public now prefer smaller turkeys to large, concludes the report, it is doubtful whether a small breed such as the Norfolk is as profitable as a quicker-growing breed.

Time to Clean Up Dead Plants and Prepare the Garden for Winter

By DR. WILLIAM NEWTON

AS soon as the tops of the plants have died off they should be removed and burned. If the tops of perennial plants are left on the bed all Winter there is danger that they may harbour disease spores and insects which may have been present on the plants.

Some plants which are frequently attacked by slugs can be protected by covering the crown with old coal ashes. The same thing is useful around foxgloves and hollyhocks to prevent water standing in the crowns and then freezing. If the leaves of hollyhocks and foxgloves are very numerous some of them can be removed.

September and October are the months when Spring flowering bulbs are planted and clumps of them in a perennial border are greatly appreciated in Spring. Besides daffodils and tulips, which can be obtained in many varieties and colors, there are other attractive bulbous plants such as chionodoxa, glory of the snow; scilla sibirica, Siberian squill, both of which have blue flowers. Crocus can be obtained in white, yellow and purple varieties. These are amongst the earliest of flowers to bloom in the Spring. Muscari, grape hyacinth with dark blue flowers like a hyacinth in miniature, bloom a little later.

North African Iris for January Pot Blooms

DO you know iris tingitana? It is a North African iris, not unlike a large Spanish iris in the shape of the bloom. The standards or upright petals are deep blue, the falls paler blue with a bright yellow blotch. Both are beautifully frilled. There is no more lovely pot or bowl bulb for flowering in early January.

Do plant a batch now, and you'll be charmed with the result. If you grow bulbs for selling when in bloom, then with iris tingitana you will have something new to the majority of your customers.

If you decide on potting, use clean, well-drained 5-inch pots, setting five bulbs equidistant in each. An ideal compost is loam three parts, leaf-mould, well-rotted manure and sand one part each. Place the bulbs firmly on a quarter-inch layer of sand, and pack soil firmly round them, leaving just the tips exposed. Water through a rosed can.

Plunge the Pots

UUTIL the shoots are an inch long, bury the pots four inches deep in a sheltered outdoor plunge bed formed of fibre, weather-weathered small cinders, or sand.

On taking out the pots, stand them in a dim light for three or four days to green, afterwards bringing them on gradually in the greenhouse in a temperature of 60 degrees Fahr.

As soon as you can "feel" the flowers in the leaf sheath, start feeding with dilute soot water, and continue at weekly intervals until the flowers are fully open.

For successful bowl culture you need good peat fibre, which must be moistened and rubbed through the palms of the hands to take out the lumps. After placing a layer of lump charcoal in the bottom of the bowls, fill up to the planting level, on which the bulbs must be spaced an inch apart. Pack fibre firmly round them, leaving the crowns or tops of the bulbs just exposed. You judge the planting level by the top of the bulb, which should be level with the bowl top.

After planting, water through a rosed can. An hour later tilt the bowls to allow for the escape of superfluous moisture. Do this every time you water.

Treatment of Bowl Bulbs

STAND the bowls in a dark, airy cupboard or cellar, and leave them there until the shoots are an inch long. Then green them in a half light for three or four days, after which a light table or window in an ordinary living-room provides perfect conditions if you avoid cold draughts and water carefully.

It isn't generally realized that iris tingitana is just as successful out of doors as under cover. It blooms in April, and likes a sunny border and fairly rich soil. Try a batch, and every year you'll repeat the planting.

Space the bulbs 6 inches apart, and bury them 2 1-2 inches deep, each on a quarter-inch layer of sand.

If you have sufficient of the pink Aubrietia Bridesmaid to interplant the irises, one between each two, you will achieve one of the most exquisite Spring flower combinations conceivable.

Plants for the House

PLANTS for Winter decoration indoors—both those which are valued for their foliage and those which will be wanted for Winter bloom—may well be repotted, or potted up, if they are still growing in the ground out of doors at this time.

Many of them take more or less of a rest during the Summer, and are to be prepared for their Fall and Winter period of growth before cooler weather and more rain have stimulated new roots and tops.

One of the amateur's most common mistakes in handling plants of this type is to delay this important garden operation until the threat of freezing weather makes it necessary to bring in the plants.

Lifting Outdoor Plants

TO lift flowering plants from outdoor beds for Winter use indoors, first thrust a spade vertically the full depth of the blade in the soil around them. This will cut the roots and is called "root pruning." Do this a week before the plants are to be lifted.

When the "root pruning" is done at the same diameter as the pots which the plants are to occupy, the lifting and planting operation is simplified because the "ball" of the plant will fit the pot. If the plants, when lifted, have a "ball" that is larger than the pots, comb off the surplus soil with a pointed stick. After transplanting prune the tops of the plants.

England's Challenge to Hollywood

(From The Overseas Daily Mail)

LONDON, original home of moving pictures long ago ousted from supremacy by Hollywood, is coming into its own again. Instead of making modest films of a type only intended to appeal within the shores of this tight little island, British studios are now producing for the whole world—a world that demands British pictures.

That is no new claim, it is true, but, whereas in the past those who voiced such a challenge were guided more by heart than by head, the reverse is true today, for the assertion now has substantial facts to prove it and bear out the truth that this London, with its new acquired wealth of wonderful film studios, is at last a real rival to Hollywood—a rival that Hollywood both fears and respects.

"London" Is Famous

ODDLY, but appropriately enough, the company which has perhaps had the biggest share in putting Britain's capital back in the centre of the film map has the now world-famous name of London Films. This concern, with one stroke, crashed its way into the invaluable American market, making that great country, which hitherto had regarded film making as its own exclusive preserve, conscious of a vital new force emanating from thousands of miles away, giving it a new order of entertainment and throwing on its screens a bevy of new stars whose names have since become household words wherever pictures are shown.

That one stroke was the production of "The Private Life of Henry VIII," a "box office champion" in all the five continents. An inspired production, conceived and directed by Alexander Korda, whose genius Hollywood curiously squandered and misdirected, it made motion picture history and became the standard by which the whole of England's, and much of Hollywood's, production has since been judged. It put Charles Laughton at the very top of the film firmament, winning him the coveted American Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences award for the best performance of the year, and launched Robert Donat, Merle Oberon and Binnie Barnes, among others, on the road to screen fame and world acclaim.

Seeking Film Colony

HERE was a pioneer effort, and Alexander Korda and his gallant band of helpers might have been excused if they had rested on their laurels for a space. But that did not happen; it was only a step in their ordered plan to put British pictures on top to stay. It was only a beginning.

The next move was the realization of Korda's cherished scheme to put up in England a film colony that should be second to none, that should not just invite comparison with the mighty, efficient film factories of California, but should compel their envy and admiration.

So the gigantic Denham Studios came about. Designed and equipped on a scale that left other film magnates gasping, this amazing centre of production has become the keystone of a regenerated, relnspired British industry. Others have followed the lead, and, with British pictures definitely established throughout the world, facilities have sprung up and are springing up all round the metropolis for the production of film entertainment on a scale never before dreamed possible in this country.

Nearly three-quarters of a million pounds was spent in making Denham a reality; since then something like another two millions has been invested in constructing great modern studios at Iver, Bucks (for Pinewood Studios) and Elstree, where Amalgamated Studios and Rock Studios are both building on a big scale.

Seven great stages has Denham. Amalgamated and Pinewood will have eight each, the Rock Studios four; expansions at Thamesside Studios—Sound City, Shepperton and Teddington—mean an aggregate of thirty spacious floors for moving picture production, all built within a year.

Counting the existing big studios of Gaumont-British at Shepherd's Bush, British International Pictures' well-known establishment at Elstree, and the smaller but no less efficient studios of Associated Talking Pictures at Ealing, British Lion at Beaconsfield, Twickenham Films at St. Margaret's, Elstree and Hammersmith, and others, these developments mean that in twelve months the scope of British pictures will have been more than doubled!

London Films' studios at Denham, which heralded this stupendous expansion, are, at the time of writing, the only ones of the new brigade fully open and actively working, and only the briefest recital of facts will serve as an indication of the vast new scale on which British producers are now operating.

There are no fewer than seven great stages—that is the actual individual buildings in which films are "shot" varying in dimension from 250 feet by 120 feet and 45 feet high to 120 feet by 80 feet by 35 feet. Air-conditioned, so as to preserve a natural atmosphere at all times of the year, as well as to exclude that bugbear of film makers, fog, these are the first British studios to be so equipped; the main buildings are huge structures of reinforced concrete, lined inside with rock wool to yield perfect sound results.

"Hotel" for Artists

A LUXURIOUS dressing-room block, including expansive private star suites and commodious and finely equipped accommodation for small-part players and crowd workers, and an administrative block in which the creative work of a dozen or more production companies is carried on are connected with the stages by means of closed corridors, so that, once inside, the worker or visitor is completely independent of the weather.

A restaurant as comprehensive as any in the West End, two private cinema theatres, one with a seating capacity of 300ft, and a whole series of workshops catering for almost every trade under the sun are among the other wonders in this giant of film studios, which boasts a weekly payroll of 2,000 persons.

It might, with justice be argued that, while facts like these are imposing enough, mere technical excellence is no guarantee of the entertainment quality of the films made under such conditions. But the "brains" employed at Denham, the world-famous producers and directors and the stars of front-rank international calibre who have already made films there or who are "on the list" quickly answer that argument and show why this defiant challenge of British pictures to Hollywood is so substantial a reality.

The "roster" of leading stars and production personalities of Denham is like a classified directory of the leading lights of Los Angeles, including names so familiar to film-lovers as those of Charles Laughton, Miriam Hopkins, Marlene Dietrich, Robert Donat, Richard Tauber, Ann Harding, Conrad Veidt, Edward G. Robinson, Basil Rathbone, Annabella, Henry Fonda, Eugene Pallette, Jimmy ("Schnozzle") Durante, to say nothing of Marie Tempest and Paderewski, who have both just made their talkie "debuts" there.

Among the directors and production personalities, all at the top of their respective spheres, are the following names to conjure with: Alexander Korda, Walter Reisch, Lothar Mendes, Robert Flaherty, Marion Gering, Robert E. Sherwood, Frances Marion, William K. Howard, as well as Victor Saville and Walter Forde, two British directors whose past work has stamped them both as worthy of comparison with the finest film craftsmen of the world.

Big Film Titles

WHAT of the films themselves? Denham's stages have only been open three months, but among pictures already made there or now in production are subjects covering a wide and gripping range of entertainment angles, among them being Charles Laughton in "Rembrandt"; "Fire Over England," with Flora Robson as Queen Elizabeth; "Land Without Music," starring Richard Tauber, Bob Flaherty's "Elephant Boy"; Conrad Veidt in "Dark Journey"; Walter Reisch's "Triangle"; "Moonlight Sonata," starring Marie Tempest and Paderewski; "Knight Without Armor," (Dietrich-Donat); "Thunder in the City", "Love From a Stranger," from the West End comedy hit; and the first British film to be made in technicolor, "Wings of the Morning."

Is it to be wondered at that hundreds of cinemas in all parts of the world, especially in the United States, have booked many of these films—had booked them, in fact, before they were made!

So great is the faith of American cinema exhibitors in the entertainment value of British pictures that they will take them on trust, satisfied that the impetus our producers have received is a guarantee of the standard achieved in successes like "Henry VIII," "The 39 Steps," "The Ghost Goes West" and, more recently, "Tudor Rose," being maintained.

There is nothing succeeds like success, is a saying that is nowhere truer than in film production. Encouraged by the faith in British pictures evidenced in far-flung parts of the world, producers here are emboldened to sink more in their enterprises and provide cash backing which will allow their films to be made in equal competition with the wealthiest Hollywood machines.

The average cost of productions being made at Denham today is little short of £100,000 compared with a limit of about £40,000 (even that considered foolhardy extravagance) that ruled in this country only a year or so ago.

An announcement made by the United Artists Corporation, one of America's biggest film distributing organizations, a few weeks ago gives a clearer indication than anything else could of the confidence that great land has in the market value of British films.

They declared that they were spending no less than two and a half million pounds in the coming year in buying British pictures to release throughout the world!

In an industry in which hard cash is the dominating factor—whatever romantic glamour may be superimposed over it—that is the most significant fact of all. So whoever says today that London challenges the world in film production is on solid ground. What is more, Hollywood knows it.

In the old days (i.e., a few years ago), whenever anybody jumped up to shout about the magnificence of British films, the American producers would merely give a tolerant smile and murmur those familiar lines: "It isn't the hen that cackles most that lays the largest egg." That isn't so any more; convinced of the reality of the opposition they have to face, the film chiefs of Hollywood are setting out to combat it in the only logical way—by coming to meet it.

More and more they are taking an interest in British production, sinking money into English-made pictures, bringing over their own stars and directors to make pictures under the same conditions as these go-ahead British producers. Recent moves by two major American concerns whose names are familiar to every cinema-goer—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Twentieth Century-Fox—to form a combine with Gaumont-British, is one instance of how Hollywood is striving to draw nearer to Britain and so derive the best from both worlds.

England and America

ANOTHER instance was when Universal Pictures, pioneer of all the American companies, linked its destinies insolubly with a British group. Warner Brothers and their associated company, First National, have been developing British studios of their own at Teddington, where they are now concentrating on pictures that will appeal both here and in America. Columbia, another Hollywood big gun, has made a deal, involving hundreds of thousands of pounds, for British pictures to be made at the new Amalgamated Studios at Elstree.

Hollywood, in fact seeing British production in a flourishing condition, has decided the best thing is to share in that prosperity by lending a hand. Which, for the people who pay their shillings, rupees, dollars, francs, marks or other forms of currency to see films, is a good thing.

Because it means better films all round.

It would be unfair to imply that London Films alone have earned praise for stimulating British pictures, although their energy has certainly been outstanding in the past year or two. But in a way London Films and its history of upward progress is exactly representative of the budding and blossoming of the whole British film industry into the powerful force that it is today.

The bold beginning of this company, its cautious progress which broke out of bounds with the phenomenal success of "Henry VIII," and its later growth culminating in the completion of Denham and the stupendous production activity that has followed, all have a parallel in the phases through which the industry at large has passed.

Telescoped into a short period of about four years has come a sequence of better and better British films, adding prestige to the industry and building a way to the triumphant present, when the world's finest picture personalities are being attracted to Britain, knowing that here they will find vast, efficient and up-to-the-minute facilities for making pictures as good as can be produced anywhere.

To name only a few of the titles that stand out in this onward sweep is to prove that nearly every British producer has contributed. "Blackmail," "Sunshine Susie," "Rome Express," "Service for Ladies," "I Was a Spy," "Henry VIII," "Nell Gwyn," "Escape," "Men of Tomorrow," "Catherine the Great," "Escape Me Never," "The Constant Nymph," "Peg of Old Drury," "The Scarlet Pimpernel," "The Man Who Knew Too Much," "So You Won't Talk," "The Amateur Gentleman," "Sanders of the River," "Abdul the Damned," "For Ever England," "The 39 Steps," "Scrooge," "Passing of the Third Floor Back," "The Ghost Goes West," "Things to Come" . . .

Picking out the good British pictures has, in fact, become almost a recital. Picking out the stars has become a matter of selecting all the leading luminaries of the film firmament.

In studios as widely scattered as Elstree, Shepherd's Bush, Twickenham, Teddington, Sound City, Beaconsfield, Islington, Ealing and others have appeared artists who include George Arliss, Elizabeth Bergner, Paul Robeson, Madeleine Carroll, Richard Arlen, Robert Young, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Clive Brook, Anna Sten, Helen Vinson, Sylvia Sidney, Edward Everett Horton, Boris Karloff, Jessie Matthews, Cedric Hardwick, Herbert Marshall, Constance Cummings, Charles Laughton, Robert Donat, Merle Oberon, Edmund Gwenn, Leslie Howard, Evelyn Laye, Lilian Harvey, Richard Barthelmess, Constance Bennett, Richard Dix, Claude Rains, Maurice Chevalier—and so on, right down the Milky Way.

British Favorites

AND that says nothing of our own British favorites who have been developed and retained here and many of whom rank high in international line-ups—Jack Buchanan, Gracie Fields, Tom Walls and Ralph Lynn, Will Hay, Jack Hulbert, Anna Neagle, Cicely Courtneidge, Flora Robson, and many others too numerous to mention.

The glitter and glamour has, indeed, got almost out of hand and the most pleasing feature of this brilliant prospect is that all have been able to share in it. Not only the three or four big concerns, but the independent producing companies have taken advantage of the tendency and are helping to turn out British films for the world.

Take, for instance, the Ealing Studios of Associated Talking Pictures, with Basil Dean as production chief. This company and its allied distributing organization, Associated British Film Distributors, has lately put on offer a group of pictures, with intriguing titles and casts, that the world and his wife will surely clamor to see. They include "Whom the Gods Love," based on the life of Mozart; Gracie Fields in "Queen of Hearts", "Lonely Road," with Clive Brook and Victoria Hopper; George Formby, Jr., in "Keep Your Seats, Please," and Harry Roy and his Band in "Everything Is Rhythm."

"Whom the Gods Love," adapted from a story by Margaret Kennedy, produced and directed by Basil Dean, has Stephen Haggard as the young composer and Victoria Hopper as his wife, Constance. John Loder plays the part of Prince Lopkowitz, and other characterizations are taken by Liane Haid, beautiful blonde Austrian star, Jean Cadell, Hubert Harben, Frederick Leister and Marie Lohr.

The music was given minute attention under supervision of Dr. Bernhard Paumgartner of the Mozart Institute, Salzburg, and Ernest Irving, and excerpts from "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Magic Flute" were played by the London Philharmonic Orchestra under the direction of Sir Thomas Beecham.

The majority of the scenes were photographed in Salzburg itself, whose quaint streets once again took on the air of the eighteenth century, with the colorful, flowing dresses of the women and the gay, belaced costumes of the men. The famous St. Peter's Church, in which Mozart's Masses were originally performed, was converted into a film studio for the best part of a week. Many of the crowd seen in the film are part of the famous Salzburg Festival crowd trained by Max Reinhardt.

These facts, while perhaps having little bearing on the entertainment value of the film as a whole, give some indication of the meticulous care which the A.T.P. have sought to reproduce the atmosphere in which the composer lived. The picture is a faithful recreation of the drama and romance which surrounded the young Wolfgang Mozart, and lacks none of the appeal to make it thorough entertainment from beginning to end.

Carves Out Big Business in Wilderness

By A. J. DALRYMPLE
(Central Press Canadian Writer)

THE old nursery rhyme about Mary's lamb which says: "Leave them alone and they'll come home, bringing their tails behind them" is the theory put into practice by Tom Lamb, of Moose Lake, Northern Manitoba.

Tom Lamb is a thirty-eight-year-old Canadian who has crowded his life with believe-it-or-not adventure. He has proven that it is not necessary to go to the city to make good. In fact, he says you don't even have to go to town.

Big Business in Wilderness

IN spite of all head-wagging to the contrary, Tom Lamb has shown that there is big business in the heart of the Canadian wilderness for the man who has the energy and the what-it-takes to make industry hum.

Tom lives eighty miles from the nearest railway, and double that distance from the nearest dirt road. The Saskatchewan River is his highway in Summer, and the frozen muskeg is his trail in Winter. During all seasons, however, when in a hurry, he flies his own plane.

He owns a horse and cattle ranch. He runs a sawmill. He has a trading post. He operates commercial fishing camps and a string of motorboats and barges. He has a fleet of trucks and tractors which he uses in his enterprises. But the tires never run on gravel or pavement. He uses them in Winter to haul trout and pickerel across the trackless wastes to the Canadian National Railways heated cars at Mile 42, Hudson Bay Railway.

Has Big Farm

SOMETIMES he flies fish from the lakes of the interior to the steel. When he first started the "fish flying" people scoffed at him. They said it wouldn't pay. He went blithely on his way, and now they scarcely look up as the fish planes soar over the northern towns.

He is a working man. You are apt to see him mushing into The Pas with a team of huskies, or starting a fire in the galley stove aboard one of his ships while he talks to a group of scientists. A number of students of wilderness lore have visited him lately, for he operates one of the most unique farms on the globe. It is his muskrat ranch, and it is the largest in the world.

The farm is 54,120 acres in extent, and it is said to be the largest private game sanctuary of its kind in Canada. Here the visitor may see the black bear, the lordly moose, the caribou and the deer, as well as swans, ducks and geese, enjoying protection they have never known before.

Since Tom Lamb decided to let nature take its course and give the animals a chance to live, the farm has become a vast breeding ground for the creatures of the wild.

He put his plan into effect after a lifetime of observation in the Moose Lake district. Tom grew up among the Indian and white trappers. He saw the guns, traps and spears carry out their deadly work, until in 1930 the region had been trapped out. It was barren of fur.

There was only one way to bring a return of the fur population that the great Saskatchewan River marshes had once known; and only one way to bring about the prosperity his fur trading post had once enjoyed; he decided to embark on a programme of conservation.

He picked out an island bounded by the Saskatchewan and Summerberry Rivers. There were 54,120 acres of marsh, creeks and highlands in the island. He secured a lease from the Government for a muskrat farm and contracted to pay a yearly fee for the privilege.

His first survey of his proposed farm showed that there were 400 muskrats in the area. When the deal was closed he drained certain portions of lowlands. He burned off the decayed and sour vegetation. He built dams and dykes and raised the water levels in certain zones. He planted wild rice and other foods.

In order to make sure that his dams were kept in good repair he brought beaver, by Government consent, and turned them loose in the sanctuary.

Within five years the muskrat population had increased to more than 25,000 animals; and other animals and also birds returned in large numbers to their old-time haunts.

When he started with his big investment of building dykes and dams, and dredging operations, the wise ones shook their heads and said that after he had finished, the animals would wander off the sheltered area. Tom argued, however, that while many might leave, thousands would stay, and that would suit him fine.

One of the problems that must be faced now is that of the inroads of the great, gaunt timber wolves of the Moose Lake region. They, too, have come to realize that the sanctuary has possibilities, a great variety of food; and steps are being taken to cut down their numbers.

Carved out of the wilderness of Northern Manitoba, Tom Lamb (left) has built a thriving industry by "letting nature take its course." His huge 54,000-acre farm is a sanctuary from which he derives considerable business. Top, Lamb befriends a young moose. Centre, a black bear swims without fear in sanctuary waters. Below, an Indian family aid in reaping the rich harvest of muskrat skins.

This Week's Best Books

BY LIBRARY SERVICE

AMONG the new books recently arrived at the Public Library are a number dealing with the problems of international relations. "The Diplomacy of Imperialism," by William L. Langer, carries on a major history of European international relations which was begun by the author's "European Alliances and Alignments, 1871-1890." Three new books on the League of Nations will be of interest and use to many of our readers: "League of Nations and the Rule of Law," by Sir Alfred E. Zimmern; "United States and the League of Nations, 1918-1920," by Denna Frank Fleming; and "The Spirit of Geneva," by Robert de Traz—each giving different information and view of the League. The problem of disarmament is dealt with in two new books which have been recently added to the shelves of the Public Library. "Geographic Disarmament," a Study of Regional Demilitarization," by J. H. Marshall-Cornwall; and "World Disarmament; its Problems and Prospects," by D. P. Myers, while the biography of "Zaharoff, the Armaments King," by Robert Neumann, although written in the form of an interesting detective story, is really a serious expose of the armaments game.

"United States and the League of Nations, 1918-1920," by Denna Frank Fleming, is a detailed and documented study of the struggle between President Wilson and the Senate over the League of Nations. An appendix gives the text of the Covenant of the League of Nations with amendments in force in 1929. Professor Fleming has gone into the details of the controversy and with complete documentation has given the record of the part played for and against the League by the great figures of the times in American politics. He has combined the voluminous materials of American foreign relations immediately following the Armistice into a readable and authoritative account, and has presented the facts with fairness to both sides of the controversy.

"Diplomacy of Imperialism, 1890-1902," by William Leonard Langer. This new work of Mr. Langer covers one of the most confused periods of pre-war diplomacy, a period during which the rise of Imperialism brought the great powers to the brink of major crises in the Near East in Africa and in the Far East. Of special interest now is his detached and sensible analysis of the historical background of Italy's present Ethiopian venture. Other topics equally interesting are: The Bagdad railway project; the Boxer Rising; the Armenian question; the Near East question, etc. The narrative attempts to give an adequate background for the understanding of the leading problems, and will interest the intelligent general reader, who will find it an illuminating parallel to and explanation of, present-day events. Full account is taken of Imperialism as a movement, of economic factors, of the cult of sea-power, of the peace movement and of public opinion generally. The text is well illustrated with maps.

"League of Nations and the Rule of Law," by Sir Alfred Eckhard Zimmern, a book on international relations by an Oxford professor who has had experience in the British Foreign Office and as an official of the League. Sir Alfred Zimmern examines, from the angle of the political scientist, methods of co-operation between States and the League of Nations, and their connection with the establishment of a Rule of Law in international relations. The volume consists of three main parts. The first describes the system of international relations in the pre-war period, bringing out in particular the working of the Concert of Europe and the significance of the Hague Conferences. The second, called "The Elements of the Covenant," shows in detail how that document took shape out of wartime thinking. The third part of the book deals with the history and inner workings of the League, described from first-hand knowledge. Sir Alfred Zimmern writes with knowledge and authority, and his book will assist the reader to arrive at impartial and accurate knowledge of the functions and achievements of the League.

"Geographic Disarmament: A Study of Regional Demilitarization," by James Handysidr Marshall-Cornwall. This volume, published under the auspices of the Royal Institute of International Affairs, is a pioneer study of the history and practice of demilitarization. The author considers particularly the working of the demilitarization clauses of the peace treaties and the conditions for success in the future application of the system. He rates it highly as a method of preventing conflict. The author describes his title as the name for a device which shall aim at the restriction or prohibition of armaments and armed forces in certain definite territorial areas. He points out that of all methods discussed this has received least attention and holds out best chances of at least partial success. In this volume the author has given an important contribution to the problem of disarmament.

"Zaharoff: the Armaments King," by Robert Neumann. The author, a distinguished German novelist, has written a serious and highly important study of one of the strangest figures of the century—Sir Basil Zaharoff, who has been associated with armaments for the greater part of his life, and is undoubtedly a master in that domain. Because he is a novelist Mr. Neumann has cast his book into something of the form of a detective novel. He has managed to arrange the dubious pattern of Zaharoff's life into what will probably be shown to be its accurate form, while the information he has gathered about armaments is worth serious attention. The review on the jacket of the books says: "This book concerns the world—if the world is concerned to see how nations and their apparent rulers are pawns in the bloody gamble over which kings and financiers preside."

BY MARION ISABEL ANGUS

"The American Flaggs" (Doubleday, Doran), by Kathleen Norris. Mrs. Norris is a prime favorite with many readers, and her latest book will not disappoint them for it combines the sincerity, simplicity and romanticism that make this author a books-as-popular. There is a soundness of Mrs. Norris' philosophy of life that almost restores one's faith in the essential fineness of human nature and her pictures of family life have much to commend them in these hectic days when family life seems almost to be passing from the scheme of things.

One does not, however expect much originality from Mrs. Norris—her charm lies in other directions—so the story of "The American Flaggs" proceeds upon conventional lines with a Cinderella theme. Penelope Fitzpercy young, golden—innately fine but almost downed by circumstance—is a delightful heroine. Her entrance into the Flagg family was sheer accident in the first place, and her permanent role as a member was against the wishes of the older members of the clan.

The Flaggs were an old American family, more closely bound by family ties and traditions than the average family, united as a pioneer family, yet individual enough to be interesting. Jeff Flagg fell violently in love with Penelope and wanted to marry her. Penelope, while longing for the security and comfort of life offered her as the wife of one of the Flaggs, felt her casual and Bohemian background would interfere with the smooth existence Jeff proposed to give her. In addition, she did not feel she loved him—and she was not sure that she did not love another lover, poor and Bohemian as her own family.

However, under strange circumstances, Penelope became the wife of Jeff, because he had been seriously hurt and was not expected to live. Penelope tried to adjust herself to the new life, which, as time went on, presented new problems that involved loyalties, love and honor, for Jeff did not die, and the bride had to contend not only with the contempt, almost dislike, of the Flagg family as a whole, but also with Jeff's unstability and the constant drain of her shiftless but lovable family.

Penelope's gradual triumph and entrance into the hearts of her in-laws and the position she found for her greatest temptation are told in Mrs. Norris' best style.

"Where Wild Gods Call" (Mills & Boon), by Nina Bradshaw. The setting of this story—Cornwall—is quite the best part of this book, for the characters at the beginning are not especially interesting, although as the story develops they also develop. However, the descriptions of the wild old gods of the elements rousing wind and sea, and of magnificent storms of rain and thunder hold one breathless and quite overshadow the human interest.

Pearl Studley was an orphan, more or less neglected by her elder sister, Celia, until the time when Pearl rebelled and insisted on coming to her sister's fashionable London home. Celia, a vain, once-pretty woman, resented the arrival of her lovely young sister, and more especially so since Alastair Harburn, her lover, seemed to fall under the spell of the newcomer's charm. Celia however, did not realize how far the attraction had gone, did not know of the secret meetings of Pearl and Alastair, and when she did learn of these things she was furious.

Her carefully guarded secret liason was revealed to Pearl, who was horror-struck at her sister's duplicity. Pearl ran away to Cornwall to find her old nurse and discovered a stranger at Yeo's cottage and her nurse dead. The owner, Julian Langdale, formerly a doctor, was somewhat of a woman-hater, but he took Pearl in—he could do little else, for a storm was raging—and nursed her through a bout of double pneumonia. Pearl had told him a story that aroused his dormant chivalry and he put up with Pearl's selfishness and laziness for weeks. Eventually Pearl's presence in his house caused comment, and Julian married her.

Pearl had much to learn and much to suffer (for both Alastair and Celia entered her life again) before the young, selfish and pleasure-loving girl changed into a woman of worth and sympathy who was capable of true love.

"The Chariot of Love" (Mills & Boon), by Elizabeth Phillips. Marriage was by no means what Hilary anticipated when she gave up a brilliant career to marry handsome, unstable Lewis Wilding. The promises he held forth at marriage did not materialize, and in desperation Hilary finally took a hand in affairs and put through a deal which meant a great deal to Denis. However, Denis, already more than half in love with the famous film actress, Katinka Volna, did not appreciate the fact that Hilary had secured his job for him, so he resigned and with Katinka's influence, got a part in the films.

He was a success and Hollywood beckoned—and he went. Hilary knew then she had lost him, even if she had not had to compete with Katinka's predatoriness and subtle lure, for success went to Denis' head. Out of her sorrow she strove to adjust her life to a normal basis and was helped by the affection of her friends, Doris and John, and by the undisguised admiration of Jeremy Creed, an older, wealthy man, who had long been the despair of mothers with eligible daughters.

Hilary was not wholly successful, however, in her attempts to adjust herself to the loss of Denis, and she hesitated to accept the love Jeremy offered because she did not know if her affection for her husband was completely lost, and she was afraid of life. Fate, however, waited until Hilary was strong enough to stand the test, and brought Denis back to her. From then on her course lay clear, and the symbolism, "Chariot of Love," became a vital reality to her.

Woodland and Wave

By Robert Connell

GONZALES HILL had announced a low pressure area off the Queen Charlotte Islands and unsettled weather extending over the province. After a wet Friday, Saturday morning broke fine, but as we sped west ominous banks of cloud were coming up over the Sooke Hills. It was a beautiful September morning, with all the tints of the month developed. The green landscape of Summer was becoming mellowed. The maples were turning yellow and tan, and even the oaks were showing russet patches on their upper foliage. Herds of cows ruminated in the fields and across a golden stubble a ploughman and team were drawing dark furrows. Gardens were gay with dahlias and Michaelmas daisies, and reddening apples hung heavy in the orchards. The distant landscape had lost the hardness it has in fine Summer weather, and as if to accentuate the Autumnal development of red hues in the foreground, the forested hills were clad in a misty blue.

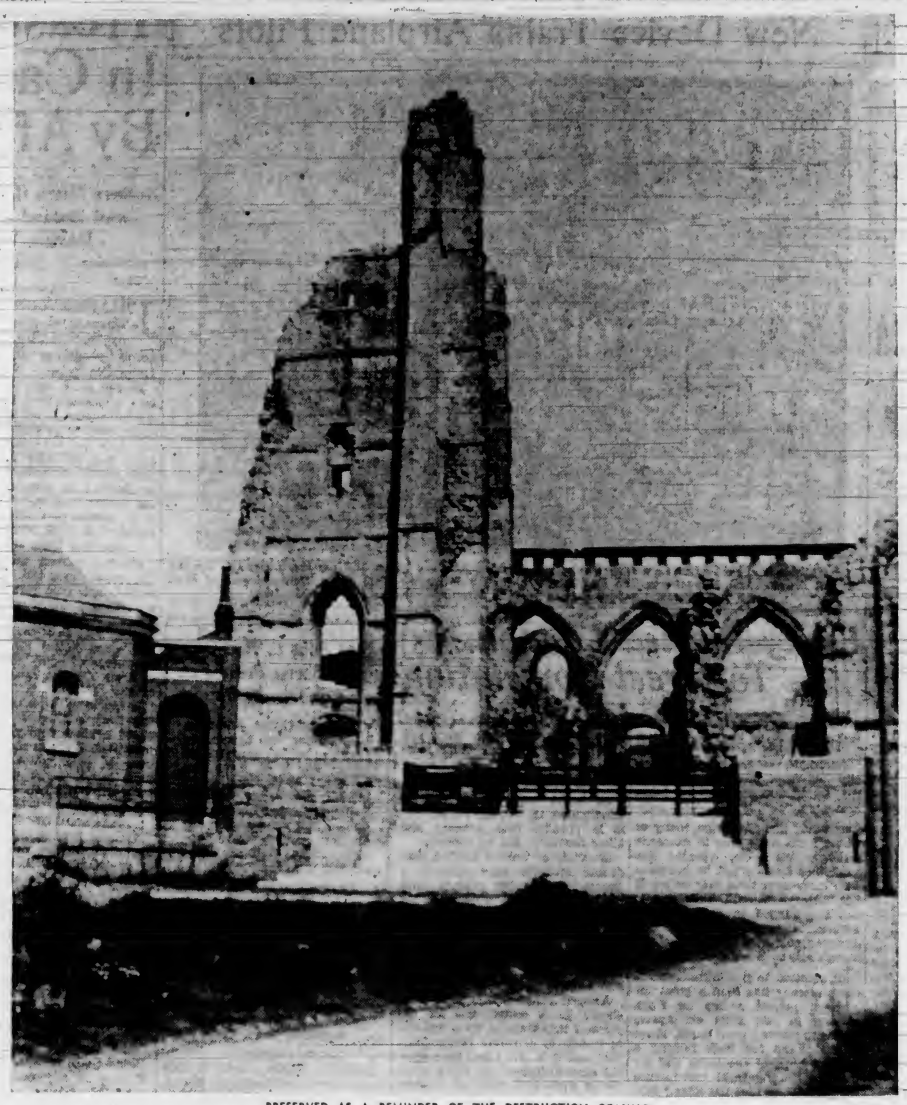

As we approached Sooke Basin, a soft rain fell for a short time, the precursor of showers that fell intermittently throughout the rest of the day. As we turned the corner at Sooke and came in sight of the great wall of rock that bounds the Sooke River valley, we saw the silvery mists sweep it, alternately concealing and revealing its gaunt sides. Gleams of sunshine lit up the patches of woodland by the roadside, the farmsteads with their green and russet fields, the thickets of salmonberry and the forests of bracken, its green broken by occasional splashes of yellow.

At Point No Point

AT Point No Point we stopped the car to watch the rollers breaking on its western side. In long parallel lines they come in, first seen as mere undulations of the calm surface, then rising swiftly until on the shore side a dark wall appears, then at the crest where the water thins the light comes through, a vivid emerald green with the quality of crystal shines out, and the great wave breaks into foam that rushes up the sands. Where as at the little islet it encounters the black basaltic rocks, the foaming water breaks against the obstacle and pours over the shining irregular surface to descend again in dozens of snowy cascades to the shore. Seen once, this would be remarkable enough, but seen again and again and again with a persistent irresistible regularity it becomes one of the most fascinating of spectacles, and all the more so because it is so obviously on a day like this not the effect of wind of which there is practically none. The sea then seems no longer an inanimate thing, but a living creature, moving by its own innate force rather than by an external compulsion. Ruskin has a fine passage about it in "Modern Painters," where he speaks of "that which is to all human minds the best emblem of unwearied unconquerable power, the wild, various, fantastic, tameless unity of the sea."

Waves Far Below

FURTHER on we stay to watch the waves far below us where the road runs just above the cliff's verge hidden by shrubbery. Here most noticeable is the great moving network of foam that outruns the breakers. Curved lines of white interlace, some moving forwards, others retreating, as they move along their separate yet related courses on the sand. At Sandstone Creek we look down on the twin streams that unite just above the bridge and are now clear floods overflowing the Summer channels in the rock. The one to the right can be seen where as Maidenhair Falls it tumbles over the shadowed wall of its hollowed recess. Then we drove on to Jordan River village, and attracted by the fine view of the sea, we draw off the road to where a little wooded corner meets the shingle beds at the river's mouth. A shower is falling, but it is not heavy enough to dim the view. The sea is a cold grey, or, rather, a silvery grey, darkening here and there. Beyond it rise the low irregular hills of the Washington coast descending towards Cape Flattery. The horizon of the open Pacific meets the clouds in the west. We are not the only spectators, for at a distance of a hundred yards or so a flock of gulls rests on the shingle at the river's edge. Here the spectacle of the breakers differs from that at Point No Point. The emerald clearness of the crest as it prepares to break is wanting. Instead of breaker behind breaker in single file, the waves are in companies, so that several walls of dark water are coming in at the same time. Some of them break only in parts, the rest of the wave subsiding without falling over in foam, a result of the irregularity of the bottom, which also accounts for the climax arriving in some before they reach the shore.

PRESERVED AS A REMINDER OF THE DESTRUCTION OF WAR

The Remains of a Church at Ablain St. Nazaire, Near Souchez, Was Never Rebuilt, but Preserved as a Monument to a Suffering Population, Harassed by Enemy Fire During the Great War. The Photograph Was Taken by a Member of the Old 54th, the Kootenay Battalion, on the Recent Pilgrimage to Vimy. While at Vimy the Officer Placed a Wreath on the Memorial in Memory of Old Comrades, on Behalf of Survivors of the Unit.

While thus less beautiful, the Jordan River breakers have a power of their own, a certain note of ruthlessness because here they are faced with no walls of rock to obstruct them, but hurl themselves on the low-lying unprotected shore. While we are watching, a tug comes up and lies to in the deeper water while a launch puts off from the river's mouth and runs out through the breakers to it. This touch of human activity adds greatly to the interest of the picture.

After the Rain

WE have another vision of the sea before we leave, when the rain having ceased we walk along the shore. The sun's light breaking through the distant clouds is reflected in a narrow line in the distance. The reflection seems to thicken a little in the centre so that it resembles a very slightly convex lens seen sideways tapering to a point at each end. This lens is of brilliantly glowing white light. Then again later the shadow rays are reflected in the sea as perpendicular shafts of alternate light and shade. Here we have the background of the Clallam Peninsula against the more easterly Olympics with curtains of rain-mist sweeping across and still further softening the delicate blue-grey of their masses.

The shingle where we walk has given way to a beach of boulders, wet and shining. Unlike some of the boulder beaches along this part of the coast, the constituents of this one are loosely collected together. Great wisps of yellowish brown seaweed mark where the last high tide reached, and are interesting not only as furnishing specimens of the local algae, but as hiding among their debris some of the less easily accessible forms of animal life in a fresh condition. The seaweeds are from the area just below low-tide mark. The principal one is known as Cymathere triplicata, a leathery thong. In the specimens here two or three feet long as a rule, for they are young plants, with three parallel round ridges running up the centre of the blade. Some of them are attached by their simple conical holdfast to small pebbles, others to the valves of shells. There are also some young specimens of Costaria costata, which has a finely branched holdfast and a broad frond or blade with five ridges and curious embossments covering the surface.

There are also masses of Desmarestia aculeata, resembling very coarse hair, but seen on examination to be profusely branched. Among these and others of the so-called brown seaweeds are scattered a few red seaweeds, the commonest and most plentiful being the beautiful Nitophyllum with a thin transparent old-rose-colored front, cut into forked divisions about three-quarters of an inch wide and frilled around the edge. There are clusters of Halosaccion glandiforme with tubular fronds like rubber finger-stalls closed at both ends containing water, which when a frond is squeezed comes out in tiny streams. The rough-surfaced broad-fronded dark red Gigartina exasperata and Laurencia pinnatifida, fern-like in form, but rather stiff in substance, also occur. The seaweed the Chinese gather for food, diligently collecting, drying and pressing it into bales, is here, too. Porphyra perforata by name. It is very rarely seen of the purple color its botanical name promises; rather it is of a silky blackish-green with just an occasional tinge of purple.

Wisps of Seaweed

AMONG the wisps of seaweed are many of the shells of Nuttall's saxidomus or butter-clam, which find themselves here because the larger brown seaweeds like Cymathere attach themselves by their holdfasts to the valves, so that shell and weed come ashore together. These empty shells make a suitable lodging-place for some of the colonial forms of animal life, particularly the Bryozoa or moss-animals, as they are sometimes popularly called. Their circular encrustations often completely cover the inside of a valve, the dead parts having a pretty silvery appearance, while those colonies that still retain the bodies of their builders have a reddish or pinkish color. These encrusting Bryozoans have nothing about them to suggest moss, but there is one species occasionally found in a shell which grows half an inch or more high with delicate branching and which might be taken for a lichen. One species found in the shells is much more frequently noticeable on the fronds of seaweeds, where it not only forms circular patches, but covers large areas on both sides. This species has been given an English name in Britain, where it is as common as here, the Shagreen Sea-mat and the appearance has been well described as "a web of silvery lace."

An extraordinary number of microscopic individuals make up these gauze-like sheets, so that a singe square inch on one side averages about 2,400 inhabitants, or 4,800 for both sides, while a square yard averages over three millions on one side alone or six for both. Each creature has its distinct and independent life, though all are connected by a common bond of life and their colonies have been compared to a "necklace where the beads are strung together by a common thread." On the other hand, there are on the seaweeds other animals of a microscopic character whose colonies the same authority has compared to a "chain of which all the links are welded." Perhaps the difference may be stated thus: while the bryozoa eat and digest separately, the colonial animals we are now speaking of, known as Hydroids, are composed of one body with many mouths. As they generally grow taller and are more plant-like, they are more conspicuous than the bryozoa. Some are very pretty; for example, the Ostrich-plume hydroid, often found washed up on the shore, which grows to a height of five or six inches and is so gracefully formed that it looks, just as its name suggests, like a group of miniature ostrich feathers of a greyish brown color. Sometimes there are to be seen on it rows of little pod-like structures called corbulae or "little baskets," which contain the egg cells. One of the commonest hydroids seen here at Jordan River in the seaweed heaps is the Sea-bristle, to give it its old-fashioned English name. It resembles a brownish bristle two or three inches long, but on holding it against the light you can see the tiny branches on which again are the cup-like receptacles that hold the polypites or animals. There is a story told by Dr. Landsborough, one of the noted students of the hydroids, that when dredging for them off the coast of Arran the boatmen could make nothing of his interest in such things, but when he plunged a specimen of the Jointed Sea-bristle into some clear water and they saw it expand in all its beauty they cried out, "We did not think there was anything so bonny in the whole bay."

Trees and Shrubs

AMONG the trees and shrubbery of the point the birds are busy. Once we were only a few feet from a pair of chestnut-backed chickadees, and, still more delightful, a ruby-crowned ringlet. The chickadee is so cheerful a little soul, so unafraid and friendly to the wanderer in the woods, that it is good to know that Emerson wrote a poem about him under the title "The Titmouse." Here are a few lines:

> " . . . Piped a tiny voice hard by,
> Chic-chic-a-dee-dee! saucy note
> Out of sound heart and merry throat,
> As if it said, Good day, good sir!
> Fine afternoon, old passenger!"

We have two chickadees, or titmice, here the Oregon and the chestnut-backed, and two kinglets, the ruby-crowned and the gold-crowned, and one of the pleasant things of the woods is to see how these birds companion together, though they can be fierce enough individually in their Summer quarrels.

From the river we proceeded along the West Road to the end of its main part beyond MacVicar Creek. It was a delightful drive. The sun had come out for a little, and the wayside vegetation glowed in its brief light. The fireweed even at so late a date here and there bore a crown of rose-purple flowers, while the long seed-pods were bright red, and where they had already burst clots of white silk shone gaily through their moist predicament. The red huckleberry bushes had lost their green and put on a sober dress of a pale purplish hue, among which their bright red berries, large as befitted their West Coast home, shone like showers of coral beads. Soon we came to the succession of mountain torrents and their bridges, from which we looked down upon the cliffs and tumbled rocks and the living cascades of maidenhair, now bronzing with the season's change.

Then there were the six-inch high forests of baby hemlocks, vividly green and looking like some coarse variety of moss, and the less frequent infants of the spruce and cedar tribes. Sword-ferns in huge clusters touching one another covered some hillsides. Other slopes, less steep and moister if that were possible, were as much given up to deer-fern, beautiful tall plants, the slender fertile fronds erect within the fringe of broader sterile ones. Lady-fern had its favorite stands, too, where it sent up fronds a woman's height, and once we passed a dense growth of low horsetails whose color looked almost blue in the presence of such lively greens.

Beauty in Forest

ON a day like this the great forest is seen clad in a special beauty. The mist comes floating in among the towering trunks, so ethereal in its texture that it is scarcely seen at any one place before it is gone. The only sounds are those of the streams deep in their rocky chasms and of the soft voices of the chickadee troops high up in the tree-tops. The sky seen between the walls of forest on each side is like a broader highway reversed, where earthly traffic rules do not hold and the chariots of cloud and mist move swiftly and confusedly onwards. So much moisture is there, dripping from the trees, lying like encrusting jewels on leaves, saturating the soil, filling the air with the forest's perfume, so slowly falling like finest drops of silver against the dark background as to resemble Shakespeare's "dew from heaven," more than the most refined rain; so much moisture that every bank and slope bared in the construction of the road is already bright with young plants of the tenderest green. Not only the young trees in their early infancy, but ferns of all the kinds already mentioned, with polypodies to fill up the measure are in every stage of growth from the first frondlets issuing from the prothallium. They cling to the warm tinted soil, they deck the decaying stumps, they ride in the crevices of the sandstones among the vestiges of extinct sea creatures. And what shall one say of the mosses? In the decaying end of a fallen tree we find a hollow no larger than two hands laid side by side. Yet in this restricted space are to be seen by the unassisted eye seven species of mosses and two of leafy liverworts. Apart from its botanical interest, this little hollow is its very tininess making it "meet haunt for fairy bright or fay." And on many a bank the moss makes a covering greener than any turf.

> "An emerald spot

Down below us at the last bridge which crosses an unnamed stream we see the water descending its rocky channel. In its life it has marked the basalt floor with excavations, one a small but perfectly rounded pot-hole. The walls of dark rock rise on each side, the left-hand one showing a breccia of large angular pieces in a lighter matrix. Above rests upon it the conglomerates of the Sooke formation, ranging from pebbly sandstones to coarse bouldery deposits. Through the trees we get at times a glimpse of the sea. In sunny intervals minute midges appear.

On our way back we stop once to see again the waves break on the shore. It is a more fascinating sight than ever. The sea is below us and the shore hidden. As each roller comes in the wall of water reflects first a piece of sky so that it looks like a curtain of blue silk; then scarcely have we seen this when the blue is replaced by a silvery light. Then comes the breaking crest and the long line of foam running away to right and left. Across the Straits the sun is shining on the hills at the entrance of Elwha Valley and bringing out of their shadowed seclusion the cliffs along the shore.

efforts to serve his fellow citizens, was the next chief magistrate. He is now a resident of California.

Returns to Office

THE present incumbent, Mayor Wymond W. Walkem, next took office for the first time. He served several terms, and retired only to re-enter the mayoral office two years ago, when things looked very black indeed. A native son of British Columbia, and a member of a family that has played a major part in the public affairs of the province, his keen financial judgment and leadership have largely contributed to the new position in which the city finds itself.

Sam Jones took office in 1924, and well maintained the high standard set by previous Mayors in the conduct of civic affairs.

George E. Reid succeeded Mayor Jones and he, too, contributed greatly to maintaining the "Ladysmith tradition" of wise and economical government. He died last week greatly lamented.

Joseph Mason was Mayor in succession to Mayor Reid. It was during his regime that the mainstay of the community was taken from it, and the mines were abandoned. Mayor Mason fought gallantly against what looked like a hopeless condition, refusing to admit defeat. His part was indeed a worthy one.

Two years ago Mayor Walkem returned to office. Night and day he has worked to rehabilitate the community under handicaps that would have been bad enough even in prosperous times, but which were made worse by the depression of the past few years.

If Ladysmith was unfortunate in other things, it has been singularly happy in the character of its civic leaders during the past thirty-two years. Equally well has the city been served by its aldermen, too numerous to mention within the limits of this article, but all entitled to the thanks of those whom they served so ably and well.

Early Financing

FOR the first four years the community financed its advancement out of revenue. But by 1908 the growth of the town had been such and the future appeared so assured that public needs demanded improvements. Many on the streets were uncleared, and roads wound in and out among the stumps. Homes and places of business were lighted by oil lamps, and at night citizens threaded their way along the streets by the light of lanterns or flaming pit lamps. There was promise of further industry—for those were the days when the pre-war boom was taking shape—and already a cigar factory and a new newspaper had been located in the town, and were regarded as but an evidence of things yet to come. So the council placed a by-law before the ratepayers for the borrowing of $25,000 for the installation of an electric light plant. It was carried by a large majority, and Ladysmith had started to accumulate its public debt.

Public health required the installation of a modernized sewerage system, and so $50,000 was borrowed for that purpose, and later another $10,000 was added to the amount.

Then, shortly before the war, $5,000 was borrowed to construct permanent sidewalks.

The little city—for the incorporated limits were small—boasted, during its most affluent times, of a population of roughly 2,500, but in later years only about 1,800. It was faced with the necessity of raising within the term of its debenture issues $223,989 to meet interest and sinking funds.

The dangers of coal mining are well known, and Ladysmith experienced in full the tragedy that so often marks the operation of that industry.

Before the town was incorporated a disastrous fire in the workings of Extension claimed a number of lives. Then in 1909, at a time when everything looked well for the city; when industry was active and ambitions were running high, came a tremendous explosion within the deep recesses of the Extension colliery, killing thirty-two men.

Apart from the personal loss—and, as was said and repeated at the time, had a selection of the best citizens been made it would have included all the victims—the effect was injurious to the community at large. It stopped progress for a time. It was a terrible blow.

Industrial Troubles

NOR was the community free from disastrous industrial difficulties. A strike in 1903, closed the mines for several months, but its effects were soon overcome, and no further disputes occurred until 1912, when the longest and most disastrous strike in the history of Vancouver Island took place. The Island coal towns have never fully recovered from that disagreement, for dependable and long-established markets were lost, and fuel oil gained a hold in industrial life of the province, which has continued.

Then, too, the other industries which added their mite to the larger payrolls of the coal industry withdrew or closed. The foundry, with its dozen employees, stopped; the big smelter that gave employment to 100 workmen shut down; the cigar factory moved away and the shingle mill ceased to operate. So Ladysmith was left dependent upon the Extension coal mines when operations were resumed following the strike.

As the years passed it became apparent to experienced miners that the days of this great industry were also numbered, and by 1928 this opinion was confirmed—the end was in sight.

Then came the world depression of 1929. Hope of inducing new enterprises to locate at Ladysmith were blasted.

When the full effects of the world collapse struck the country, Ladysmith was already in the grip of depression and unemployment was rife. To some extent, perhaps, the universal calamity saved the town, for measures created to serve the larger area were sufficient to prevent wholesale desertion, such as might have resulted had there been more general opportunities for employment elsewhere.

There was some exodus, but those who remained faced the issues calmly and courageously, and crystallized the spirit of the community into a definite community morale. Individually and municipally they adopted a "tight belt" policy. They were desperate days—desperate months — desperate years," but never once did Ladysmith think of repudiation of her obligations. Not even when the assistance that the Provincial Government had been extending was curtailed, and social service costs which the province initiated were charged up to the city, did Ladysmith attempt to break faith with those who had trusted them.

Policy of Economy

CIVIC expenditures, never large, were slashed; salaries, never large, were cut; the profits from the electric light plant, which ordinarily would be used for replacements and improvements, were directed towards maintaining the interest and sinking fund commitments. Appeal was made to property owners to pre-pay their taxes in full, if possible, and pay what they could in any event to prevent the growing accumulation of real estate reversions. Bank credit was exhausted, but Ladysmith refused to quit. Citizens nobly responded to the efforts of the Council, realizing that the city administration was not a body apart from themselves. They made personal sacrifices, and united sacrifices—and by their efforts, maintained the good name of the city.

With 1933 came the first relief, for in that year the bonds of the electric light plant were redeemed. The plant had done much to carry the civic burden, but in doing so it had been at the cost of systematic replacement and maintenance expenditures. It had helped win the fight, but the time had come when, like the bonds that it had supported, it required retirement. Opportunely negotiations were opened by the Nanaimo-Duncan Utilities, and Ladysmith's municipal power plant was closed and a contract was made with the private concern to supply bulk power to the city for distribution over the existing lines. In this the gallant citizens reaped the first small reward for their efforts, for it was found possible to reduce the power rates.

Steadily throughout the years Ladysmith used its sinking funds to redeem, where advantage could be secured, its own bonds, thus easing the load as much as possible.

As the years passed as the world depression continued, however, it became more and more difficult to find bondholders who were willing to surrender the debentures that they held, for Ladysmith had paid every dollar of interest upon the due date. Here were gilt-edge securities, and investors were reluctant to part with them. Gradually, however, the burden was reduced, and three months ago Ladysmith was in the position to retire the last of its indebtedness. It took two months to locate the last of the debentures. They were at last discovered as part of a trust estate, which held, in addition to Ladysmith bonds some of the most favored securities on the continent.

And yesterday, these particular debentures, with the others, were given to the flames in celebration of the passing of the community's bonded indebtedness.

Out of the Depths

WHAT has made this thing possible? It has been the faith and the character of the people of Ladysmith, who resolutely refused to admit defeat, and who maintained faith in themselves and their town.

Ladysmith has not recovered her old prosperity—she has not regained the affluent position of those happy years from her incorporation until the big explosion of 1909—but Ladysmith can contemplate the immediate future with greater satisfaction than for many years past, and Ladysmith has achieved a proud position among Canadian municipalities.

No longer a coal-mining centre, Ladysmith witnesses logs rolling down from the dark forests behind her, to be boomed in the quiet waters of her beautiful harbor. All honor to the Comox Logging Company which is giving local labor an opportunity in this new—for Ladysmith—industry, for too widespread has been the policy of hiring all woodsmen through a central agency on the Mainland.

The bright new flag was hoisted to the mast head yesterday to signalize the birth of a Ladysmith triumphant—and a Ladysmith reborn. It signifies more, for it is a symbol of an honest, courageous people, who have kept faith with themselves and with the world.

And what has Ladysmith to look forward to in the coming years. Just as coal—her first love—passed on and left her without industrial support, so, in time, must the forest stands approach depletion. But some years will pass ere, once again, a capital asset is completely gone, and in that period Ladysmith will have time to prepare against the inevitable.

No more advantageous site for a thriving city can be found. Located on a magnificent harbor, with an ideal climate, with the warmest salt-water bathing on the Coast north of California, with a soil that produces tree fruits of superlative quality, the city has all the requirements for the establishment of a community of permanent prosperity—and above all it is peopled with citizens who have been sorely tried and were not wanting.

Hail, Ladysmith triumphant—Ladysmith reborn!

Stocks Still Legal For the Detention Of Law Offenders

By GLANVILLE CAREW

LONDON (BUP).—I wonder how many English people know that, if they misbehave, they may, even today, find themselves locked up in the stocks, just as the slanderers and perjurers used to be in the bad old days? Yet, if other accommodation failed, or the supply of handcuffs ran short, a constable would be quite within his rights in using the stocks to detain a man.

At one time it used to be a common practice to remove a man's braces to prevent his running away, but today, when the belt is probably the most common form of support for trousers, the constable is provided with a problem.

LAW STILL STANDS

The pillory, as a means of punishment for cheats and libellers, was abandoned a century ago, following widespread agitation on the part of the public. The law relating to stocks, however, has never been repealed.

Needless to say, the stocks have not been used for many years, although several magistrates have expressed, at some time or other, a wish to put an offender in the stocks, only to be overruled by their colleagues.

The last victim of this form of imprisonment was a drunken Newbury rag-and-bone merchant who was put in the stocks as late as 1872. Lengthy imprisonment in Reading Gaol had failed to cure him, but four hours' treatment in the stocks proved to be a wonderful remedy.

Several hundred years ago, Parliament ordered every place in England to provide stocks, and if one failed to do so, it was reduced in status to a hamlet.

The victims of this form of punishment were numerous and were usually put in the stocks for offences which today are termed petty.

One pillory victim turned his punishment to good account. The footboard was rotten and he fell through it, almost strangling himself. He brought a successful action against the local authorities and was given damages for excessive punishment.

Although most pillories have long been taken down, some still remain, particularly in Cornwall and Scotland. In most cases, however, they are kept as relics in public houses, perhaps as a gentle reminder of the wisdom of saying "No" after the third round of drinks.

PUBS AND PAWNBROKER

While on the subject of "pubs," there is a public-house in Clerkenwell, London, which is probably unique in the world, for it is also a pawnbroker's shop.

It used to be quite a common thing, I was told by the owner of the Castle Inn, for the porters and workers at Smithfield Meat Market to call there and "pop" their overalls and tools with the publican.

The pawnbroker side of the business has not, however, been pursued for several years now, although the owner claims to have the right to do so "in perpetuity." The right apparently dates back to the time of King George IV.

According to history, the landlord will tell you, this monarch,—after having had a bad day at the cockfighting in Clerkenwell,—came to the "Castle" with some friends, but not one of them had sufficient money to pay for their drinks.

When King George handed his jeweled watch to the landlord to pay for the drinks, he was met with protests that mine host could not act as pawnbroker. The King then insisted on leaving the watch, saying that he would make it legal later.

The following morning a courtier arrived to pay for the drinks and brought with him a Royal Scroll which authorized the Castle Inn to be used as a pawnbroker's shop in perpetuity.

MARKING BANK NOTES

The action of a London shopkeeper, the other day, who refused to accept a £1 note because an inscription was written on the back, is certainly unusual.—He was, however, within his rights, as there is a little-known Act of Parliamnt which forbids the marking of bank notes.

Notes are renewed so frequently in England now that a note soiled in this way is a comparative rarity. The practice was nevertheless quite common a few years back.

Then many people were fond of writing on every note which passed through their hands such inscriptions as: "Heaven send you back to me," "Sorry to part," and "The last farewell."

I suppose that it was the novelty of the notes, when the change took place from gold during the war, which led people to write inscriptions on the back before parting with them. The chief cashier of a leading London bank still recalls with a smile the case of an absent-minded businessman who crossed a note before parting with it.

But while a soiled note is an increasingly rare thing in England, Irish notes, it is said, are kept in circulation until they fall to pieces. Those making a visit to Ireland for the first time often wonder what they have been given in exchange for something they regarded as real money!

POPULAR OFFICIALS

London 'bus conductors are rivaling the city's policemen for the title of London's most popular officials in the eyes of tourists.

Like the policemen, these men must in all seasons be in turn diplomats and men of action, linguists, timekeepers, coinage experts, and guides, philosophers and friends to overseas visitors.

Their task is particularly tiring during the Summer months, when they have the extra burden of harassed holiday makers, sightseers from the provinces, and strangers from every corner of the earth.

There is little doubt that these conductors go far to make the visitor at home in this seemingly complicated city. With the native wit and quickness of the Cockney—for most conductors are Londoners—they have learned to spot immediately the nationality of their fares, and have taken a pride of wishing them a "Good morning" in their native tongues. They are also adepts at explaining, if only by weird signs, that puzzling difference between a florin and a half-crown.

They have also developed into efficient guides, pointing out museums, art galleries, churches and other famous landmarks. I am told that some visitors have even consulted them about the most interesting plays to see, or the best seaside resorts to visit.

WOULD ABOLISH SCHOOL SYSTEM

British Educationalist Maintains Schools Dull Places And Are Wrong

CAPETOWN, South Africa (BUP).—Schools should be abolished because they are "dull places" and "all wrong," A. S. Neill, British educationalist, said on arrival here to begin a lecture tour for the South African National Union of Teachers.

"Schools are dull places with dull subjects that do not matter in life," Neill said. A Master of Arts is no more educated than a bricklayer. He is merely a man who has learned things, while a bricklayer is a man who has done things.

"If we have to retain schools—and parents will insist on it so as to get the children out of the way of house-cleaning and cooking—these schools should be places where things are done. All a child needs in the way of learning is to count up to twenty, to read, and to write a letter. The rest of his education should be in terms of planes and hammers, and clay and paint, and dancing and singing and acting."

Flying Is Cause Of Tooth Decay Dentists Claim

LONDON (BUP).—British dentists have discovered that flying is bad for the teeth. Airmen, they say, have the worst teeth of any class of workers.

Explaining the effect of low temperatures at high altitude on the teeth, E. D. Sutton, senior surgeon at a London dental hospital, said:

A small air-sac near the root of each tooth is vitally affected by low atmospheric conditions, and the result is that pressure is brought to bear on nerve-centres. In time, the roots of the teeth become affected and decay sets in."

The destructive influence of lactic acid, always more prevalent in the mouth at high altitudes strained nerves and constant vibration are other reasons why airmen suffer from bad teeth, Dr. Sutton declares.

WHEAT PRICES AID AUSTRALIA

Rise of Twenty-Five Cents A Bushel Helps Economic Recovery

Wheat entered the scene with a great jump of more than twenty-five cents a bushel just when it appeared that world events were about to force a slowing down in the rate of the country's recovery.

Although some experts of the wheat trade here believe that the rise is merely the result of sensational gambling on world markets, others believe that the rise is founded on a firmer basis and will carry Australia on again to the next economic crossroad.

Whatever opinion is right, a huge new fortune has come to Australia during the past few weeks. Overseas buyers have searched keenly for supplies to make up not only for the drought-stricken crops of the United States and Canada, but also the rain-affected crops of Europe.

CONDITIONS GOOD

Nature has been "Lady Bountiful" to Australia. While overseas countries have been either parched or drenched, the Australian wheat belts received just the right amount of rain both last season and so far this season. All over Australia at present the new crops are in beautiful growth, and require only a normal minimum of rain from now until November, when harvesting begins, for last season's harvest to be exceeded.

In Australia, the export season, which began last November, has been much more active than for the last few years, and after allowing for commitments to be met for the remainder of the season for both wheat and flour, and allowing for a normal carry-over on November 30 into the new season, the remaining exportable surplus is very moderate. Prospects for the new crop at present are excellent, particularly in New South Wales, where the new crop is quoted at a price which shows confidence that the higher values are expected to continue.

SPEED KING BUILDS BOMB-PROOF SHELTER

SURREY, Eng. (BUP).—Sir Malcolm Campbell, famous British racing motorist, is building a bomb-proof dugout eight feet below the surface of his estate here.

The dugout, when completed, will be large enough to accommodate thirty people. It will be equipped with a radio and a self-contained electrical lighting set. The roof will include a sheet of armour plate.

Sir Malcolm states that he is having the shelter constructed for the protection in the event of war, of the workmen on his estate and their families.

Gaily-Decked London To Greet Coronation

By JOAN LITTLEFIELD

(Copyright, 1936, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

LONDON.—London will be a city of flags and flowers when the Coronation celebrations begin next May.

The flag manufacturers, many of whose firms have been in existence for over 100 years, reported this week that London will be bedecked with more flags than ever before in her history. Britain, they say, is not flag-minded in the way that America, Germany and the Scandinavian countries are, but she will always rise to a big occasion.

In addition to public decorations, there already has been a great inrush of private orders for flags, varying in size from six square inches to twelve square yards. There is a demand for flags bearing a portrait head of the King, and for banners bearing loyal inscriptions, such as, "Long Live the King." One firm has had an inquiry from a large store for a banner a quarter of a mile in length.

Grey Wornum, an architect, is in charge of the Westminster decorations. He is being helped by his American wife, who is taking an active part in devising artistic "as for the Royal girls.

Gardening experts of the London County Council already have begun to prepare for the wealth of bloom that will greet visitors to London parks during the Coronation period. Special attention is being paid to lawns in the parks, and the planting of tons of grass seed will be followed by careful rolling and cutting.

More than $3,000 worth of bulbs will be planted. They include 92,400 narcissi, 46,700 crocuses, 5,500 hyacinths, 6,900 irises, 103,500 early tulips, 95,000 late tulips and 24,300 snowdrops and other varieties.

FLOODLIGHT PARKS

At night, some parks will be floodlighted in varying colors, and it is possible that dancing and other festivities will be allowed.

Members of various English gardening societies have initiated a Coronation planting scheme, with the general object of beautifying towns and villages permanently and not only for the Coronation year. It is hoped that local authorities will be persuaded to plant Coronation avenues leading into these towns and villages.

Another suggestion is that there should be a competition for the greatest improvement from ugliness to beauty by a village before May, 1937, and it is also hoped that derelict churchyards—there are a number of them in London alone—may be made into children's gardens and playgrounds.

Further, there are suggestions for a "token scheme" next year in London to be undertaken by all the gardening societies together. It is proposed that a rock garden should be built in a London park, or that a model open-air theatre should be constructed.

Meanwhile, practically all the big London hotels are already fully booked up for Coronation Week. An exception is the Savoy which is not making any reservations at the moment.

"We are waiting to see what official visitors we shall have," said an official of the hotel. "We already have a long list of applicants, however, and we shall give preference to our regular customers."

FUTURE AUTOS TO HAVE NO GEARING

Inventor Claims New Car Will Not Need Present-Day Mechanical Devices

SYDNEY, N.S.W. (BUP).—A car without gears, spark plugs, clutch or any of the mechanical devices usually found on modern vehicles, is claimed to have been invented by F. A. E. Jenkins, a Sydney engineer.

The car, on which the inventor has been working for four years, will be ready for testing at the end of the year.

Its motive power is compressed air, which is generated by a small crude-oil engine working a pump while the car is in progress. The air is then carried to four small air motors fitted inside each wheel.

The inventor claims that there will be fewer parts in the whole car than there are in the back axle of an ordinary car today. The new motor will also make it considerably lighter, he says.

World's Largest Silencer Built at English Factory

COVENTRY, Eng. (BUP).—The world's largest silencer is being built to subdue what will soon be one of the greatest noises in Great Britain—the new $2,500,000 Alvis Aero-Engine factory here.

The building in which the engines will be tested is being covered by a padded tunnel 100 feet long.

Radio Apparatus To Measure Brain

LONDON (BUP).—Science has at last found a way of measuring brain waves. A Cambridge scientist, Grey Walters, has recorded them on a simple electrical measuring appratus, using an ordinary radio set as an amplifier.

The experiment has proved that the thought process in the human brain produces electrical emanations powerful enough to be visibly recorded. It will now be possible to measure the relative intensity of thought processes in normal and abnormal persons.

CRAZE REACHES INDIA

BOMBAY (BUP).—The "chain letter" craze has finally reached India. The idea has been so successful that scores of companies, exclusively devoted to the promotion of this "business," have sprung up all over the country.

Son Sent to Bed By Stern Parent For Disobedience

LONDON (BUP).—William Balfour, 45, complained at Wigan Police Court that his father, who is 82, made him go to bed at 10 o'clock every night. The father, Edward Balfour, charged his son assaulted him when he rebuked him for coming home late one night. It was 11:15 p.m. The son was fined $10.

PLAGUE OF RATS STRIKES ISLAND

Tristan Da Cunha, Loneliest Outpost of British Empire, Is Suffering From Pests

LONDON (BUP).—Relief is soon to be brought to Tristan Da Cunha, loneliest outpost of the British Empire, which is reported to be suffering from a plague of rats.

Adrian Seligman, who is leaving this month on a world voyage in his barquentine Cap Pillar, is determined not to disappoint the inhabitants of the island, which is 1,500 miles southwest of Capetown, and rarely visited by a ship more than once a year.

The Cap Pillar will carry a large supply of rat poison and other equipment for dealing with this pest, which reports state is threatening to drive the islanders from their homes.

School Children To Receive Mugs

LONDON (BUP).—More than 5,000,000 school children in the British Empire will receive mugs on the occasion of King Edward's Coronation next year.

The mug has been designed by Dame Laura Knight, R.A. On it she has pictured the profile of the King with a representation of St. George and the dragon, an elephant as a symbol of the Indian Empire, and emblems of other countries.

The mugs will be sold at about 20 cents each.

LONDON (BUP).—Although the keel has not yet been laid, fifty staterooms have already been reserved for the maiden voyage of the Queen Mary's sister ship, No. 552.

The Sounds From the Instruments in the Hands of These Running Bandsmen Are Probably Not Very Musical as They Compete in This Unique Sports Event in London, England.

Treasures Hoarded In Caskets Sought By African Native

Believe Much Gold and Jewelry Hidden in Coffins and Buried Because of Distrust of Banks During Wars—Legend of Kruger's Millions Is Now Exploded

JOHANNESBURG (BUP).—The days when Transvaal farmers, distrustful of banks, kept their savings in coffins, are recalled by the discovery of a hoard of gold and silver coins by natives who were digging in the Caroline district near Lake Chrissie.

In the early days the Voortrekkers (pioneers) used to have their coffins made to measure in advance, and these coffins were usually kept in the attics. Farmers could find no safer place to hide their wealth than in false bottoms constructed in the coffins. Often the secret was not revealed, and it is believed that many hoards lie buried with their owners.

SAVING THE SAVINGS

Highway robbery was frequent in the early days, too, and farmers buried their gold rather than face a perilous journey to deposit it in a bank, even when they trusted the banks. Periods of peace were short, and when native risings occurred the menfolk had to leave and many of them did not reveal the secret of the hiding-place.

A digger at Vereeniging offered the local hospital a guarantee of $5,000 against damage if he were permitted to dig in the grounds for bars of gold which he believed were buried under the site of a concentration camp established in the Boer War.

LEGEND OF KRUGER

Native chiefs elsewhere who were slain in the colonial wars with the British and Portugese are reputed to have left much treasure, which has not been found. The legend that the late President Kruger buried "millions of pounds" before he fled to Holland has long been exploded, but here and there are people who still believe in it.

Then there is talk of the "elephant cemetery" where the elephants go to die. A vast quantity of ivory is supposed to have accrued there but no one knows where the "cemetery" is.

COMING OUT PARTY

JOHANNESBURG.—The "coming out party" of the eldest daughter of Sobhaza, the paramount chief of Swaziland, provided one of the most picturesque festivals South Africa has seen for years.

The celebrations, which lasted for three days, took place at the royal kraal and were of an unusual character as the time-honored custom of warriors taking precedence and the women keeping in the background was reversed.

The celebrations began at midday when all the girls bathed in the Usuta River, after which dancing and singing occupied the day until sunset. The party then retired to the precincts of the royal kraal for the feast.

BUYING SCRAP IRON

CAPETOWN.—Japan is continuing her purchases of scrap iron in South Africa, and one of the largest cargoes yet collected is being shipped for the East on the steamer Yeifuke Maru, from Capetown.

The steamer arrived here from the West Coast with 1,800 tons already on board. She is to load another 2,000 tons, and then proceed up the East Coast, picking up smaller amounts at each port.

The scrap loaded is mostly railway scrap iron, and it is estimated that when the vessel sails her full cargo will amount to 7,000 tons.

CAPT. EDEN IS STAGING COME-BACK

WINS VICTORY IN DIPLOMATIC FIELD

The dapper young Foreign Minister of Great Britain, after being under a cloud and having a breakdown in health, has started a "come-back."

That is the story behind the proposals put forward from the Three Power Conference in London between France, Belgium and Britain for a five-power conference taking in Germany and Italy to form a new Locarno agreement.

Mr. Eden, it is plain from the communique issued after the three-power talks, has won an initial victory by enforcing a more conciliatory attitude towards Germany upon the French. The communique was beautifully non-committal in accordance with the tenets of British diplomacy, and contained none of the pet French specifications such as reference to military guarantees.

REALIZED DANGER

So it is obvious that Mr. Eden was able to soft pedal the French, and that France has realized the danger of her position in Europe and at last is seeing reason after years of hysterical denunciation of Germany.

That is Mr. Eden's initial victory, but it is the easiest step.

Now all depends upon the response of the Italians and Germans. Even if they come to the table with Britain and France and Belgium, Mr. Eden must then obtain some large measure of agreement between the five powers, or with his reputation already tarnished by the Ethiopian affair, go down into obscurity as the bright young man who failed to live up to expectations.

And one of Mr. Eden's great worries is this. It is considered in Whitehall that despite all the dynamite in Europe, the Continent might potter along for 100 years without a disastrous war. On the other hand, efforts to settle present problems might easily remove the props which are holding up the old house of Europe. It is a gamble, and Mr. Eden is the gambler with millions of lives and civilization itself at stake.

A HOPEFUL SIGN

One hopeful sign has been given to the world by the revolution in Spain. It shows the terrible bitterness that exists between Spaniard and Spaniard, between neighbor and neighbor. And that is the factional bitterness which exists through most other countries. That is obviously the reason France was so nervous during the Ethiopian crisis. She did not dare mobilize and thus arm the inimical factions within her own borders, precipitating a civil war similar to that in Spain.

How far this bitterness extends to fascist countries like Germany and Italy cannot be determined, though there is known to be a strong Communist element working through underground channels in Germany at least.

So with so much bitterness between brother and brother there is not much to spare between nation and nation. That is the great hope of Europe and of the world—that may stave off war indefinitely though giving rise to a crop of civil wars.

60,000 Apply for Coronation Seats

LONDON (BUP).—More than 60,000 people have already applied for reservations along the processional route on Coronation Day. Ticket agencies have received offers from Americans of as much as $280 for a seat on any part of the route.
